Mr. Jodoin said the study commission should examine the constitution, the entire structure of the congress and the method of governing the organization.

It would make recommendations to the executive council which then would draft specific proposals for the 1968 convention.

His proposal is expected to run into opposition from some of the larger unions, notably the United Steelworkers of America, who have been pressing for changes in the constitution that would open the door to inter-union membership raiding on a basis of justification.

These unions are unwilling to accept a two-year delay on the question and likely will push for a decision at this week's convention.

Mr. Jodoin said the 10th anniversary of the congress, being marked this week, is a time to look back with pride on its achievements and plan for greater things ahead.

He called on the convention

Truckers Likely to End Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Preliminary agreement to end Ontario's three - month trucking strike was reached Saturday and 8,500 members of the independent Teamsters' Union will decide by government - supervised vote this week whether to accept the terms.

William H. Dickie, chief conciliation officer for the Ontario labor department, said the new proposals will be presented to the strikers for a vote by mail.

No details of the proposed settlement were released.

Two weeks ago the Teamsters' membership rejected by a -to-1 majority a settlement agreed on between union negotiators and the Motor Transport Industrial Relations Bureau, a bargaining agent for the 33 trucking companies involved.

Teamster President James Hoffa approved agreement and supervision of the vote at a meeting in Detroit with representatives of both sides. Actual supervision will be carried out by the Ontario labor department.

The contract rejected earlier offered truckers pay raises to $2.70 an hour from $2.50 and a reduction in the work week to 40 hours from 48. Toronto drivers now earn an average of $3 an hour.

The strike started Jan. 13 after union members walked off the job at two Toronto firms. The bureau's 55 companies closed down in retaliation Jan. 20.

British Warship Shelled In Territorial Waters

SINGAPORE (Reuters) — Indonesian shore - based guns shelled the Royal Navy patrol ship Puncheston while she was in Singapore territorial waters April 17, a Far East command spokesman said here today.

He said the shells all missed the ship. The Puncheston did not return the fire.

The spokesman said recent incidents in territorial waters suggested the Indonesians planned new provocations against Malaysian and British ships.

In addition to the Puncheston incident, Indonesians had fired on a Malaysian patrol boat in territorial waters the same day and on Indonesian gunboat pirated as outboard motor from a Malaysian fishing boat April 15, the spokesman said.

"All three incidents tend to show that Indonesian armed forces on the Rhio Islands have started a new phase of provocation of ships of the security forces," the spokesman said.

He described the firing on the Puncheston as a "most irresponsible and provocative action."

He said the guns, on Pulau Belakang Padang, about seven miles from Singapore, fired about 100 rounds at Puncheston over a three-minute period.

The shells fell about 800 yards from the ship, and about the same distance away from an unidentified merchant ship steaming in the opposite direction in the main channel of the Singapore Strait.

In the pirating incident, a naval patrol boat went to the rescue of the Malaysian fishing boat, but the Indonesian gunboat fled south into Indonesian waters.

JAKARTA (Reuters) — A newspaper run by the Indonesian Army today began a series of articles claiming that Mao Tse-tung directly plotted last October's attempted Communist coup here.

The daily Angkatan Bersenjata (Armed Forces) said the abortive plot was hatched by the chairman of the Chinese Communist party and D. N. Aidit, chairman of the Indonesian Communist organization.

Today's first article said captured Communist documents proved that Mao first suggested that President Sukarno be replaced during an eight - day visit to Peking by Aidit last year.

Mao is alleged to have told the Indonesian Communist leader that the new president of Indonesia should be a non - Communist and Aidit should be premier.

The newspaper said the captured documents recorded the following dialogue:

Mao: "You should act [illegible]."

Aidit: "I am afraid the army is going to be the obstacle."

Mao: "Aidit, I advise and assist all the reactionary generals in one blow. The army will be a headless dragon and follow you."

The newspaper articles claimed that China had agreed to arm 30,000 men for the communal takeover of Indonesia.

West Indies Test Shows Bats Blinded as Batman

WASHINGTON (AP) —New tests with blindfolded bats show they are by no means blind, a researcher reported today.

Indeed, Dr. Donald Griffin of the Rockefeller University indicated, at least bats on flight duty on the island of Trinidad, West Indies, show long-range visual power matching that of television's Batman when they're heading home from distant caves up to 60 miles away from the home of roost.

It looks as though the Trinidad bats can visually spot familiar landmarks — such as a mountain range — from a distance of about 20 miles, although they appear to use their well - known sound - echo "radars" later for negotiating the last few miles of the homestretch, he said.

He told about it in a report prepared for the spring meeting of the National Academy of Sciences.

R. C. Church Short of Priests, Nuns

TORONTO (CP)—Roman Catholics were told Sunday that the church is short of priests and nuns and that dropouts from seminaries are increasing.

The message was delivered to some 4,000 Roman Catholics here who attended services designated by the Pope as World Day of Prayer for Vocations.

Rev. Stephen Kenny, rector of St. Gabriel's monastery, said about five priests will be ordained in the Toronto diocese this year although at least 30 were needed, to keep up with an expanding Catholic population.

Reasons given for the lack of interest in the priesthood ranged from a more materialistic society to lack of encouragement from Catholic parents, many of whom prefer to see their sons become doctors or lawyers.

The assembly was told that the number of girls entering religious life dropped almost 50 per cent between 1960 and 1965.

◆ VANCOUVER (CP)—A panel of senior RCAF officers began sifting clues today to establish the cause of Saturday's fiery crash of a search and rescue aircraft which killed five airmen and seriously injured a sixth.

The Albatross amphibian slammed into a fog-shrouded mountain 10 miles east of Hope. The mountain, which has no name, is the same one which dropped a massive rockslide on the southern Trans - Canada Highway in January, 1965, killing four persons.

Killed in the crash were Flt.-Lt. Peter Semak, 41, pilot, and Flt.-Lt. Phillip Montgomery, 31, co-pilot, both formerly of Vancouver; FO Christopher J. Cormier, 30, of Medicine Hat, Alta., LAC Robert J. McNaughton, technician, and Sqdn. - Ldr. J. Braiden, of RCAF Station Trenton, Ont. and resident of Belleville.

All but Braiden were stationed at Comox, the search and rescue station on Vancouver Island.

BADLY BURNED

Severely burned and cut in the crash was FO Robert Reid, 26, of Surrey, B.C., who is in hospital in only fair condition.

Reid, burned and bleeding, stumbled from the crash scene to the highway, where he was taken to hospital by RCMP. He was later transferred to hospital here by helicopter.

Laimond Lee, 27, a C-I of Hope search and rescue said the plane apparently hit the top of a 3,000 - foot mountain and that the top of the tree is cut off."

Sqdn. Ldr. Braiden resided and lived at 546 Victoria Ave., Belleville. He was in his 33th year.

Born in Morse, Saskatchewan, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Braiden of Braiden, his wife, the former Ilona Mae Lawson, a son, Donald James Braiden, and three daughters, Barbara Lynn Braiden, Valerie Jean Braiden and Carol Ann Braiden.

Sqdn. Ldr. Braiden lived in Belleville the past four years. He was a member of the R.C.A.F for 13 years He joined the R.C.A.F. in April, 1953, in Victoria, B.C. His last posting was in Winnipeg and he received his wings there February 27-19, 1954. He served in Cyprus for six years with Squadrons 408 and 160 and served two and one-half years on an exchange tour with the R.A.F. at Topcliffeam Air Base, Wiltshire, England.

He moved to Trenton in August, 1962, and was promoted to Squadron Leader in June, 1963.

He will be resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home from tomorrow noon. The funeral announcement will appear later.

HEADS CHILDREN FUND

TORONTO (CP)—Clarine R. M. Wilson of Ottawa Saturday was elected president of the Canadian Save the Children Fund. Vice - presidents elected are: Scott Montgomery, Toronto; Mrs. S. H. Pearce, Owen Sound, Ont.; O. K. Schatz, Toronto; William Giffis, Montreal; Rev. W. G. Martin of Winnipeg.

Donald S. Redfern, P.Eng. of Toronto, president of the 23,000-member Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario, will address the annual meeting of the Quinte Chapter of the APEO at Belleville on Thursday, April 28. His topic will be "The Professional Engineer in the Community."

The reception-dinner meeting will commence at 6:30 p.m. at the Hotel Quinte. The chapter has a membership of about 175 professional engineers. Chapter Chairman is H. N. Britton, of Belleville. Civic officials and senior management from Belleville, Trenton and Picton are expected to attend.

Fire Losses Higher in '65 Report Shows

Slight increases in the number of fires and property fire losses were recorded in Ontario last year, according to the annual report for 1965 of Ontario Provincial Marshal Martin S. Hurst. A total of 23,387 fires were reported to the Fire Marshal's Office during 1965, compared to 22,290 in the previous year.

From a total of $48,930,025 in 1964, property loss rose in 1965 to $49,226,961. There were 218 fire fatalities in 1965, including 72 children, and 820 persons suffered injuries as a result of fire.

The report lists Belleville's fire loss for 1965 at $622,250, and that of Trenton at $247,082.

"Improvements in technique and equipment, developments in training methods and the search for safer design standards in construction continue substantially reduce the toll of lives and property which the ignorance of individuals can make their homes and businesses unsafe places to live and work," Mr. Hurst reported. "The task of educating the public in fire prevention must fall largely upon the public fire services of Ontario, and these services continue to respond vigorously to their obligation."

Convictions for criminal offences rose from 139 in 1964 to 188 in 1965, with 50 further cases awaiting disposal by the Courts at the year's end, Fire Marshal's Officers investigated 749 fires during the year, of which it was determined that 238 were of incendiary origin.

At the Ontario Police College at Gravenhurst, a division of the Fire Marshal's Office, training was provided for a total of 562 students. The College offers training to fire service officers.

WINS DRINKING BOUT

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Chan Yiu-ming was declared the fastest beer drinker in Hong Kong Sunday night. Chan, who downed 60 ounces in 39 seconds, was named the winner although Canadian professional wrestler Dave Larsen gulped the same quantity in 40 seconds. The judges placed Larsen third for spilling out the last few mouthfuls.

Thursday 25th — Making out the plan.

Note: The following account of the naming of Belleville is extracted from W. C. Mikel's Belleville History:

Dr. Canniff in his "Settlement of Upper Canada," writes: "The name of Meyer's Creek took place in 1816. The circumstances attending it were as follows: There met one evening at Mrs. Simpson's tavern, Captain McMichael, the two McDonells, Wambridge, D. Lazier, one and S. Nicholson. These gentlemen at the suggestion, it is said, of Captain McMichael, determined to invite Lieutenant - Governor Gore to name the newly surveyed town. The request was complied with by calling it after his wife Bella. A reference to this was find in the Kingston Gazette, August 26th, 1816, as follows: "The Lieutenant - Governor in Council has been pleased to give the new town, formerly known by the name of Meyer's creek on the River Moira, the name of "Belleville," by the request and petition of a great number of the inhabitants of that town and the Township of Thurlow."

In the issue of the 7th of September, The Gazette reprinted that it has been given the name of Belleville in honor of Lady Gore at the request of the inhabitants. Mr. Petrie, R.N., the authority of Mr. Petrie, who could not be ignorant of the fact that the town was named "Lady Bella Gore". It will be observed that the name was originally spelled Belleville, one word instead of Belleville, as at the present time.

It has also been suggested that the place was named after Col. William Bell. The fact that Bell was residing in early 1816 at Bellefontaine, Ohio, U.S.A., and that Gore's early residents were from Ohio, is the reason for the name but all agreed that the syllable "Bell" whether taken from Colonel Bell's name or from Arabella Bell or Bella Gore is the first syllable of the name.

to draw up a "charter for tomorrow" to point the way to a better future for Canada.

Hitting out at regionalism and separatism, Mr. Jodoin warned Ottawa it was "playing" with greater unity.

"I am not only referring to the separatism preached by a small group in Quebec. That is symbolic of this attitude, but unfortunately it also exists in some other parts of Canada.

SEES REGIONALISM

"At times there are even indications that this spirit of disunity, regionalism is showing its head in this national congress of ours."

The war was an apparent reference to demands from the Quebec Federation of Labor for greater autonomy, expected to be a major question at the convention.

Mr. Jodoin called for a united effort to wipe out ex parte injunctions in labor disputes. These were being increasingly used by employers to restrict legal picketing.

"This is an issue that is closely allied with that of free speech. After all, workers are taxpayers. They have the right to walk on their own sidewalks and express their opinions. Unfortunately the law often lags behind development of public opinion and we have seen recent evidence of this."

The CLC leader said union mergers are "a most desirable objective" and cited cases where the congress had helped bring them about. But they were often difficult to arrange without concessions from both sides.

Stephens-Adamson Takes Top Honors in Awards

Stephens-Adamson Manufacturing Company of Canada, Ltd., Belleville, has won two awards in an Eastern Ontario Value Analysis Contest conducted by the Purchasing Agents Association of Eastern Ontario. The local plant took top honors for entries in the categories "Forms and Paperwork" and "Materials and Design." A third category, "Processes" had no entries.

Judging the entries were Professor Carl Lawrence and Dean J. H. Brown, both of Queen's University, Kingston and F. R. Steffield, Northern Electric, Belleville.

Peter Stalker, purchasing agent, for Stephens-Adamson, devised the winning "Forms and Paperwork" entry. The top entry described a new method of inventory control giving positive and assured lowest cost inventory of stock items at all times. The system, when compared to a method of simply buying at the lowest price in a quantity price break shows a total cost saving of 2½% or $37,500 on annual purchases of $1,500,000.

The winning "Materials and Design" entry was planned by R. Hanna, machine shop foreman at Stephens-Adamson. The presentation of the entry was prepared by A. D. Jasinch, chief engineer of the manufacturing company.

The entry shows simplification and improvement in design of a heavy pan chain idler roller for a Manganese Steel Ore Feeder. Not only was the design improved considerably but the number of component parts was reduced to one quarter of that in the old design. The cost saving amount to $1,200 per feeder.

Would Leave Viet Nam if Trust Lacking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Richard Russell called today for a thorough survey of public opinion in South Viet Nam before and said if it shows the majority of them are anti-American "I think we should withdraw now."

He commended the Squadronettes for recently introducing a "first" in Canada in introducing water safety to grade 7 and 8 public school students.

Dr. Reginald Edwards Named Power Squadron Commander

Dr. Reginald Edwards is the new Commander of the Bay of Quinte Power Squadron which held its change of command and annual graduation ceremonies at the Yacht Club on Saturday evening. He succeeds retiring Commander George Hume.

Dr. Edwards, well known skipper of the Skylark, will have as his wardroom associates, Bill Willis, Lieutenant Commander, Mack McMurray as secretary, Frank Reid as treasurer and Carl Reid, Reg. Morry, Peter Burnett and Jack Devine as lieutenants. Fred Yealland will act as auditor.

Commander of the Squadron cites this year is Mrs. Lenore Yealland with other executive members being Mrs. Kaye Lack as Lieut. Commander, Mrs. Marjorie Smith, treasurer, Mrs. Irene Reed, secretary, Mrs. Kaye Smith public relations officer, and Mrs. Dorothy McCulloch in charge of trophies.

PRESENT CERTIFICATES

Yacht Club vice commodore Ernie Colbourne welcomed the Power Squadron members to their 13th annual graduation dinner and said he was gratified to see such continued enthusiastical support for safe boating.

Retiring Commander, George Hume, presented certificates of membership to six piloting graduates, Lee Lourard, Ev McLeod, Tom Whitaker, Frank Seymour, Dick Bird and Harold Howting. The graduates were sworn in by vice commander Robt. McCulloch.

A party of eight members were introduced by Squadron training officer Bill Willis as having recently passed their seamanship examination, all as honor students. Heading the list was CJBQ sports director Jack Devine with Peter Burnett, Doug Wilson, Don Grant, Fred Yealland, Milton Lack, Bob Lavarier and Bob Norris.

On behalf of the group Peter Burnett presented instructor Frank Reid with a ship's compass. The induction of the 1966 change of watch was conducted by District Commander G. McNea.

Vice Commander Robt. McCulloch, representing the Chief Commander of the Canada Power Squadron, spoke on the contribution made by the Bay of Quinte Squadron to boating in Canada. He reminded, however, that the Power Squadron had made history, history today was of small importance unless used to inspire greater things in the future.

Ottawa Editor Of Seven Days To Resign Post

OTTAWA (CP)—Roy Faibish, Ottawa editor of the CBC television program This Hour Has Seven Days said today in a statement he will resign his job when his contract expires at the end of May.

Mr. Faibish said it if clear that he was to be "impugned and punished" for his work with the Fowler committee on broadcasting and "I therefore find it intolerable to continue to be associated with a management of this kind."

Mr. Faibish took a five-month leave of absence from the Seven Days program in 1965 to study English-language television programming for the government - appointed committee headed by R. M. Fowler. The Fowler report was critical of CBC management.

Mr. Faibish said that dissatisfaction was expressed about his working for the committee only after CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet issued his criticism on the Fowler report.

Mr. Faibish said that on April 5 H. G. Walker, vice-president and general manager of the English network of the CBC, told the public affairs department that doubts had arisen about him because of his work for the Fowler committee and that "I should therefore be separated" from the Seven Days show.

Bomber Crew Holds Reunion In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—Six middle-aged men talked about the Victoria Virgin during the weekend, remembering how the battered Lancaster bomber carried them through the flak over Nazi Germany 25 years ago.

The six had their first reunion since 1945 at the home of Melville Isenberg, the bomber's pilot for 18 months. The crew flew 32 missions together during that time.

"They made us dress her up," said Mr. Isenberg. "We had a nightie painted on. But from a distance she still looked nude."

The reunion was prompted by Mr. Isenberg and Percy Maundrell, of Kelowna, B.C., his former wireless operator, who had kept in touch.

STAYS AWAY

Bombardier Angus Campbell Wood is also from Kelowna. George Cropp of Woodstock, the Lancaster's navigator, hasn't been in an airplane since he stepped from the Vicious Virgin's cockpit after the last raid in 1945.

The gunners, Edward Cowlin of Copetown, Ont., and Gordon Baxter of Dorval, Que., also came to Toronto for the reunion.

Their sharpest memory was of an emergency landing at Woodbridge, England, in 1944 when the Lancaster came in with a 2,000-pound bomb jammed in a half-open bomb bay hatch.

They tried to knock it loose while returning across the North Sea from a raid over Germany Mr. Isenberg brought the plane down safely and despite a heavy landing, the bomb did not explode.

City, Rural Mail Carrier, Featured in "Postmark"

The city of Belleville and a rural mail carrier at Foxboro, who has more than 40 years service to his credit, are given feature story prominence in the March issue of the "Postmark" monthly publication of the Canadian postal service.

The history of Belleville from its early beginnings to the present, along with pictures of the postoffice (past and present) the Entomological Research Insignts and the city's Front Street, are included in the four page spread in the Postmark.

The article includes a picture of former postmaster J. A. McManus, who recently left Belleville for another position with the department.

In his four decades as mail carrier Mr. Reid has used only three vehicles — a horse and buggy, a 1931 Model A Ford and when that eventually gave out — a vintage Chevrolet.

Bargaining Up for Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — With the budget debate over for another year the Commons gets down to another controversial topic today—collective bargaining for some 200,000 federal employees.

Debate today will be on a resolution proposing introduction of collective bargaining machinery into the public service. In its final form, the measure will include a grievance procedure and a system for settling serious disputes, likely to be compulsory arbitration.

RCMP Officer Pleads Guilty To Robbery

NEW GLASGOW, N.S. (CP) RCMP Cpl. Harry Sutherland, 32, pleaded guilty today to the $6,800 armed robbery last Monday of the Bank of Nova Scotia at nearby Trenton.

Sutherland was remanded in custody in the Pictou County jail in Pictou until Tuesday when he will be sentenced in Stellarton where he was originally charged Friday.

About 75 people crowded into the small courtroom and others stood in the hall and on the street when Sgt. D. S. Moody and constable Al Fox of the New Glasgow RCMP detachment escorted Sutherland into court. He was not handcuffed.

Sutherland, with the RCMP for 10 years and stationed with the Nova Scotia "H" division in Halifax, spoke briefly to his lawyer Omer Mackay of New Glasgow before pleading guilty before Magistrate W. A. Richardson.

Most of the money, stolen by a lone gunman who held five bank employees at gunpoint, was recovered by RCMP Friday. They found it in the trunk of a car parked on an auto sales lot.

Sutherland is a native of Plaster Rock, N.B., and married. He was stationed in Stewiacke N.S., and here before being transferred to Halifax five years ago. He was on the headquarters administration staff in Halifax.

How come more people have said "yes" to us than to any other life insurance company in Canada?

Not everybody says "yes" to Metropolitan, of course. Take the little boy, for instance, who was down on us because we wouldn't insure his dog Prince.

But still, a lot of Canadians—3,850,000 in all—like the treatment they get from us. And it's not hard to figure out why.

You get helpful ideas when you deal with a Metropolitan representative—fresh ideas about what life insurance can do for you and your family.

Like how your Metropolitan insurance could be made to pay you 20% more actual cash—depending on the way you arrange to have the payments taken. Or how we take the strain off your wallet by putting your dividends to work buying extra insurance for you.

Another thing your Metropolitan adviser will do is give you a Family Security Check-Up. Free. Just call up and ask. There's no obligation . . . except to those you love.

Millions choose Metropolitan Life —more in Canada than any other company

Meeting the People

Ontario Liberal leader Andrew Thompson may have a point when he says the current trend of mass picketing and demonstrations in the province is an indication of "a disinterested government."

He thinks the remedy is for Premier Robarts and his cabinet to "get out and learn the aspirations of the people."

Certainly there is a tendency for government, particularly one that has been in power for a considerable time, to sit there in its ivory tower, immersed in red tape and paper work and lose practically all touch with the public at large.

Periodic addresses at public gatherings or visits to constituents by individual members help break down the gap between government and people, but these are really no substitute for real honest-to-goodness mingling with the voters.

Just about the only time members of the legislature and department heads get to see the people and hear their grievances is during election time.

Mr. Thompson, in an interview before he addressed a recent Central Ontario Women's Liberal Association workshop, said he had never seen "such a winter" for picketing at Queen's Park.

"They obviously came in sincerity . . . in the sincere conviction the government should do something."

The Liberal leader said he deplored the situation in a democracy where government doors were closed when they should be open "and people resort to picketing to get an airing of their grievances."

Mr. Thompson is on firm ground here. There is a need for closer ties between government and people on matters of public urgency. There is a need for government to take greater interest in matters concerning individual citizens and groups.

Perhaps, what Mr. Thompson has in mind is the practice in Newfoundland (or is it Prince Edward Island?) where every so often the premier and members of his cabinet drive into the country for a friendly chat with people on their own home ground. What better way than this to get acquainted with people's needs?

Moral Breakdown

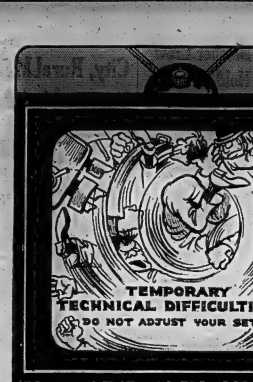
A breakdown in moral authority in society, accompanied by a growing sense of isolationism in the lives of many people are disturbing trends in this age.

The ingredients of such a breakdown are not always readily apparent, yet they work subtly against the best interests of society. It has been said the problems of the world are the problems of the spirit, so that apathy, a could-not-care-less attitude, indifference, lack of parental interest in children, lack of love and of communication between them may be regarded as some of the symptoms.

Television has been with us a long time, and is it not true to say many youth are too dependent on it that without it they would be lost. That being so, is the overall standard of programming such as to contribute to the mental and spiritual well-being of families today?

Columnist Sydney J. Harris observed in this newspaper recently that it was hard for him to see how a public that relishes what he termed "such idiotic entertainment" could intelligently evaluate the country's foreign policy, domestic program, urban needs, physical deficiencies and educational lacks.

He was referring primarily to the American scene, but the same applies here. "It is not that we are any stupider or more ignorant than past generations," noted Harris. It is that the times demand so much more of us . . . If we do not live up to them," he said, "we shall die up to them, sitting around, half-stunned, watching a "Hooligan's Navy."



Similar thoughts were expressed to a Belleville audience the other day. J. Albany Richard, High Court Justice, and a provincial assembly of Foresters that the erosion of moral authority in our society "is widespread and alarming."

"If you don't have moral authority, then the other authorities are no good at all," he said.

"Linked with that is a second problem, the illusion that the isolated person can exist in a vacuum all by himself."

He said that isolation seems to be a fashion today, even on the dance floor. "You don't dance with a partner any more, you go off by yourself and do the Watusi."

Isolation Richard may be more "with it" than he knows. His analogy was a good one. John Donne said of old that no man is an island, but the 20th century is making him increasingly just that. Technology on the one hand is bringing the world closer together, bringing nations ever closer, but on the other hand it is pushing mankind itself further apart, into alien fields, making of the human race a sort of split personality that is destroying its very humanity.

Can Give Blood Once Mild Anemia Cure

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been rejected twice by the Red Cross for blood donations because of low iron. My doctor said there is nothing to worry about, but now I am not sure whether I should give blood any more, even if I pass the iron test. — R. G.

* * *

Your low iron (anemia) evidently is mild. If it returns to normal there's no reason why you shouldn't give blood again. Blood banks have a minimum level of iron content that is acceptable. Your mild anemia may not be serious, and probably can be corrected by treatment.

More than 4,500,000 transfusions a year are given in the U.S. We need a lot of blood, and it can only come from people who are willing to be donors.

Blood type of the donor does not matter. Before the blood is used, it will be cross-matched to be sure it suits the recipient. There will be many donors giving the common blood types and few giving rare types. Thus it all averages out.

Blood is blood — a person's color, nationality or sex makes no difference. Traits cannot be transferred by blood. They are only transferred by genes in the germ cells involved in conception (sperm and egg).

However, blood donations should always be from healthy people, and there are rules governing this, both for the benefit of those who receive the blood and those who give it.

* * *

Frequency: You can give a pint every eight weeks, but not more than five times in any year.

Age: Over 17 and under 50 (those from 18 to 21 need parents' consent).

Tests: Temperature, pulse, blood pressure and hemoglobin (to guard against anemia) must be within normal range.

Those excluded: Persons who have had malaria, syphilis, jaundice from any cause, coronary attacks or heart disease, tuberculosis, a history of convulsions or diabetes.

Temporary exclusion: Those who have active colds, active allergy, active or chronic skin disorders, drug addiction, unstable fever, have had surgery within six months, a dental extraction, more recently than three weeks, have received blood within six months, are pregnant or have been within the last year, have any blood relatives who have had infectious mononucleosis within the last year, or have had any food within the last four hours.

Safety exclusions: People driving commercial vehicles, airplane pilots, electrical workers, and those in similar occupations are rejected as a safeguard against some serious accident if they should have a temporary giddy or, fainting spell after giving blood.

There may be minor departures from some of these restrictions, but the requirements are sound and for the good of donors and recipients of blood.

The need for blood is great. Many hospitals as well as the Red Cross accept and store blood, but in one typically important hospital, only about one quarter of the amount needed is donated. The rest has to be purchased.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes tumors of the womb, and why must the womb be removed even though a woman has douched often? — Mrs. A. H.

We do not know what causes tumors, or abnormal growth in some part of the body. Douching has nothing to do with it.

April 25, 1906 . . .

Lord Elgin gave royal assent to the Rebellion Losses Bill 117 years ago today—in 1849 — and Montreal, then the capital of Canada, was overwhelmed by rioting and arson the same night. The bill was designed to reimburse innocent parties for damage suffered during the rebellion of 1837 but the Governor-general's office and firmness helped to establish the principle of Canadian democracy, and the rioting sealed the doom of the Tory "family compact."

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1916 — German cruiser squadrons shelled Yarmouth and Lowestoft, on the English east coast; martial law was proclaimed in Dublin, where rebels had occupied the city.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1941 — the United States extended naval patrols in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans; British troops were evacuating Greece from beaches in the south; Tobruk took 130 prisoners in beating off a German attack.

Living by The Rules

St. Catharines Standard

The need today, in this age of revolt, is that we live up to the spirit of the laws enacted for our guidance. If we find they are outmoded, then we should attempt, through lawful means, to have them changed, remembering the wisdom of Aristotle who said laws ought not always remain unaltered. Down through the ages learned men have urged their people to abide by the law for the general welfare, a need which should often be stressed.

Focus on Curbing Suicide

Peterborough Examiner

Metropolitan Toronto's Coroner, Dr. Morton Shulman has made public the superficially startling figure that the number of deaths by suicide in Toronto exceeded that of traffic deaths in 1965. There were 504 deaths by suicides compared to 153 road deaths. He says that his office is holding inquests into all suicide deaths where there are indications that it can be prevented.

Suicide is a phenomenon that does not get enough public attention or certainly not as much as is expended on traffic deaths. National statistics on suicide vary considerably. Canada in 1961, with 7.6 deaths per 100,000 population, was relatively low on the scale — and are none too reliable due to varying degrees of thoroughness in reporting and to social pressures which encourage concealment. But it is probably a more widespread matter than many would think and, more importantly, it has been estimated that the number of attempted suicides are between six and eight times the number of actual cases.

Very little is done in most countries about suicide prevention. Such organizations and telephone answering services as exist can only reach a small proportion of the cases. Professor Irwin Stengel, a psychiatric expert on the subject, has suggested that the only real hope of effective prevention lies in revolutionary changes in social living and new social responsibilities. He refers to extension of the therapeutic community, which is now practised in mental hospitals and general hospital. This undoubtedly seems a long way off, but the problem will become more urgent as people live longer (for the incidence is higher in old people) and working hours decrease.

Curbing Hate Literature

Windsor Star

Canadians generally are decent-minded people who despise purveyors of hate literature. It is for this reason such stuff has a very limited appeal. Much of it is so nasty and unreasonable that it defeats its own purposes.

Yet such literature cannot be ignored. It is a sore on society which can fester if allowed to do so. It is a disease of history that hate breeds hate.

A special committee has reported to Parliament on what might be done to curb such vile literature. Its recommendations seem sound, imposing appropriate amendments to the Criminal Code. They are all the more sound because the report warns against going too far, so that the cure would be worse than the disease.

It is a sensitive area for legislators. They must guard against laxity which, even if unintentional, would interfere with freedom of speech. Yet, in essence, freedom of speech is the greatest guarantee of a decent society, even if there are some who would use it for ulterior ends.

It also would be unwise to restrict healthy hate. There are things and groups which should be hated. There is nothing wrong, for instance, in hating Nazism, Fascism, communism — or what these represent. There is nothing wrong with hating indiscrimination as to other social evils. There is nothing wrong with hating hate groups.

That is why any amendments to the Criminal Code must be very carefully considered. Otherwise they could be used as curbs against quite justifiable expressions of dislike. That would create new problems while trying to correct existing ones.

People Are Poor Listeners

Stratford Beacon-Herald

It has long been suspected that the reason nature provided people with two ears was so that what went in one could readily find its way out to the other. Now there are statistics to back up this supposition.

According to Mr. C. Howard Watts, a consultant in management-employee relations: "Institutional listeners hear only about 25 per cent of what they're trying to."

In other words, we retain about every fourth sentence or every fourth thought that impinges on the ear. This would seem to suggest that the human medium contains some sort of matter acting as an impediment to the transmission of sound across the void.

One might expect college students to possess a greater amount of this sound-absorbing substance than the general population. However, Watts cites a study which showed that college students listened to a 10-minute talk with only 25 per cent efficiency, the same as the rest of us.

Watts also says that the average person can read or speak only one-fifth of his time writing, 16 per cent reading, 30 per cent talking and 35 per cent listening.

It's this average of listening time as against talking time that is intriguing. We've often used up our 45 per cent of listening time, but never yet have we met anyone who had run out of his 30 per cent talking time leaving us with 15 per cent of pure golden silence.

Obscenity Defies Definition

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The most recent Supreme Court decision on obscenity — in which the judges divided five against four — only further points up the utter impossibility of deciding what is "obscene" in any legal sense.

Not only does one generation disagree with another about what is "obscene," but within the same generation, different classes and groups of people will disagree about it. There may be some absolute standard, but no one has found it yet.

It might be useful here to compare the idea of "obscenity" with the legal concept of "fraud." In order to find a person in a court of law, it is first necessary to show "intent to defraud." In other words, a man did not intend to commit fraud, he may be guilty of something else, but he is not guilty of fraud.

In the same way, "obscenity" resides in the intent of the author. And how can one demonstrate the author's intent or act? The court has used as a yardstick "whether the material has a redeeming social value." But this is a foolish criterion: I might write a novel containing a few obscenities in order to put in 50 percent of "redeeming social value" simply to placate the authorities and satisfy the letter of the law.

"Intent" is a highly subjective matter, and does not easily lend itself to legal probings. I have seen, for instance, many novels which the average person would unhesitatingly call "obscene," yet in every case they sprang from an honest attempt to depict reality as the scenario saw it.

On the other hand, I have seen Hollywood movies which the average person would call "light sex comedies," yet in my view these have been more obscene than the boring films, for their whole intent seems to be to titillate the subject of sex in a coy and vulgar manner.

Who is right or wrong about this? There is no way to tell; it is a matter of taste, judgment, background, conditioning, and cultural atmosphere. It may be that obscenity does not reside in the mind of the beholder; or there may be an evolutionary morality, as Teilhard de Chardin put it, whose value depends on subjective feeling, common insight and the culture of the time."

Furthermore, I don't happen to like the word "obscenity" at all; it is as harmful as some people seem to think. The profound immorality of our times are cruelty, indifference, injustice, and the use of others as means rather than as ends in themselves. If everything decent, indecent or obscene, can be wiped out overnight, it would not make for a conspicuously healthier world, or for a more "moral" citizenry.

Con Artist Make a Mint

Stratford Beacon-Herald

P. T. Barnum was only half right when he said, "There's one born every minute." If it's true that each generation produces its quota of the gullible, it's just as certain that the birth rate of swindlers and cheats maintains a pretty constant level.

A recent survey conducted by the Better Business Bureau shows that American con artists are thriving today as never before. The BBB polled 114 local units, asking them to list the most common frauds and rackets in their communities.

No. 1 was "bait and switch," which is fantastically low-priced (and worthless) item is advertised as bait to lure the customer, who is then switched to buying a higher-priced product. The increased prevalence of this scheme, the survey found, is largely due to its use in selling freezer meats, sewing machines and vitalgs.

The rest of the top 10 rackets in order were: Home improvement swindles, chain refer r l sales plans, charity f r a u d s, phony credit certificates, business opportunity schemes, debt consolidation gouging, victimizing the aged, health mackery and earn-money-at-home gyps.

All of these rackets are not particular as old, time - tested themes, yet millions continue to fall for them — sometimes out of need, sometimes out of greed but always because of naive trust and failure to investigate, preferably through their local Chamber of Commerce or BBB, before handing over or signing over hard cash to smooth-talking strangers.

Roughnecks Need Lesson

Hamilton Spectator

The most harrowing story of the month concerns two Vancouver teenagers who beat up a storekeeper after telling him there was nothing he could do in the business they were under.

According to the victim, the kids said they "could hit me and nobody would do anything about it."

Fortunately, the Vancouver police took a severe view of the matter and arrested the two boys. If found guilty, they will no doubt receive the punishment they deserve.

What's harrowing about the story is the nervy of kids who believe they can get away with anything. They hear of other boys their age being let off with a warning, and what is the care of parents or guardians, or the probation officer, and they get the idea that if you're young enough you can do things an older person cannot. How many rough-neck youths are there on our streets today who think they can push decent citizens around with no fear of any punishment worse than a scolding?

"Vietniks" Out In Toronto

Letter to The Globe and Mail

There seems to be no respite from the activities of those so-called Vietniks. They were at it in Montreal and will be picketing the U.S. consulate-General and they dragged along some Red flags. They are appearing to have emanated from inferior and permissive home surroundings. The parents should be advertised as a "group of high school students." The speeches delivered were of the usual Hate America and Love the Viet Cong variety and the children listened in an indifferent manner.

Our social bureaus and educational institutions should be more active and prevent the exploitation of these youngsters by such characters and Communist agitators.

Worsening Food Shortages In Nigeria Worrying Regime

By KENNETH WHITING

LAGOS (AP) — Worsening food shortages in wide areas of southern Nigeria are worrying the country's military regime, which came into power three months ago.

Rising food prices and scarcities come at a time when the political euphoria which followed the January revolution is easing off. There also is political grumbling.

"The honeymoon is almost over and those nagging problems, which never really went away, are becoming more and more obvious," said one diplomat.

The military governor, Maj.-Gen. J. T. Aguiyi - Ironsi, banned exports of eight basic goods last week and announced steps were "being taken to bring rising food prices to normal and ensure that adequate supplies are available."

WON'T CONTROL PRICES

"It is a military axiom that you never give an order unless you are certain it will be obeyed," said one young official. "That is why controlled prices would not be effective and that is why they probably won't be established."

The shortages and inflated prices resulted from the political chaos late last year during harvest time, which drove many farmers from their plots. This is planting time in Nigeria and the new harvest begins in late October.

By banning exports and cracking down on speculators, the regime expects to be able to ease the shortages.

Shipments of cyprus, beans and manioc sent from Nigeria to Britain are marketed by specialty food shops for Negroes and West Indians as "tropical foodstuffs."

NO FAMINE DANGER

Forty-seven officials, including at least three cabinet ministers, are being held on corruption charges or are under house arrest pending investigations.

On the country's financial front, the military governor says Nigeria has saved about $7,750,000 ($2,250,000) by curtailing "political expenditures".

This included the salaries and expenses for ministers of the federal and four regional governments and the cost of operating these five parliaments.

Nigeria's tariff schedule has been overhauled to increase duties on foreign cars and such goods.

Cigarette thefts were arranged for matches, flour, cement, textiles and shoes.

WATCH 'BLUE' MOVIES

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Police raided a local cinema and found 1,000 men of the night shift watching pornographic movies in a workshop. Employees told reporters that movies at most get a good job so he can marry. "We live in an age when what is supposed to be an escapist hobby is to get arrested," added about, if one is to get ahead," he said.

'Moral Strike' Started by Quebec Police

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec Provincial Police regional headquarters here and in Montreal, its scattered district detachments, court houses and possibly the legislature were to be picketed today—by off-duty policemen.

Some 1,800 constables and NCOs today began a "moral strike" in an effort to force the province to accept the recently-formed Quebec Provincial Police Association as bargaining agent.

The men say they will refuse to cash their pay checks, will march on picket lines in off-duty hours and enlist signatures from the public for a petition to the government.

Eight Killed In Ontario Road Mishaps

At least 48 persons died in accidents across Canada during the weekend. The toll included 31 traffic deaths and five RCAF airmen killed when a plane crashed into a mountain near Hope, B.C.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 8 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday local time also listed five drownings, two fire deaths, two hunting fatalities, a death from a fall and two unclassified deaths.

Ontario and Quebec each reported 12 deaths, eight of them in each province in road mishaps. Ontario also had a fire death, the hunting fatalities and one person who died after surviving a store hold-up. Quebec's total included three drownings and the fall.

Accountants Elect Directors

The chairman, Mrs. Marg Boulak, R.I.A. of Elaine Foodwear (Stirling) Ltd. called on Ken Higginson, R.I.A. of Miller Bros., Glen Miller to introduce the speaker of the evening, Mr. Bruce Lewis, R.I.A. of Pyrotexax Co., Trenton. Mr. Lewis addressed the chapter on "A New Look at Accounting for the Small Business". He pointed out the necessity of adapting and adjusting the costing approach which is used in big business to the requirements of small business. Mr. Joe Hawkins, R.I.A. of Stewart Warner thanked Mr. Lewis for his thought-provoking and informative address.

The chairman requested Mr. W. Gagnon, 6RD, RCAF to present the nominating committee's report for directors for 1966-67. As there were no further nominations for the group, the following were declared the directors for 1966-67: Mr. Murray Brown of Northern Electric, Belleville; Mrs. M. Boulak of Elaine Foodwear, Stirling; Mr. Ken Connelly of Lake Ontario Cement, Picton; Mr. John M. Simmons of National Revenue (Excise) Belleville; Mr. Ray Courneyea of Deloro Stellite, Belleville; Mrs. Ken Higginson of Miller Bros., Trenton; Mr. Joe P. Hawkins of Stewart Warner, Belleville; Mr. Art F. Jones of Belleville and Bahamian Planning Board, City Hall, Belleville; Mr. Jim M. Robertson of Union Carbide, Belleville. Executive appointments will be announced next meeting.

Mr. Art Jones, Belleville and Bahamian Planning Board reminded the members of the Spring Seminars. He also read a telegram reminding Chapters of the 1966 Society of Industrial and Cost Accountants' National Conference to be held at the Royal York Hotel, June 27-29. The theme of the Conference will be "The Era of Change" with sub-topics of "The Impact of Change on Government Administration" presented by Mr. J. Grant Glazoo, O.B.E., Y.F.C.A. and "The Impact of Change on the Individual" presented by Dr. Marcus Long, Professor, Department of Philosophy, University of Toronto.

Lloyd Woolsey, Mrs. J. S. Stewart, William Haycraft, Mrs. N. E. Gordon, Gordon Prenger, Mrs. F. S. Whitfield, John D. Elliott, R. Bruce Allenbrand, Mrs. Donald Wallens and Roger Podbuster make up the board of directors.

County representatives are: F. Eqwell Hoff of Ernestown; Claire Bens of Kaladar; W. S. Douglas of Napanee and Harold Creighton of Bath.

The local director is William F. Bancroft.

The Society has a receiving centre, where children are cared for temporarily until foster homes can be found. Sometimes whole families are there if parents find difficulties. Immunizations to children commence there.

Mr. Bancroft has seen many changes over the years. Twenty years ago, children were placed in the care of the Society when there was physical neglect, such as inadequate clothing, food or clothing. Now the Society is sometimes asked to care for them where there is parental indifference, or when the care of children is left to irresponsible persons.

Mr. Bancroft says there is no trouble in finding adoptive parents for blue-eyed fair-haired baby girls, or for chubby baby boys. The older the child the more difficult it is to find parents for him. But there are not enough babies here to go around.

Workers are few problems here with children of mixed racial origin. There is little, if any, discrimination against a child of white-Indian birth. The home can be found for the physically handicapped and the mentally retarded, but it is difficult," Mr. Barrett says.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward Wartman Mark Golden Anniversary

NAPANEE — A great many friends called last Wednesday to offer congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Ward Wartman, who were "at home" on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary. Over 200 signed the guest book, which was in charge of their daughter, (Nancy) Mrs. Ralph Warren of Maplewood, N.J.

Receiving with their parents were their daughter (Jean) Mrs. Harry Moore, and sons Robert, Their daughters-in-law, Mrs. E.D. Paul (Alice) and Mrs. Harry Caldwell (Hosford Perth) and granddaughter-in-law, Mrs. Alvin Wartman and Mrs. Robert Wartman, served refreshments. Assisting were friends of Susan Caldwell, Carol Wartman, Mrs. Stewart McConnell, Mrs. Ken Wartman and Mrs. Strathcona, Mrs. Wartman's sister.

The only members of the family not present were Mrs. Mervyn Clark, with Mr. Clark and their daughter Susan Elizabeth who were prevented from coming because of her illness at home.

Mr. Wartman has been active in the community all his life. He is a member of the Napanee, Their bridal bouquet was a shower of pink roses nestling in the tulle which surrounded it. Silver candelabra with pink candles flanked the cake. Presiding over the two silver tea services were Mrs. Fred Bell of Moscow, Mrs. George Finley of Strathcona, Mrs. Warriman's sisters; and Mrs. D. S. Wartman and Mrs. Hubert Wartman, during the afternoon; and in the evening by Mrs. C. E. Taylor and Mrs. Bruce Finley of Strathcona.

Charlotte (Lottie) Patterson of Moscow was married April 20, 1916, to Ward Wartman of Wesley, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Patterson.

For a few years after the marriage Mr. Wartman assisted his father, Mr. George Wartman, with the farm, but then took a course in funeral work in Toronto, and has followed that profession for 49 years, at first in Newburgh, but since 1928 in Napanee. Their lives are a story of Wesley Methodist Church; in the W. C. T.U., of which Mrs. Wartman has been many times president, and in the Lions Club, where Mr. Wartman is particularly active in the work of caring for the blind of the county.

Mrs. Wartman is also a keen golfer and enjoyed a musical program presented by friends and relatives with them, including their son-in-law, as master of ceremonies.

Mr. and Mrs. Wartman had requested that no gifts be presented to them, but they were the recipients of many letters, cards, and telephone messages and telegrams extending felicitations. Among them were messages from Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, John Diefenbaker, A. Douglas Aleksbrook, member for Prince Edward - Lennox of the federal house; and Premier Roberts of Ontario.

Horticultural Society Hears Address on Landscaping

NAPANEE — "In planning your landscaping, the selection of the trees you plant is more important than any other phase of your work", John Weall of Deseronto told the members of the Horticultural Society and guests at last week's meeting. The maple and the willow have no place on the urban lot, he added, as they are too large and will congiuate in gardens. You can see how large a tree is above ground, but you do not stop to think that you are only 30 per cent of that tree. The roots of both of these trees are near the surface and will use up the water and food from all of a small town lot.

Mr. Weall spoke well of such trees as the birch the mountain ash and the linden, and ornamental trees such as the flowering crabs. Their roots go downward but do not spread as far.

The speaker has appeared before the Horticultural Society before, and on that occasion his address is different, although his approach is the same. He uses a blackboard on which he has sketched a bare building, and during his address he fills in the trees and shrubs, giving a practical knowledge of landscaping. In early life he had a nursery which he built into an interest, and from 1946 to 1962 was on the faculty of the Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph, head of the landscaping department.

FARM BUILDINGS

Members of the Lennox and Addington Farm Forestry Improvement Association were guests of the Horticultural Society, and Mr. Weall included a farm home in chalk for the opening part of his address. He dealt with all the farm buildings, and said there was more scope in planting here than in the home, as there is more space. Approaches must be considered, planting to take away from the bare look, and planting to camouflage certain buildings, he pointed out.

After a second picture, he sketched a bleak, bare house which he had seen advertised for sale. Here he planting was more intimate. He recommended planting things which grew well together, such as spirea and lilacs. He also advised the lavish use of white and of yellow flowers, which he called "restaurants for the bees".

President W. F. Barrett welcomed the visiting members of the E. and A. F. I. A., and introduced Garnet Mills, local agricultural representative and a former student of Mr. Weall, who outlined the progress of the organization.

The 100 farms in the competition were scored last fall on entering, and will be scored again this fall and awards given to the winners.

Mr. Weall was introduced by A. B. Medd, vice-principal of the N.D.S.S. and a graduate of the O.A.C. and was thanked by Donald Stover of R.R. 1, Odessa, chairman of the visiting association.

Three draws were made, with Mrs. Claude Craig and Donald Scott winning containers of Dixon-Reid plant food, and Mrs. Franklin Hicks the lucky winner of the Ainsley flowering crab, the Centennial tree.

Want Women on Boards

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Business and Professional Women's Clubs of Ontario called Saturday for women to be represented on the boards of governors of colleges of applied arts and technology, soon to be established by the provincial government.

A resolution passed Saturday by the annual provincial conference of the clubs calls for establishment of an education committee to name qualified women to sit on the boards.

The colleges, for persons with Grade 12 education, will be set up in 18 parts of the province.

In another resolution Saturday, the clubs called for amendments to the Minimum Wage Act in compel employers to pay the minimum wage to all handicapped persons except those incapable of producing at a rate comparable to fit persons. Employers are at present allowed to pay all handicapped persons at a rate lower than the minimum wage.

Dr. Margaret S. McCready, dean of Macdonald College, University of Guelph, told the closing luncheon of the conference Sunday that people must be educated to better standards of living and to good management of their homes and lives.

Dr. McCready said that handling the country's economic situation is easy compared to producing a worth-while society for human beings, yet home economics courses are being called "unworthy" and even though good home management is the basis of good living.

MR. AND MRS. BRUCE M. DUFFIN

Duffin – Blackburn

Rev. David Potter united in marriage Carol Yvonne Blackburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Blackburn of Eldorado and Bruce Munro Duffin, of R.R. 1 Kirkfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Duffin of Manor in Elim Chapel, R.R. 1, Peterborough, at 12 noon on April 9, 1966. Mrs. Dorothy Swan was organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in a floor-length sheath of nattuche braid over lace worn with a full-length coat of peau de faille, with an Empire bodice and skirt flowing into a chapel train. Her three tiered veil of silk illusion fell from a wedding band headdress with a front bow and she carried a cathedral bouquet of white gardenias, white roses and baby's breath.

Miss Barbara Duffin, Miss Beverly Duffin, Miss Marlene Griffin, and Miss Helen Martin, bridesmaids, wore gowns identical in that of the matron of honor. All carried old-fashioned bouquets of spring flowers.

Mr. Robert Taylor was the bridegroom's attendant and the ushers were Mr. Melvyn Blackburn, and Mr. Douglas Hipe, Mr. Robert Kerr and Mr. Allan Armstrong.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Duffin will live at R.R. 1, Kirkfield.

ST. JOSEPH'S C.W.L.

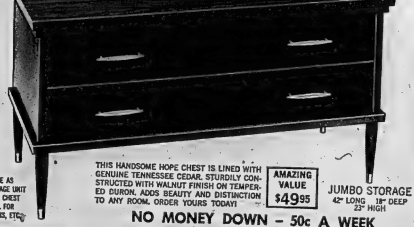
A short business meeting followed. It was decided to hold the membership party on May 16th. Two delegates will be attending the annual C.W.L. convention in Perth.

Following the business meeting the annual reports were read which portrayed the busy year of the executive and members. By acclamation the same members were returned to the executive for another year.



Highlights of the year were the parish bazaar, the visit of the Provincial president, Mrs. E. Keon, and the regional meeting. Group discussions led by Diocesan officers were popular at this event.

Mrs. D. Dunivile, president, thanked everyone who had assisted the Council. Monsignor Carley addressed the members briefly, reminding them of their role in the parish and community. He also thanked the League for its co-operation during the year.

Following the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. C. Murphy and Mrs. K. McCoy.

2 Women, 1 Canadian, Are Fighting Losing Battle Against Poverty in Africa

TANAFE, Senegal (AP) — In this African village 75 miles from the nearest telephone, two white women — one of them Canadian, are fighting a losing battle against poverty, disease and starvation.

They are nurses sent by the League of Red Cross Societies, originally to care for refugees from the guerrilla war in nearby Portuguese Guinea. Cecile Baraby of Montreal, and Fredel Tischhauser of Geneva long ago gave up trying to distinguish between refugees and Senegalese. All are in the same need, and many Senegalese pretend to be refugees just to get a handage or a handful of dried milk.

Cecile and Fredel go out by Jeep every day, in opposite directions, visiting villages in an area of 2,000 square miles—the size of Prince Edward Island—between the Casamance River and the Portuguese Guinea border. Some 300,000 Africans in swampy land along the river are out of reach of any doctor and hardly ever see a white man.

WILD BEAUTY IS DEADLY

The country has a wild beauty. White bighorn cattle graze amid huge mango and baobac trees scattered across the watery, green landscape. The bush hums to the cry of birds and in the tall elephant grass.

The area has one of the highest rates of malignant leukemia in the world. Seeping sickness, yellow fever, leprosy, yaws, malnutrition, river blindness, a blood parasite, are constant menaces.

"We can't do much against all this," Cecile said. We give aid where we can, but often we are helpless.

They give first aid, vaccination, simpler hygiene lessons and, lately, a small ration of milk for children, pregnant women and nursing mothers. Cecile drives seriously ill cases to the nearest doctor, 75 miles away in Ziguinchor or 50 miles east to Sedhiou, over rough dirt tracks

For recreation, the girls read by oil lamps or discuss their day's work. Most evenings they are too tired to do anything but eat and fall asleep. The only other whites in the village are a Lebanese merchant and his family.

The village has no electricity, no running water, no drainage system, no mail service and no locally-grown food except rice, bananas and peanuts. All that, it still is the best-equipped facility in the girls' area of operation.

WELLS NEEDED

"Wells are their greatest need," Fredel said. "If only someone could come in and sink new, clean wells for them. Then they could also drinking the swamp water, and really the program will do much good here and that's done."

Outside Fredel's mud brick house, a Pre-fon mobile clinic has been packed, unused and motionless, for four months. A sign on the side of the truck says a gift from the American people." It's a fully equipped miniature hospital. Only there is no doctor, and nurses do not go on roads in the area are too narrowfor it to get through.

Once a week they start the engine a few minutes to keep the battery charged.

"That's Africa," she said.

Duplicate Bridge Session

Despite the hockey playoffs, attendance was good at the second Tuesday meeting of the Duplicate Bridge with seven tables in play. The Howell movement was the one used, and the average score was 60 points. Those emerging on top were Ingram - Adams with 80½ points and 2.5 m.p. award at 34; Laycock - Rose with 76 and -15, and tied with them Acton-Pugh; Black - Smith with 75 and .05; and Mrs. Geerkens and Mrs. Cameron with 73 and .07.

The recent three - day duplicate tournament in Kingston attracted a number of local players, two of whom, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Townsend, did well in winning their section, and coming third in the Friday evening's play.

Since no new-comers have appeared alone for the last three sessions, director Jim Ritchie has been unable to join in the game. Everyone is welcome, single or in pairs, this fourth Tuesday evening, April 26th, at 7.30, at the Quinte Hotel.

MR. AND MRS. BRUCE ALBERT GELSTHORPE

Gelsthorpe – Brenton

Mary Gladys Elizabeth Brenton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Brenton of Corbyville and Bruce Albert Gelsthorpe, son of Mr. Percy Gelsthorpe of Belleville and the late Mrs. Gelsthorpe, were united in marriage by Rev. P. Packman, assisted by Rev. C. Dawson of Long Sault, Ontario. The marriage took place in Canniton United Church on Saturday, April 16, 1966 at 2:00 p.m. Mrs. H. Farnham played the wedding music and Miss Marlene Mitchell sang.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white corded silk, fashioned with an Empire line bodice of Chantilly lace and a scooped neckline. Her skirt was full from the waist and was embroidered with lace matching that of the bodice and enhanced with two soft bows. Her headdress was fashioned in lily-point style with long reed pearls attached to a lace-edged illusion tulle veil of tiered design.

Mrs. Charles Wright of Frankford was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Carolyn Brenton, sister of the bride, and Miss Marion Gelsthorpe, sister of the bridegroom. They were identically attired in street-length turquoise peau de soie dresses with crossovers of matching lace and headdresses of tiny quoise peau de soie. Each carried a nosegay of white mums and pink roses.

Mr. Robert Moorcroft of Oshawa was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Wayne Wade and Mr. Ken Leenels, both of Belleville.

At the reception at Canniton United Church, the bride's mother received the guests dressed in a Prussian blue wool semble with pink accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The bridegroom's aunt, Mrs. William Cordwin of Quebec, assisted, wearing a flowered blue dress, navy coat, white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

For her wedding trip to southern Ontario points, the bride changed to a Prussian blue brocade suit, a navy coat, white and black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

FROSTED APPLESAUCE CAKE

For your edification and nutrition today I have a fruity frosted applesauce cake that will freeze. I'm pleased with it, I hope it will find its way to many a Canadian table and into many a Canadian freezer.

In beaker bowl cream the shortening with the sugars until light. Beat in egg. Remove beaker. Sift together the sifted flour, salt, soda and spices. Stir them in, alternately, with the applesauce, mixing well each at a time. Fold in fruits and nuts. Turn into well - buttered 9" (or 10") tube pan, smooth top and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 55 minutes. Turn out of pan and cool on rack.

Frost with

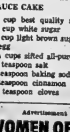
2 cups unsifted icing sugar



1 tablespoons milk

½ teaspoon salt

In beater bowl beat cheese until creamy then add sugar and salt and beat until smooth, adding milk slowly until of smooth, almost runny spreading consistency. Spread all over cooled applesauce cake. Chill. If you desire, slice the cake cut-wrong backing board into round, place cake on it and insert in double plastic bags and freeze.

Note: Clip this recipe for Cream Cheese Frosting, for you will want to use it on many other cakes.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DOUGLAS HAGERMAN

Hagerman – Marek

St. Vincent de Paul Church, Deseronto was the setting on Saturday April 16, 1966, when Carol Marie Marek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Marek, Deseronto was united in marriage to John Douglas Hagerman, son of Mrs. Frances Hagerman of Deseronto and Mr. George Hagerman of Toronto.

Rev. B. L. Farrell officiated at the ceremony and traditional wedding music was played by the organist Mrs. J. Edwards who also accompanied the soloist Mrs. E. Beauchesne in appropriate selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a striking bridal gown in Victorian style of silk organza over taffeta and featuring a Chantilly lace bodice with high collar neckline and full length sleeves. A long train of Chantilly lace extended from the shoulders of the dress .The high crown headdress of matching material adorned with pearls held in place a shoulder length bouffant veil. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses mingled with shasta mums.

Mr. Gerald Gordanier attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Leonard Palmer was the usher.

For the reception dinner at the Hotel Quinte, Belleville, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a pink linen ensemble of dress and matching coat, pink and white accessories and a corsage of white gardenias and deep pink Sweetheart roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a blue wool two-piece suit, black accessories and a corsage of white gardenias and deep pink Sweetheart roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Hagerman will reside in Oshawa.

MANDARIN PILLOW

Make TV watching enjoyable. Relax and smile with your neck firmly and gently cushioned by this lovely, practical barbell-shaped pillow.

Hair stays in place while napping. Just right for you and the children to catch 40 winks on a long motor trip – or cover it with a small pillow slip and have a good night's sleep even with a head full of curlers.

Our pattern for this pillow — made from pretty remnants and a little stuffing — allows some leeway for your own individual requirements.

You might even have time to make one for mom for her day in May! — SUSANNA

SUMMERTIME CRAFT IDEA FOR HOME OR COTTAGE

Did you know that dainty, attractive flower corsages can be made from discarded nylon stockings?

Indulge in this pleasant pastime during the lazy days of summer, and have your artificial flower booth in readiness to reap the profits at fairs and church sales next fall.

Wear a pretty nylon corsage to enhance a suit or dress — or use one to replace a bow as the decoration on a special gift.

First, before cutting the stockings, dye or tint them — some, in shades to simulate flower petals, others in a soft leaf green.

Three more items are all you will need; spool wire for shaping the florist's tape for winding, and a package of yellow flower stamens from the needle craft or bead work supply counters of almost any department or drygoods store.

Note: Just a reminder that nothing would make us happier than to have you send us a suggestion for the column, in exchange for which, as always, we will forward whatever patterns you may require. — SUSANNA

Ann Landers

These "Empty Hearts" Come From Empty Heads

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our beautiful 17-year-old daughter is in the bedroom sobbing her heart out. Her steady boy friend, Artie, told her this afternoon that he wants his ring and picture back. He didn't give any reason — just that he wants to date other girls and spend more time on athletics.

Do you know what it's like to hear a 17-year-old say she doesn't want to go on living? She hardly touched her dinner tonight and her eyes look like red coals. When she was telling us about her tragedy both my husband and I broke down and wept. Please say something to give us all courage. — EMPTY HEARTS.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR EMPTY: If this is a tragedy I'm a baby dancer in a kootch joint. High school kids break up by the thousands every day. Pictures, rings, sweaters, pins, and bracelets are shot back and forth like ping pong balls.

Instead of weeping with your daughter you should have told her that the cry baby who folds like an accordion when things don't go her way is in for a rough time.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently you said many people who treat replies in the mail enclose envelopes which they address to Ann Landers instead of to themselves. You expressed surprise that so many people make this mistake.

Why? Don't you know the average American is a moron? I've worked in our city hall for 30 years and nothing surprises me anymore.

One woman who filled out a form for a driver's license recently wrote, after the question "Occupation" —

Then there are the old crows who knock 40 pounds off their weight and 10 years off their age when they fill out forms. Who do they think they are kidding? Last week a motherly type with snow white hair put down "red" to describe her hair color. When I called the error to her attention, she said, "I'm having it dyed tomorrow."

* * *

DEAR OLD TIMER: People can also be awfully warm-hearted, generous, heroic and unbelievably kind.

And since you work in City Hall, please pass the word to someone higher up that some of those goofy forms are worded in such confusing language that Einstein would need help.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was delighted when you told that daughter-in-law that it was up to her to write to her husband's mother. I didn't realize how much my cards meant to my mother-in-law until last Christmas. When we visited her she took out a huge bundle of cards she had saved over the years.

Sandwiched in among my own were cards written by the children. There was one scrawled by our daughter when she was 10, written in the heavily sloping style of a 16-year-old. And there was a card from our son written from the dog and cat hospital. His little dog, "Mr. Jones," had been struck by a car and he had just received word that "Mr. Jones" is going to be OK!

We had a good laugh over the card we had mailed while driving through Paris, Texas. We sent it as a gag, hoping Grandma would think we were in Frankce.

Our "Too-Busy-To-Write Daddy" was touched by my considération for his mother. I'm sure he appreciates me just a little more. — PATTY.

DEAR PATTY: It's like I said — writing to a mother-in-law comes under the heading of being a good wife. You do it as much for your husband as for his mother. Cheers!

Que. Women Federation Will Combine All Clubs

MONTREAL (CP) — An organization to bring Quebec women together for concerted social action — the new Federation of Quebec Women — was founded Saturday.

The 225 women from across the province who attended the founding conference are to be in direction of the aim of the federation, which will group individuals and women's associations.

Among the larger organizations represented at the conference were the Montreal Women's Council, which has 90,000 members, l'Action Catholique des Femmes Rurales, Catholic Farm Women's Union with 24,962, the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions with 60,000 women members, and les Dames de Ste. Anne with 178,000.

Aim of the organization, as set out in the charter accepted by the founding members, is to co-ordinate social action by keeping members informed of each other's projects and activities, encouraging greater unity of action, and sponsoring study sessions.

It grew out of a meeting last year which marked the 25th anniversary of the right to vote for women in Quebec.

Mme. Therese Casgrain, who organized Saturday's conference, said the federation will not embark on the members' autonomy, but merely co-ordinate their efforts to create a better social fabric.

"It will not engage in partisan politics."

The federation could support government attempts to set up such an inquiry.

Mme. Casgrain, who said the inquiry could begin in Quebec, providing solutions first for problems peculiar to Quebec women.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS PATRICK CALLAHAN

Callahan – Hogan

Holy Rosary Church, Belleville, was the scene of a spring wedding on Saturday, April 16, 1966, when Mary Theresa Hogan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Hogan, of Belleville was united in marriage to Thomas Patrick Callahan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy J. Callahan, Corbyville. Rev. Father John Callahan, uncle of the bridegroom, officiated. Sister Mary Rosaria played the wedding music and Miss Ann Marie Young, cousin of the bride, was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown de soie sheath gown, with long illusion sleeves, scalloped neckline trimmed with Alencon lace, and tiers of Alencon lace on the skirt. The back of the gown was enhanced with a Watteau train with self bows and she wore a lily-of-the-valley and rose headdress with a double silk illusion veil. Her flowers were a cascade bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses, mingled with stephanotis and ivy.

Miss Jane Doran was maid of honor. Miss Catherine Hogan and Miss Nora Anne Hogan, sisters of the bride and Miss Donna Morrison, all of Belleville, were bridesmaids. They were dressed alike in Empire style floor-length gowns of peacock green with bodices of pure lace. They wore matching rose headpieces and carried cascade bouquets of white and blue mums.

The flower girl, Miss Lucille Young, cousin of the bride, wore a floor-length gown of white eyelet over pale blue taffeta with blue bows gathered at the bombike. She carried a basket of blue and white mums.

Mr. Frank Callahan, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Charles Callahan and Mr. Joseph Callahan, brothers of the bridegroom, and Mr. Michael Rivers.

The reception was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Belleville, where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a Capri blue silk crepe ensemble, pink and white accessories and a corsage of white mums and pink Sweetheart roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who chose a three-piece boucle navy and white suit, navy and white accessories and a corsage of white mums and Sweetheart roses.

For her wedding trip to Niagara Falls and surrounding area, the bride chose a pale blue two piece chevriotette suit, black and white accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Callahan will live at R.R. 1, Shannonville.

Diabetes No Bar To Adopting Baby

DEAR DORIS: My granddaughter who lives in New York has been married seven years. She lost two babies. Her father my son) tells me she is just feeling so bad and wants to adopt. She'll travel anywhere to get one; she is ectoring all the time and no results. They are ell fixed financially and could give it a good ome. They are afraid to go to an agency ecause her husband is diabetic but is a good orker.

My son phoned me and asked if they ould get one here. They were both born in anada but are U.S. citizens, having lived there 25 years. I said I would see what I could do. — GRANNY.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR GRANNY: Diabetes, under control, is no reason for refusal. And I gather this case is under control. I know of one case in which the mother, a diabetic, has three adopted children. Just as in any other handicap, the agency is guided by the doctor's report.

Moreover, no Canadian agency would fill an order refused by an American one! Send your granddaughter to the child care service for her community without further delay. Here are all looking for good parents for the babies who need them.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: Will you please send me anything that will improve cropey skin on the throat? It is also a darker shade than my face. — FIFTY-ISH.

I'm sending you the ten-cent leaflet "A Delaying Action for Wrinkles," which may help. But really there's nothing to beat a good diet, regular habits, and enough rest. Most human systems react all over to the right kind of treatment.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I lack courage. I have never stood up to my drinking, bruising husband. If I so much as open my mouth I get a slap in the face.

The last straw is that the oldest boy is getting the same attitude as his father. He figures he can beat up anybody, and is very quarrelsome. — GUTLESS.

DEAR GUTLESS: Being a dutiful wife doesn't include standing quietly and taking beatings from your husband. On the contrary, all you have to do once is teach him, and now your son, that might is right.

Get some starch in that backbone before your marriage fails completely apart. This is one time a personal counsellor could do a great deal by giving you the insight and fortitude you need, whether or not your big bully knows about such a contact.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I thought these poems might be of interest to you, from "Gems from Will Readers' Notebook." The writer is now deceased but he used to broadcast his gems every afternoon over one of our local radio stations. — MRS. L.E.M.

DEAR MRS. L.E.M.: Thank you. The one "The World Is Mine" has come to me from all directions, and has already been reproduced in part in the column. The other one follows:

IF I CAN

If I can lead a man who has been blind
To see the beauty in a blade of grass;
If I can aid my fellow men to find
The friendliness of trees they daily pass;

If I can stir a soul to view the dawn
With seeing eyes and hold the vision clear,
So he may drink the rapture when 'tis gone,
To purify some sordid atmosphere;

If I can help the human ear to hear
The gladness in the waterfall's refrain;
The tenderness of robins piping clear;
The healing in the sound of falling rain;

If I can rouse but one to that rebirth
Which sees God mirrored in each flower and tree,
To feel his oneness with the whole of earth —
Why, that will be a priceless joy to me!

Anon.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I have had a weight problem for years and have had numerous books, doctors' diet sheets, cookbooks, and about two years ago I picked up a paperback to help you "Count Your Calories." It has over 2,000 items in small and will fit in pocket or purse. It contains more real information than all the others put together, especially for Do-it-yourself Dieters. — CALORIE COUNTER.

DEAR COUNTER: With such a pocket-size edition a dieter can't excuse a calorie-loaded restaurant meal by saying she left her book at home! I'll give the name of your source-of-all-knowledge to anyone writing in for it.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I realize there is nothing you or anyone can do but I have to tell my troubles to someone or go mad, and really there is no one else. We have two children at home plus six foster children and we have just been served a foreclosure notice.

The house was an old wreck when we got it and we've insulated and painted and mended. My husband was very ill last year and our payments got behind and now we will lose all we've worked so hard for. And we've only done this for the children. These poor little ones we have are all from broken homes and were all unwanted children until we got them.

My husband is only an unskilled laborer but he's a darn good one. He's tried so hard and is so proud of our wonderful family, but he's not getting any younger, and I'm so afraid this will about finish him.

Please pray — as I'm doing — for the owner of this house to have a change of heart. — NOT LICKED YET. (I hope)

DEAR NOT LICKED YET: What's more, I don't think you will be — with that spirit! Have you been in touch with your local child welfare authority? All child care workers are grateful for warm loving parents like you. I'm predicting that help will come — perhaps from an unexpected source. Prayer can certainly work wonders.

Yugoslvia Is Communist Land Which Has Rejected Orthodoxy

Politically and in other ways, Yugoslavia does not belong in the parliaments of communism, Canadian Press reporter John Best, who visited the country during a tour of Eastern Europe, says in this story that Yugoslavia still feels kinship with its Communist neighbors but is also forming closer ties with the West.

By JOHN BEST

BELGRADE (CP)—It's no longest appropriate to deal with Yugoslavia as a Communist country. The Yugoslavs have long since abandoned any pretence to orthodoxy.

Nevertheless, they still consider themselves ideological kin of other Communist peoples of Eastern Europe. And even though they're outside the immediate family, they exert a powerful influence on its members.

Revisions and reforms the Yugoslavs have made often serve as an example for the others. Thus, profoundly important developments now taking place here could have significant long-range consequences for the development of Eastern Europe generally.

The developments are primarily economic but they have their side-effects in just about every sphere of activity.

Their main impact, on a practical level, will be to strip away many of the remaining props of a Communist economy, making it more responsive to traditional supply - and - demand influences and bring it more closely to the West.

When I asked Prime Minister Petar Stambolitch why Yugoslavia is moving toward a market economy in the Western sense, he didn't say no.

"The purpose of the economic measures is to establish conditions for the stable growth of our socialist economy," he answered. "We have allowed more room for a freer action of objective economic laws.

"It has been made possible, in this way, to reduce considerably administrative intervention in production and in economic life in general. . . . This, however, does not mean the community forgoes a certain influence on the lines of our economy as a whole is taking in its development."

POINT TO WEST

Yugoslav leaders, in discussing this question, stress that Western countries themselves are not entirely free of government influence.

"We are trying to work out appropriate proportions between planning and a market economy," one high official said.

Not only is the economic sphere does Yugoslavia assert its independence. It has been developing increasingly close ties with the West. And in foreign policy it has played a leading role in the emergence of a non-aligned third force in world affairs.

Friendship with the West is manifest in the free-and-easy association of Westerners diplomats and visitors here with government officials and the people generally.

There are no police boxes outside Western embassies. Western diplomats are not watched by secret security men as in some Communist countries. And they're free to travel into the countryside or to other cities without first obtaining permission.

Military attaches are more closely watched, it is true, but Western embassy people assume Soviet attaches are treated the same way.

Diplomats tell of easy access to high government and Communist party officials. They say they accept dinner invitations with enthusiasm and then actually enjoy themselves, betraying none of the strain that so often attends East - West social functions elsewhere.

STARTLED BY REMARKS

One foreign envoy swears that when the party bosses get feeling convivial and talkative at such gatherings, they sometimes make startling admissions to the effect that communism as known until now is a bust and that the only sensible thing to do is look for an alternative.

The same diplomat says many influential Communists are afraid of what will happen when President Tito, an authentic national hero, has left the scene.

Their fear is that without Tito, who is 69 and reported beginning to show his age, even what's left of the monolithic Communist state will wither away, perhaps to become something like the social democracies of Western Europe.

Though Yugoslavia is a one-party state, the principle of free critical discussion of public issues is becoming more entrenched. The legislative assembly is becoming more and more a forum for genuinely free debate.

Sometimes government bills are rejected. Not long ago a red banner proposed by Tito himself as the new national flag was quietly dropped after it encountered strong opposition in the assembly.

An organized political opposition is not yet on the horizon, however.

In the economic sphere, the Yugoslavs admit they have a capitalist-style unemployment problem though they may refer to the unemployed euphemistically as "redundant labor."

250,000 JOBLESS

The number of unemployed is said to be 250,000—not high in a country of 20,000,000.

However, another 200,000 have gone to other countries to find work.

The government has tolerated the exodus because it relieves the unemployment problem and brings in convertable currency. But it has been viewing the migration with increasing misgiving since professional men such as engineers and doctors joined the flood.

From the point of neutrality in world affairs, Yugoslavia tries to promote better relations between East and West.

It still pays lip service to the cause of so-called "wars of national liberation," but its characteristic activity in approach to this explosive issue tends to be moderate.

For example, on Viet Nam it generally supports the rebel side and is critical of American policy, but it backs the U.S. call for negotiations to end the conflict. And it expressed disappointment that the Communist side did not respond to the American bombing pause early this year.

In discussing American policy on Viet Nam, the Yugoslavs speak more in sorrow than in anger. In some officials suggest that South Viet Nam, should it ever become Communist, would quickly turn into a Southeast Asia version of Yugoslavia itself, breaking loose from dependence on Peking and becoming a non-aligned state.

DON'T ATTACK MOSCOW

Relations between the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia are, from all indications, excellent. Diplomats here say there is never a hint of criticism of the U.S.S.R. in the controlled Yugoslav daily press.

Some observers believe a gentleman's agreement exists between the leaders of the two countries to refrain from criticizing one another's policies openly.

As for relations between China and Yugoslavia, one official summed up by saying "there are none."

In the eyes of the Chinese, Yugoslavia with its friendly relations with capitalist countries and its "revisionist" policies is just about every field, is the arch-renegade from the Communist movement. The Tito government draws even harsher abuse from Peking than the Soviet government does.

The Yugoslavs don't seem to mind. They even find wry amusement in the fact that recently they were under attack simultaneously from two directions in the Communist camp.

Blasting from one side were the Chinese; from the other Cuba.

And only a week before, China and Cuba had been exchanging verbal broadsides.

OUT IN RIGHT FIELD — Traffic jams and crowded shop windows indicate an advancing prosperity in Belgrade, Yugoslavia. The Yugoslavs have for some time abandoned any pretense to orthodox communism. Observers see its economy as becoming more closely tied to the West. (CP Photo)

Dominicans Want Troops To Go Home

SANTO DOMINGO (AP)—Lots of noise but no violence opened a week of celebrations Sunday of the anniversary of the Dominican revolution last April.

An estimated 10,000 demonstrators, most of them youths, massed at Independence Park, repeatedly shouted "Go home, Yankees," and cheered loudly at the end of the three-hour rally when a U.S. flag was burned.

Police armed with carbines and tear gas bombs kept a careful watch. The army was on the alert. The inter-American peace force, consisting mostly of U.S. troops, stayed in the background.

In evidence at the rally, organized by leftist groups, were the green and black banner of the pro-Castro 14th of June movement and the red and black flags of the country's two Communist parties.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

"We have to take a game in Montreal if we are going to win the Stanley Cup", announced Detroit Red Wing Coach Sid Abel prior to yesterday's series opener.

The statement certainly didn't make Abel a master mathematician, since four of the seven games must be played in Montreal.

However, the Wings got that "one game" early and set up what could well be one of the better Stanley Cup final series in quite some time.

Before someone accuses me of knocking Abel, let me say it just isn't so.

In my opinion, Sid Abel is the best coach and general manager in the National Hockey League, bar none.

And there are plenty of players who will agree, not only on the Red Wing club but on most of the other teams as well.

He somehow has that certain something that gets the most from his players. Yet he is the easiest coach to play for, according to numerous NHL players. Abel and his players share a mutual respect for each other, on and off the ice.

Detroit may not win the gravy, in fact, they may not win another game against the Canadiens club that seemed to be just the shortest inch away from its usual razor-sharp edge yesterday.

But win or lose, it should be a wide open, free-skating series where every player on both teams will have to come up with his best effort from start to finish. We think it will go seven games.

Roger Crozier, the little netminder who scares the spunk out of Wing backers at times when he comes far out of his net to face incoming attackers, was one of the keys yesterday.

True, the Montreal marksmen may not have been at their best, but Crozier was great time and again on dangerous situations.

Probably the biggest play of the game came around the ten-minute mark of the opening heat. The Habs' Ted Harris was setting out a penalty when J. C. Tremblay stole the puck from Detroit and waltzed in all alone on Crozier. It was scoreless at the point.

Crozier made the big save and three minutes later the Wings took the lead. They were never headed. By way of the idiot box, at least, it looked as if Crozier's other big stops were on Gilles Tremblay in the second with the score 1-0 and on Rousseau in the third, seconds after "Gump" Worsley had pulled off a great pad stop on Paul Henderson.

Worsley did his part in keeping the Canadiens within hailing distance to the end. He forced the Great One, Gordie Howe, into shooting wide by a fraction on a fine play with Dean Prentice late in the second.

Had "Toe" Blake's boys came back to win the tilt, Howe would have done a lot of blinking over that one.

Then again in the third, with the score 2-2, Howe cut into an opening from the right side and fired point-blank, only to see Worsley beat it out.

Ralph Backstrom, skating like the wind with pepper under its tail, led some pretty rushes for the losers and a couple of close-in pass patterns that just failed to click, with big Jean Beliveau on the receiving end, came close to tying it.

Bill Gadsby, one of the Wings that Backstrom left in his wake on the 1-1 goal early in the second, redeemed himself in fine style less than a minute later. He started and finished the play that put the Wings ahead to stay. He and Lee Bolvin threw some lusty body checks to keep the Hab forwards off balance.

Summing up, the Wings showed that they have no intentions of going into a panic before the Canadiens. And this is a big plus for the aging Detroit veterans. They could have blown the whole thing sky-high after they got the equalizer and they could have wilted when Harper followed Henderson's goal with a quick reply early in the third.

But, as against Chicago, the Wings just kept playing hockey, right down to the wire when Alex Delvecchio controlled the puck superbly in the Montreal end, putting the pressure on the Canadiens, rather than on themselves.

That's why it's going to be one great series.

Henderson Shares Honors ★★★★★ Crozier Shines In Wings' 3-2 Win ★★★★★ Action-Packed Game

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings haven't met as Stanley Cup finalists for a decade, but if Sunday's opening game of the best-of-seven series is any indication, ten years has been too long.

The 15,070 fans on hand for diens applauded both sides durdians applauded both sides during the free-wheeling, action-packed performance.

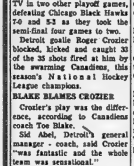
ROGER CROZIER

* * *

The Montrealers were making their debut in color throughout the United States on a telecast by the National Broadcasting Co.

The Wings appeared on color TV in two other playoff games, defeating Chicago Black Hawks 7-0 and 5-3 as they took the semi-final four games to two.

Detroit goalie Roger Crozier blocked, kicked and caught 33 of the 35 shots fired at him by the swarming Canadiens, this season's National Hockey League champions.



BLAKE BLAMES CROZIER

Crozier's play was the difference, according to Canadiens coach Toe Blake.

Sid Abel, Detroit's general manager - coach, said Crozier "was fantastic and the whole team was sensational."

RALPH BACKSTROM

Henderson's third-period goal proved to be the winner. It was his third playoff goal this season and his second game-winner. He scored one power-play goal and the winner in Detroit's 5-1 win over the Hawks in the fourth game of their six-game semi-final.

Veteran defenceman Bill

GOAL — Detroit's Bill Gadsby shoots the puck past Montreal goalier Lorne (Gump) Worsley in the first game of the Stanley Cup final series in Montreal Sunday afternoon. Detroit won 3-2.

(CP Wirephoto)

Gadsby scored the fourth playoff goal of his 20-year NHL career in the second period and Floyd Smith tipped an Andy Bathgate backhander behind Lorne (Gump) Worsley.

Centre Ralph Backstrom and defenceman Terry Harper were the two Montrealers who beat Crozier.

However, Claude Provost, Gilles Tremblay and J. C. Tremblay all had fine scoring opportunities for Montreal while Norm Ullman and Gordie Howe missed good chances against Worsley.

DETROIT REBOUNDS

Detroit led 1-0 after one period and 3-1 after two. Wings were outshot 10-8 in the first 20 minutes and 11-10 in the middle period, but rebounded to outfire Canadiens 16-14 in the third.

Smith opened the scoring for Detroit at 13:25 of the first period. He skated in front of Worsley as Wings' Andy Bathgate let go a backhander from the corner. Smith managed to tip the shot as the Montreal goaltender had moved to block Bathgate and the Wings led 1-0.

Until then the Montrealers dominated play and only Crozier's fine performance kept them scoreless. He made fine stops on [illegible] Backstrom, Claude Provost, [illegible]ceman Ted Harris [illegible]

Harris [illegible] up a minor penalty at 9:10 of the period for interference and with his club shorthanded, J. C. Tremblay and a clear breakaway on Crozier, who refused to be decked out of position and made the stop.

Canadiens' constant pressure finally paid off at 4:23 of the second period when Backstrom made his way around Gadsby and beat Crozier.

Less than one minute later, Gadsby made up for his defensive lapse as he combined with Ab McDonald to score the netcut goal of the day.

On the play, Harris fell and took a teammate with him. Gadsby, McDonald and Smith skated in with J. C. Tremblay the lone defender. Tremblay moved to McDonald, who had taken Gadsby's pass. As the Canadiens defenceman moved to check the Detroit winger, McDonald slid the puck to Gadsby, who beat Worsley to make the score 3-1.

That set the scene for Henderson's goal. He scampered down the left boards, eluded Dick Duff, whirled around J. C. Tremblay and slid the puck under Worsley.

Harper's goal followed Henderson's as the Montreal defenceman fired a shot from the point that Crozier appeared to be screened on.

Referee Vern Buffey called only three minor penalties. He handed one to Gadsby after 35 seconds of play, another to Harris in the opening period and one to Bathgate for hooking in the second.

The second game of the series is scheduled for Montreal at 9 p.m. EDT Tuesday, with a third game in Detroit Thursday night and the fourth in that city Sunday.

Orioles Stretch Strings

Robinsons Picking On Hapless Yanks

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

If New York Yankees' are having trouble sleeping these nights, you can be sure they're not counting Robinsons.

Frank and Brooks can't clear any fences Sunday, but they did figure in both of Baltimore's runs as the Orioles edged the hapless Yankees 2-1 and stretched a pair of streaks to six.

The Orioles now have won six straight and are 6-1 over-all while the Yankees have dropped six in a row and are 1-5 over-all.

Of the Yankees' 10 games, five have been against Baltimore. And in those five—one victory and four defeats—the Robinsons have been a nightmare to New York.

Against the Yankees, they collectively have rapped 11 hits in 24 times at bat for a .471 average, socked six doubles and two homers, scored seven runs and driven in 12. The Yankees have scored only 13 runs in the five games.

HIT .467 AND .465

Against the whole league, Frank is hitting .467 with four homers and 13 runs scored while Brooks has a .465 average with 16 runs batted in.

The Yankees' hitting doesn't quite reach those lofty levels.

As a team, the Yankees are hitting .199.

In other American League games Sunday Minnesota Twins defeated California Angels 5-3, Detroit Tigers swept Washington Senators 4-0 and 4-1 and Chicago White Sox edged Kansas City Athletics 4-3 in 10 innings. Rain washed out a doubleheader between Cleveland and Boston.

Saturday, California edged Minnesota 4 - 3, Washington trimmed Detroit 5-3, Baltimore beat New York 4-2, Cleveland shaded Boston 5-4 and Kansas City slipped by Chicago 2-1.

SCORES DECISIVE RUN

Brooks Robinson doubled in the Orioles' first run in the first inning Sunday, then teamed with Frank for consecutive doubles and the decisive run in the sixth.

Minnesota stopped its five-game losing streak behind the hitting of Don Mincher, who hit a two-run homer in the third and drove in another run with a single in the fourth. Rick Reichardt's two - run homer keyed Twins' attack in the seventh. Pascual from the mound in the seventh.

Bill Monbouquette scattered seven hits in Detroit's opening game victory. Washington's Pete Richert tied a league record by striking out seven consecutive Tigers, but he was knocked out in the seventh when Don Demeter doubled and scored on Ken McMullen's error.

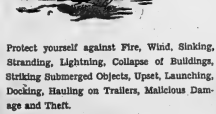
Gary Cowan Shares Lead In Qualifying

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Gary Cowan, a former Canadian amateur champion, Marion Hock and Vern Novak shot 34-36—70s Saturday to lead 128 qualifying round for the North and South senior golf tournament which opens today.

The 36 qualifiers will join 32 exempt players in today's opening round of 54 matches.



Cowan, from Kitchener, shot a one-over-par five on the last hole of the 6,661-yard No. 5 course of the Pinehurst Country Club, losing a chance to finish on top by himself.

Rochester, Barons Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winger Howie Glover of Cleveland Barons had his opener and clowns on the weekend and scored game - winning goals from both positions.

Glover banged in the winner Sunday as Cleveland rallied for all its goals in the final period to defeat Rochester Americans 3-2 and win the best-of-five Calder Cup semi-final in the American Hockey League 3-0.

Rochester Americans, mean while, dumped Quebec Aces twice to take a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven semi - final. The Americans, trailing 2-1 going into Saturday's game in Toronto, rolled out a 2-1 Quebec lead in the second period for a 7-2 triumph. They followed it up with a 4-3 victory Sunday night in Quebec City.

Mays Ties Ott With 511th Home Run

Dodgers Blanked Twice

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Harmon Fraelic might have an interesting time explaining one baseball, slightly scuffed —2097— on the next expense account he hands San Francisco Giants' accountants.

But it's legitimate. So was the cause—the 511th homer of Willie Mays' career, a 420-foot shot in the eighth inning that tied Mel Ott's National League career record and triggered the Giants to a 4-3 victory over Houston Astros Sunday.

Mays came to the plate with the Giants trailing 3-1, took aim at Jim Owen's 3-0 pitch and drilled a belt-high fastball into the Astrodome's left centre field seats, where a fan pounced on the ball.

The fan got his reward and Mays his trophy after the game when Franks walked up to his $125,000 centre fielder with the ball in his hand.

"Here," said Franks. "I paid the man 30 bucks for this." Theo Mays took over.

"I was going for a homer every time up," he said. "I wanted to do it in San Francisco, but the game was on television and I don't guess it makes much difference. I know it made our fans happy."

CHASING RECORD

One more home run will put Mays in fourth place on the all-time homer list, ahead of Ott, and behind only Ted Williams with 521, Jimmy Foxx with 534 and Babe Ruth with 714. Entering injury, Mays should pass all but Ruth this season.

While Mays was making history, St. Louis Cardinals whipped Pittsburgh Pirates 9-2, Chicago Cubs shutout Los Angeles Dodgers 2-0, Cincinnati Reds edged Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 in a game shortened to 5½ innings by rain and Atlanta Braves downed New York Mets 5-3 before losing the nightcap 3-2.

In Saturday's games, the Cubs blanked the Dodgers 2-0, the Braves beat the Mets 5-4, Houston split with San Francisco, winning 4-0 and losing 2-1 while the Pirates stopped the Cards 5-4 and Philadelphia at Cincinnati was postponed because of rain.

Mays' homer, his sixth of the season, lifted the Giants into a 3-2 tie, and one out later they clinched it when Jim Hart rocketed a solo homer off Owens into the left field seats.

SADECKI STARTS

Ray Sadecki made his first start for the Cardinals but didn't go the distance. How ever, he slammed a two-run single in the second inning that put it out of the Pirates' reach. Sadecki also singled and scored in the seventh inning when he needed Tracy Stallard's relief help.

Rookie Ken Holtzman, a full-time student and part - time pitcher available to the Cubs at home, and veteran Ted Abernathy combined to shut out the Dodgers on five hits. The loser was Don Drysdale, who gave up five hits in the six innings he worked and lost on a two-run triple by Don Kessinger in the second inning.

Johnny Edwards and Vada Pinson homered for the Reds and a triple by Tony Perez and Mel Queen's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning brought in the decisive run that ended Cincinnati's losing streak at six games. Sammy Ellis held the Phillies' to three hits in the rain-shortened game but two were homers by John Briggs.

Wade Blasingame won his own game in the opener against the Mets by striking a two-run single in a three-run second inning uprising that extended the Braves' winning streak to six.

But a throwing error by third baseman Eddie Mathews enabled the Mets to push across the seventh-inning runs in the nightcap and snap the Braves' game losing streak despite a two-homer performance by Felipe Alou.

Entries Closed

Softball Loop Has Five Club3

The Belleville and District Softball League will play a longer schedule with less entries, it was announced at the loop's entry deadline meeting last night.

Five clubs entered for the 1966 season are Bloomfield, Belleville Ellis Juniors, Madoc and Belleville Trudeau Motors, back from last year, and the Belleville Bobcats after a couple years' absence.

The loop had seven entries in 1965. Missing are Trenton, Tweed and Stirling. Some players from those centres are expected to line up with Belleville teams.

Ellis Jrs. asked for a longer schedule, proposing of 24 games. The loop played 18 last year. Two schedules will be drawn up for 20 games, another for 30, and presented to the clubs. They will then make the choice.

The three - Belleville clubs will play home games at the Alemite Field, likely on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights. Bloomfield not represented last night, is expected to get Wednesday and Saturday home dates with Madoc able to meet its earlier - promised obligations to the B. and D. League.

One club representative said he had heard rumors that "one of their nine umpires is unable to officiate because of health reasons, another is being transferred out of town, two others are on shift work and 1 under-stand the ump's are bidding for a contract, other leagues, that may not have enough umpires to give us what they promised. We want assurance that we will get top officials," added Ellis junior manager Paul Bonnet.

A motion was passed which allows the Madoc entry to sign its pitcher, Bill Melville or junior OASA players, plus an extra five overage players who are not connected with any other OASA entry.

Madoc won the OASA Junior "C" championship last year but club representative Charlie Hamilton claims to have trouble, mainly because of school problems, fielding a team at times. He promised to declare his club either junior or juvenile by May 20 but will be allowed to carry the overage players for B. and D. play.

Allen Sills and Cliff Belch will share the league statistician job this year. They were voted the usual $50 fee. League secretary Doug Reid will receive $25. Each home club will pay $2 for an official scorer for each game.

Olympic Bids At Crucial Stage

By HAROLD MORRISON

ROME (CP) — The crucial stage in Canadian bids for the 1972 Olympic Games will be reached today when official presentations begin before the International Olympic Committee in the battle for the 1972 summer events.

Detroit will make the first presentation, following Spain Madrid, Munich and Montreal.

Mayor Jean Drapeau will make Montreal's appeal, emphasizing three points: The Olympic Games have never been held in Canada, although Canadians have been participating since 1904; the last time summer Games were held in North America was in Los Angeles in 1932, and the last time in a French-speaking city was in Paris in 1924.

Mexico has the 1968 Games, but Drapeau said he considers it part of another continent.

He will use one of his most effective talking points is that Montreal is "virtually ready." Having expanded old facilities and built new ones for the 1967 World's Fair, the city could easily take the 1972 summer Games in its stride.

Hirsh Hershon of Montreal, manager of the Canadian Olympic Association, figures Montreal will win by a small but comfortable margin.

DECISION TUESDAY

IOC members will listen to winter Games battlers Tuesday morning and, at about 3 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT) Tuesday, president Avery Brundage will announce winners for both summer and winter events.

Banff, Alta., is waging a struggle to maintain its reputed lead for the winter Games against Salt Lake City, Utah; Sapporo, Japan, and Lahti, Finland. The Banff corner is concerned that pressure by wildlife and conservation organizations opposing Games in the Banff National Park may hurt the bid.

But Health Minister Allan MacEachen, down in from Ottawa to assure IOC members will not be damaged. Parson also [illegible] Brundage saying he won't hurt the national parks.

Sidney Dawes of Montreal, 77-year-old IOC member, told one Banff delegate Sunday the wildlife pressure is "quite serious." In effect, Montreal and Banff are in opposite corners. If Montreal should get the summer Games, Banff's winter bid may be knocked out.

"It is highly unlikely one country would get both games," Dawes said.

HITS COMMERCIALISM

When the IOC opened its meeting Sunday, Brundage said commercialized sports have no place in the Olympics, which otherwise might degenerate into a mere supplier for professional sports.

He also said few of the more than 120 national Olympic committees in existence understood the real objective of the Olympic movement.

"Most seem satisfied to strive for medals, ignoring that their main obligation . . . to promote Olympic principles is much broader."

Dawes said international sports federations represented here are giving the IOC technical advice on the various sites.

Badminton Tourney

"Bird" Title To Petes

The Peterborough entry captured the Doug Grant Trophy, Saturday for the second year, ending the inter - club competitive Badminton season.

Unopposed by the champs were teams from Belleville Garrison Badminton Club and a combined Napanee - Picton entry. Kingston was to have competed but was unable to field a team so withdrew from the competition.

Team points were compiled for victories in men's singles, ladies' and men's doubles and mixed doubles. The winning Peterborough Club totalled 35 points followed by Belleville with 20 and Picton - Napanee with 5.

In men's singles Peterborough won 7 matches, Picton - Napanee 4 and Belleville one. The champs won 7 of their men's mixed doubles, followed by Belleville with 5. Picton - Napanee failed to gain one point in this section or in ladies' doubles in which Peterborough and Belleville tied with 6 points each. In mixed doubles it was Peterborough piling up 15 points to the locals 8 and 1 by Picton - Napanee.

Out of towners were hosted by the Garrison Club at a party in the Sergeants Mess of the Armouries in the evening. Doug Grant presented his trophy to the Peterborough Club.

Doug Grant's performance in winning only one match all day was matched this year by only Doug Grant "Jr." who teamed with Pat Sayer to win all mixed doubles and with men's doubles partner Bob Callow, lost only one match. Pat also matched the men, after a perfect score in mixed. Singles also teamed with Callow to win all but only 1 match in ladies' doubles. Olga Sayer and Joan Callow also added 3 points each to the Belleville cause.

Picton - Napanee efforts led by Al Sinclair of Napanee who won all singles matches aided by a win from Mike Church of Napanee and Rod Dulmage of Picton. The only other point gained was a win by Mike Church and Rowena Rayvrait in mixed doubles.

The Peterborough club's win was to a great extent a "family affair" with Ed Miskeman and Jackie Callow winning all their single matches, then doubling to win all men's doubles matches. In the afternoon each teamed with his wife to win all mixed matches for a perfect family outing.

At a recent meeting of the Garrison Club it was decided to hold this tournament in September or early December next year as a way of encouraging competition earlier in the season.

Local club championships will be held April 30 and May 1-3rd with presentation of club trophies held at the closing party, May 7.

MONDAY

- The Ferry Cross Music Hall at 9 stars guests Ella Fitzgerald and Caterina Valente — channels 2, 4, 11, and 12.
- Starting this Monday evening, the CBC presents four half-hour programs about the social, cultural, political, and economic aspects of Mexico, a land of contrasts so fascinating that every Canada-Mexico flight is booked weeks ahead. The programs show the wide range of peoples who make up the Mexicans, some living in primitive thatched huts as their ancestors did for centuries, others in luxurious, modern city apartments. The story of Mexico is the story of a people caught between the promises of the future and their deep involvement in the past — channels 11 and 13 at 10 p.m.
- Dick Tiger defends his World middleweight title against welterweight champion Emile Griffith live from Madison Square Garden — at 10 o'clock on channel 13.

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Notes and comment on the Hollywood scene—A reunion of Max von Sydow and Ingmar Bergman will take place this summer. The film: Day of the Wolf.

Von Sydow reported the engagement on a brief trip here to dub his lines in Hawaii and attend the academy awards. The new film will be his eighth for the famed Swedish director, their first together since 1962.

"It is a most unusual script, and Bergman himself wrote it," reported von Sydow. "I can't describe it, except to say that I play a painter who goes mad."

The actor will start the film in Stockholm next month, then report to London for "The Quiller Memorandum," in which he plays a Nazi. He will then return to finish with Bergman.

The two von Sydows—Liv Ullmann and Andrews—are reported to be the best of friends, but they really aren't that close.

KNOWS HER HUSBAND

"I actually know Yvette better," exclaimed Miss Christie on her visit here. She referred to Tony Walton, Miss Andrews' husband. "Julie was kind enough to invite me to her home for Christmas when I was here last year, and we became friendly."

The winning Miss Christie said she wouldn't object to working in Hollywood, but there's no chance for at least two years. She is committed to other projects, including a film with Richard Lester to be filmed in San Francisco.

"It's a good script, and I have an odd commitment with Columbia, anyway," she commented. "I don't like to make pictures in summer because of the children, but they'll be in summer school this year."

She also talked herself into it because of the cast, which includes Dick Van Dyke, Jason Robards and Van Johnson.

Says Audience Infatuation For 'Linear Program' Down

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Thomas W. Moore, president of the ABC television network, has explained in a weekend speech that audience infatuation with what he calls the "linear program" is diminishing down.

A "linear program," says Moore, involves that part of TV staple, the continuing character who each week gets into a new dramatic or adventurous situation.

Moore was not taking shots at continuing characters—the ABC's long-running Ozzie and Harriet, Ben Casey, Dr. Kildare and Robin. He merely was suggesting that there should be greater variety in the programming menu and that the anthology series, which is practically nonexistent today, should be given another chance.

It was interesting in this connection to stack up two weekend programs on ABC. One was what he calls "bread-and-butter" entertainment — Sunday night's episode of The FBI, a fast-moving, fact-based series of cops-and-robbers stories with a continuing character. The other was Friday night's The Poppy Is also a Flower, a 90-minute special that cost a fortune—to produce, was conceived by Ian Fleming, directed by Terrence Young of Thunderball fame, and had at least 15 major stars. It emerged as a long, confusing bore.

PACKAGED NEATLY

The FBI was a neatly packaged story about a bank robbery that was halted in the nick of time—with the usual final shootout—after the hero had secured a ham hock and a button and checked out logical suspects. It was a familiar, smoothly produced and professional job.

But that big special, as attempt to show the United Nations' part in controlling illicit narcotics traffic, was an almost amateurish attempt at a suspense thriller.

It had E. G. Marshall and Trevor Howard playing a pair of middle-aged James Bonds. It had Yul Brynner in a small role as an Iranian military man. Rita Hayworth as a woman addict and Princess Grace of Monaco saying that addiction

TDHL Holds Presentations Banquet

TRENTON — Rev. A. J. Appletop, goallender for the Empey Real Estate team and Wesse Motors forward Tom Baker each took two trophies at the Trenton and District Hockey League's annual banquet and dance held Saturday night at the Royal Canadian Legion hall.

Owner of the best goals-against average during the regular season, 2.37, Father Appleton was also judged the most valuable player. He received the Ostrander Cup and the goaltender's trophy from last year's winner Gayfy Genereaux of Bata Bruins and the 1965-66 MVP Don Phillips presented Jack Parkhill Memorial.

Top point-getter on the regular season was Empey Real Estate's Gord Simmons who scored 56 goals and earned 35 assists for a total of 91 in 35 games. He received the Vipond Trophy from Sonny Foshay of Bata Bruins.

Co-presidents Doug Campney and Wayne Drake made the presentations of team awards. Campney handed over the Courier-Advocate Trophy to Sonny Foshay, captain of first place Bata Bruins while Drake presented the Al's Tires Trophy for the playoff championship to Empey Real Estate captain Kyle Elliott. Master of Ceremonies for the event was Empey's Tom Fleming.

Frontenac Handgunners Top Quinte

Kingston had a total score of 2532 compared to the Quinte Club's 2464.

W. Smith topped the winners with a 546, followed by R. Smith 541, E. Lansdell 501, G. Brown 500 and D. Caskey 462.

R. Sprackett shot for the Quinte Handgunners with 539, D. Wilson had 486, F. Allin 488, J. Brasford 481 and K. Armstrong 478.

The Frontenac club is a regular member of the strong Border Handgun League and fire shooting against Belleville in the two matches proved the value of continual competition.

With the arrival of daylight saving time on the week-end, the district handgunners will resume their regular outdoor shoots.

MONEY TO LOAN

MONEY!

To do what you want to do this Spring — Raise the money from CRESCENT. Phone Crescent and tell us how much money you'd like (a least $50.00 for a week only costs 25c). Ask for a Crescent Spring Money Bouquet. You can choose some beautiful hyper $10Ty's . . . trimmed with bright orange $5Ty's . . . mixed with greenery per 5 $1Ty's . . . and a few lofty hard $2Ty's. Then just come in and pick up your money bouquet as it can be ready in as little as 10 minutes.

Start Your Own Safety Campaign

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Not too long ago a leading safety group estimated that nine out of 10 road accidents are caused by human error. Even if this is a bit exaggerated, it would still indicate that error in judgment are also being made by those who place the greatest blame elsewhere.

The driver of the key. . . and if every one of us were really safety-minded at all times, fatalities — and accidents — would be sharply reduced.

Start your own personal safety campaign with these five basic guides: (1) take nothing for granted at any time, on any road. This will pay off in numberless situations. (2) Don't operate reckless speeding with high speeds. Your car is speeding dangerously whenever it's moving too fast for road, weather, light or traffic conditions. (3) Keep in mind that dusk and dawn are the most dangerous driving times. (4) Keep ample room between you and the car in front. One car length for every 10 mph is a good rule of thumb. (5) Slow down in school areas. Even at 30 mph, your car will travel at least 30 other 25-ft feet before you can brake to a complete stop.

T. J. asks: "How important is correct king pin alignation?"

It is necessary for safe steering and proper front wheel alignment. Uneven tire wear and shimmy often result because king pins are neglected or incorrectly set.

From T. N.: "My engine runs quite rough at 30 mph or less, and yet it runs very smoothly at 55-60 mph no matter how long I drive."

Mrs. H. F. writes: "On our standard shift 65 compact, the transmission gears clash when shifted first thing in the morning. The entire rest of the day, this doesn't happen. I assume this is due to the car sitting overnight in the cold . . . we have no garage."

Right. . . and this means the lubricant is abnormally thick and does not cushion the gears properly in the morning.

From S. D.: "When I take my foot off the gas to slow down, I can hear a rough noise from the rear. One garage says it's probably rear axle trouble. Are they right?"

Gear noise when decelerating often due to too much end play in differential bearing. Cure is a matter of bearing adjustment.

From G. C.: "My car has been pulling to the right side whenever the brakes are used. The right front wheel brake and wheel bearing seem to check out O.K., yet the trouble still persists."

How about the left front brake? A restricted hose or hydraulic line here could make the left wheel braking action weaker than normal, allowing the right to dominate.

Tiger 8-5 Favorite

Griffith Bids For Knockout

NEW YORK (AP) — Welterweight king Emile Griffith, 28, hopes to catch up to a tiring Dick Tiger, 36, in the late rounds and then knock him out in their battle of boxing champions at Madison Square Garden tonight.

The odds, however, favor Tiger by 8 to 5 to make a successful defence of his middleweight title. The 15-rounder starts at 10 p.m. EDT.

"If there's going to be a knockout, the victim won't be me," said Tiger, a Nigerian who never has been stopped or dropped. "I think it will go 15 rounds. But when it's over I'll still be the middleweight champion."

Griffith is bidding to become the first welterweight (147 pounds Mmit) champion to capture the middleweight crown (160 pounds limit). Four others have tried and failed.

REGAINED CROWN

Griffith will be engaging in his 12th championship contest in a three-time reign as king of the welterweights. He has a 9-2 record in title fights.

The battle may lure 15,000 fans into the Garden. A $120,000 Tiger has a guaranteed minimum of $75,000 against 40 per cent of all receipts. Griffith will get 20 per cent—about $40,000. The 5-foot-10 Tiger has a 54-14-3 won-lost-draw record, including 25 knockouts. Griffith, a 5-foot-8 fast boxer-puncher, has a 67-7 record, including 38 knockouts.

Tiger will scale about 158 to Griffith's 153.

Sheffield Meets Everton

LONDON (Reuters) — Sheffield Wednesday and Everton swept into the English Football Association Cup final Saturday, shocking highly-favored Chelsea and Manchester United in the semi-finals of the soccer competition.

Everton beat Manchester United 1-0 to complete a Cup double for the Manchester club, which was knocked out of the European Cup by Partizan Belgrade last Wednesday.

Sheffield Wednesday, inspired by the promise of a £7,000 ($16,800) bonus for a win, whipped Chelsea 2-0.

There was little good soccer in the matches, played on fields made difficult by mud. Crops of fouls spoiled the Chelsea-Sheffield encounter at Aston Villa's ground, where 61,000 spectators paid record receipts of £29,- 629 ($68,287) in gate receipts.

There was tremendous defence, which has played more than 11 hours of Cup soccer this season without conceding a goal, was the basis of a deserved victory over Manchester United in the United semi-final also in top form, both sides' attacks were blunted until near the end of the game.

WAS HERO

Then, with 12 minutes to go, Sheffield forward Jim Storrey got Everton's goal, the club's ticket to the Wembley final May 14. Storrey, who was the hero of a through on the inside-left position and flicked the ball to Harvey, who shot into the corner of the net.

Substitute Pugh, 18 - year - old right-winger, set his club on the victory path against Chelsea when he headed a goal. Goalkeeper McCalling, 19-year-old Scottish inside forward whom Chelsea transferred to Wednesday last September, scored with a header in the last minutes of the game to complete a fine victory for the underdogs.

For both Chelsea and Manchester United, Saturday's each expected defeats were a repeat of their Cup failures last year, when they also were beaten in the semi-finals.

Liverpool, sending only one point to clinch the First-Division English League championship, was next visitor to suffer defeat in the mud at Burnley.

Sheffield Wednesday, victims of First-Division survival by whipping Northampton Town, also threatened with relegation 4-2. Steve Earle scored three goals in Fulham's eighth win in the last 10 matches.

In the Scottish League's First Division, Dundee United picked up two points on Cup winner Celtic and Rangers by defeating Dundee United 2-1.

Hamilton Academicals, already doomed to play next season in the Second Division, shocked St. Mirren, also threatened with relegation, by defeating them 3-2.

St. Mirren and Morton, beaten 3-2 at Falkirk, now go into the last game of the season level on 21 points.

Top Shawinigan 7-2

Generals Pot 5 In Third

OSHAWA (CP)—Oshawa Generals haven't been in the habit lately of waiting until the last few minutes to clinch hockey victories, but that was the case Saturday night in the opener of their Eastern Canada Memorial Cup final.

Shawinigan Bruins, champions of the Quebec junior hockey circuit, used a fluke goal in the first 12 seconds and standout goaltending by Philip Myre to throw a scare into the Generals and 3,818 of their fans before bowing 7-2.

Second game in the best-of-five series is here tonight.

The Generals faced their first serious challenge when they past North Bay Trappers in four successive games in the eastern semi-finals, winning the last game by a margin of at least seven goals.

But Shawinigan star defenceman, Bobby Orr, isn't worked. Orr, who scored a goal and an assist against Oshawa, and the Bruins are stronger than the Trappers, "but they're not as strong as Kitchener."

The Generals polished off Kitchener Rangers 4-1 in their best-of-seven final for the Junior A Ontario Hockey Association championship before meeting North Bay of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association.

Saturday's victory was the sixth in a row for Oshawa and snapped a 12-game undefeated streak by Shawinigan.

Danny Grant, brother of Oshawa's first goal of the game on a shot that wasn't even on goal. He fired a long shot from the boards and the puck rebounded into the Oshawa net off the skate of defender Ian Young. ORR SCORES

Orr scored at 4:25 to tie the game but Clement Tremblay got Shawinigan's other goal on power play late in the first period to give his team a 2-1 lead. Oshawa tied the score again on O'Shea's marker midway through the second period and wrapped it up with five goals in the third.

Canadian Army Finds Weather In Norwegian Arctic Is Warm

By BOB MacKENZIE'

BARDUFOSS, Norway CP — Arctic weather may be a serious defence problem in some parts of the world but it created few complications during Exercise Winter Express in northern Norway.

The mid-March NATO exercise, designed to test Pentagon's northern flank, ran into a few snags but they were caused more by clouds than low temperatures.

The experience showed that the cloud cover could delay airlifts to the rugged mountain terrain, but that men on the ground would have little trouble. Local authorities in this region 180 miles north of the Arctic Circle said the winter was the coldest in 100 years.

But to many Canadians it was mild.

"It's a lot warmer than home," said Staff Sgt. Laurie Dirks of Biggar, Sask., as he waited to board a plane for home.

The three - phase exercise was based on the threat of armed aggression from the east, coming across neutral Finland and Sweden.

First stage was an airlift of troops from Canada, Britain and Italy to take up defensive positions to "show the flag" and act as a possible deterrent.

"We could not get enough men to fight a full - scale war," said Maj.-Gen. Sigurd Sparr of Norway. "But it would show the aggressor he had all of NATO to contend with, not just 3,500,000 people of Norway."

AIR BASE WAS TARGET

Second stage involved a simulated invasion, with the strategic Bardufoss air base as a primary target. Third and final stage was redeployment of troops back to their own nations.

The exercise involved 8,000 men—about half from Norway, Canada, Britain and Italy each contributed a 1,000-man infantry battalion as part of their commitment to NATO's mobile brigade, while the U.S. provided support units from bases in West Germany.

But the week-long battle phase of the exercise was stretching things a little" considering that the allied NATO reinforcements for the Norwegian army numbered only 4,000 men, one U.S. army observer said. In a real war, "at least a couple of divisions" would have been added in this time.

While the weather disrupted supply flights, the force was in position on time despite rescheduling of several flights.

The return trip also ran close to schedule despite poor flying conditions and the crash of a U.S. C-130 Hercules transport which killed all seven crew members.

There were complications on the ground, however.

The mobile force commander, Maj. - Gen. Michael Fitzalan-Howard of Britain, came down with an attack of jaundice and was replaced by Maj.-Gen. W. D. M. Rexburn, also of Britain, chief of staff of NATO's Allied Forces Northern Europe.

There were minor language problems and administrative problems during the fighting phase.

A surprise "enemy" attack found brigade headquarters unprotected when one unit apparently in a language misunderstanding—pulled out, before its replacement force arrived.

A Canadian attack on a bridge and road junction went on for about 20 minutes before the umpires arrived.

"The battle would have been over in 10 minutes if we had been using live ammunition," an unhappy officer of the 1st Battalion, Black Watch, said later.

Some Norwegian units resolved to take matters a little too seriously. They stacked snow-white pallets in vehicles marked with white crosses used to identify press and NATO observers who had unlimited access to both sides.

When other forces tightened security, a couple of reporters were captured and held for a couple hours before they could be identified.

Inquiry Has New Puzzle

By JOHN LeBLANC

OTTAWA (CP) — The Rand judicial inquiry had a new puzzle to sort out today in Mr. Justice Leo Landreville's contention that he did nothing to get stock in a natural gas company until after the firm sewed up a franchise with the City of Sudbury.

The Ontario judge's testimony Monday — an abrupt change from his previous statements before another investigating body—left the federal inquiry trying to sort out a jammed-up timetable of happenings at a pivotal few days of the 1956-57 period in which his behavior is under investigation.

Ivan C. Rand, the retired Supreme Court of Canada justice investigating the inquiry judge's fitness for office, at one point described Mr. Justice Landreville's new evidence as "remarkable."

Mr. Justice Landreville, 58, insisted that while he was mayor of Sudbury he had never suggested to Harry Stoll Jr., Northern Ontario Natural Gas Co. until the city gave final reading to NONG's franchise July 17, 1956.

Mr. Rand is investigating the circumstances under which seven months later—after the mayor had become an Ontario Supreme Court judge—he received 7,500 shares of stock in the company. He netted $100,000 on the transaction.

TIMING DIFFERS

In testimony before a closed hearing of an Ontario government inquiry into much-investigated NONG in 1962, the judge had stated that discussions on the stock purchase began before Sudbury council passed the franchise.

Mr. Watson, a veteran CBC producer, concluded his testimony Monday morning. He has been offered another job—that of producing a CBC program concerning Canada's centennial in 1967.

Dr. Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon) asked Mr. Watson whether speculation was accurate that he wants to be president of the CBC or whether he was lobbying for the job.

Mr. Watson said he had heard recently that his name had been discussed. He said that he had been asked by some friends outside the CBC to produce ideas that might go with the job of president, and he had given some thought to this.

He said that any of these ideas had been available to the president, J. Alphonse Ouimet, for a long while.

Mr. Pelletier announced that the committee would hear executives from both the English and French networks. He said the committee wants to trace the chain of command from bot-

Was Also Petty Thief, Prostitute According To Files of RCMP

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Sex and security background about Gerda Munsinger was placed on the record of a royal commission Inquiry Monday, including statements that she was a petty thief, prostitute and one-time Soviet agent.

Chief commission counsel J. L. O'Brien quoted an RCMP file as stating the 36-year-old German woman had an "illicit sexual relationship" with Pierre Sevigny, former Conservative associate defence minister.

He gave the same source for the statement that Mrs. Munsigner was sufficiently well acquainted with George Hees, former Conservative trade minister, to call him George.

And, without identifying whom he meant, he said an executive assistant to a cabinet minister also was first-named by Mrs. Munsinger while she lived in Canada between 1955 and 1961.

The royal commission inquiry resumes Wednesday.

Mr. O'Brien's summarizing of RCMP reports provided rapid reply to a challenge to the commission's jurisdiction in the case.

Mr. Justice Wishart Spence of the Supreme Court of Canada followed it up by announcing that secrecy surrounding hearings will be lifted as much as possible.

ANSWERS CRITICISM

Noting he had been criticized for holding secret sessions, Mr. Justice Spence said his new policy of publicity where possible "may be damaging to the personal character of persons but I think I will ignore that factor."

Mr. O'Brien said the RCMP file states Mrs. Munsinger was refused entry to Canada in 1952 on security grounds and to the United States in 1953. She was finally admitted in August, 1955, as Gerda Munsinger when European files on her under the

Election Interviews Started His Troubles Says LaPierre

OTTAWA (CP)—Laurier LaPierre said Monday night his troubles with the CBC as co-host of the Seven Days program may have started when management was talked into withdrawing an order that he be barred from interviewing politicians during the last federal election.

Mr. LaPierre told the Commons broadcasting committee that Douglas Leiterman, the producer, had told him management didn't want him to interview politicians during the campaign.

Mr. LaPierre said that in the end he did interview politicians because the issue was fought and "management acquiesced."

The committee headed by newspaper man Gerard Pelletier (Lac-Montreal Hochelaga) is investigating the CBC decision to drop Mr. LaPierre and Patrick Watson as co-hosts of the program This Hour Has Seven Days.

Sunday the Toronto Producers Association said its members would withdraw their services unless Mr. Ouimet accepted a three-point compromise.

Demands include a CBC guarantee that no firings or discip-

CBC Management Bargains To Avert Producers' Strike

TORONTO (CP) —CBC management officials bargained on two fronts Monday to avert a threatened strike by producers, but are expected to consolidate their forces in Toronto today.

Closed - door meetings were held in Toronto all day Monday, but early in the evening CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet and officials of the Toronto Producers Association left for Ottawa to continue meetings there.

A CBC spokesman said the Ottawa group would likely return today to meet again with other Toronto producers and CBC management officials who continued their meetings here Monday night.

The meetings are the latest round in the flare-up resulting from the dismissal of co-hosts Laurier LaPierre and Patrick Watson from the public affairs program This Hour Has Seven Days.

Demands include a CBC guarantee that no firings or disciplined measures will be taken against producers of the program.

On the other, Alberta and Quebec delegates insisted that an Alberta resolution asking for the assignment of CLC public relations officers to regional offices be left intact. This had been deleted in committee, leaving the item, a mere statement of approval for increased public relations efforts.

Alberta speakers said unions in that province are running into an increased number of company unions stimulated by the Social Credit government's anti-labor attitude.

A resolution backing the recommendations of last year's Freedman inquiry into CNR crew run-throughs was adopted overwhelming.

The report of Mr. Justice Samuel Freedman, who studied disputes between trainmen in Winnipeg, Alta., and Nakina, Ont., said labor laws should be amended to give unions the right to negotiate new work methods that adversely affect jobs.

Thousands Excited By Vivid Fireball

NEW YORK (AP) — A vivid fireball flashed across the sky last night, exciting thousands from Toronto and Detroit to Ohio.

Dr. Thomas Nicholson, chairman of the Hayden Planetarium, called it an exceptionally bright meteor that left a multicolored, glowing vapor trail. But he said it was probably 10,000 times brighter than the brightest star at night.

Police switchboards in dozens of communities were swamped with reports of a jet airplane crash and flying saucers.

While there were uncontrified reports that the object burst as it had landed, most observers believe it probably disintegrated during its flight.

Nicholson, who said the fireball probably was moving 35 miles a second, estimated the size at perhaps "several hundred pounds."

But Dr. Fred Whipple, director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., said:

"It was a meteor which must have been less than the size of a foothall."

Countless Belleville and area residents saw the fireball too. Belleville City Police, O.P.P. and R.C.A.F. officials in Trenton were swamped with telephone calls inquiring about flashing light.

Congress Protests Use of Injunctions

WINNIPEG (CP)—Angry demands for a campaign of civil disobedience to force a repeal of laws that allow court injunctions in labor disputes erupted Monday at the opening of the biennial convention of the Canadian Labor Congress.

A mildly - worded resolution protesting the use of injunctions to limit picketing was rejected by the 1,200 delegates after a chorus of demands from the floor for stronger action.

"We should have a policy of massive civil disobedience," said Bob Bouchard of Montreal, a staff representative of the United Steelworkers of America.

A vote to refer the injunction resolution back to committee for revision was overwhelming. The complaint is against injunctions granted without hearings in labor disputes.

There were repeated references to the recent mass demonstrations at Oshawa and Peterborough against picket-limiting injunctions.

Murray Hall of Toronto Labor Council said the Oshawa demonstration was "a glorious day in labor history."

Stanley Rouse, one of 27 men arrested at the Peterborough demonstration, warned that employers are mustering their strength to combat labor's drive against injunctions.

"We should go all the way to civil disobedience to get our rights," another delegate shouted.

Pat O'Neal of the British Columbia Federation of Labor said unions have tried every legal means to win their battle against injunctions.

"The whole process is designed to harass and humiliate labor," he said. Judges were too willing to listen to employers' views.

Morey Davidson of Brantford, a member of the Textile Workers Union, said the courts have been issuing injunctions "like so many sheets of toilet paper."

The resolutions committee was instructed to bring the proposal back in a form that would reflect the views of the speakers. It will be debated in its new form later in the week.

Two other resolutions were thrown back into committee for redrafting.

On one, delegates demanded that a resolution of support for the CBC contain a reference to the controversy over the program This Hour Has Seven Days. Speakers said labor should side with the program's producers against CBC management.

New Bill Given Approval

By PAUL DUNN

OTTAWA (CP) — A former civil servant unveiled a new "Bible" for the civil service Monday and quickly gained early Commons approval for its chapter and verse.

Prime Minister Pearson introduced first a resolution then a bill titled The Public Service Juskice Relations Act.

The 50-page act, with 118 main sections and 10 times that number of minor sections, details a system of collective bargaining for some 200,000 federal employees — and a qualified right-to-strike provisio.

The bill is expected to come up for second reading — approved in principle—next week, and then go to a joint Senate-Commons committee for detailed study and representations by staff associations.

Although first reaction to the long - awaited document was guarded, Mr. Pearson and Claude Edwards, president of the 80,000-member Civil Service Federation, referred to it in complimentary terms.

". . . A measure of great significance in the history of the public service," said the prime minister.

"This is the culmination of many years of effort on behalf of civil servants," Mr. Edwards said in a statement.

Biggest surprise in the proposed bill is the granting of the right to strikes to those who prefer it to compulsory arbitration and whose duties do not fall into

South Viet Nam Entering Period of Political Agitation

SAIGON (AP) — South Viet Nam, hard hit by 20 years of warfare, is entering a political period that may break it—or forge it as a nation.

Whatever happens as a result of the pledge of the commissions of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky to hold elections in three to five months, the war with the Viet Cong guerrillas is likely to continue.

The United States and its allies are not about to give up. And there are signs that North Viet Nam is determined to continue its efforts to spread communism to the southern portion of the divided country.

In this atmosphere, warmongery South Viet Nam, terrorized by guerrillas, harassed by military operations, is entering a period of feverish political agitation.

The tightly-knit Buddhist organizations are seeking power. The minority Roman Catholic [illegible] are struggling to maintain influence. The Hoa Hao and Cao Dai religious sects also are entering the political arena.

New alliances are being forged. The 70 or so political parties, steeped in clandestine activity, are raising their heads. The press is devoting more and more space to politics.

The official program is to hold elections for a constituent assembly. The assembly will draft the constitution and name a civilian government in the place of the present 10-man military regime.

American officials describe the present situation as "politically crucial."

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge is planning to fly to Washington for talks with President Johnson early in May.

Lodge and his advisers feel that elections in South Viet Nam are possible—and this is what [illegible] ambassador most likely will tell the president.

The statement is based largely on the fact that local elections were held last year with 40 to 50 per cent voter participation.

Despite this comparatively optimistic official assessment, the view in high quarters is that one can predict what the future will bring."

A coup may easily topple the junta overnight with its pledges and promises, throwing the country anew into political turmoil. Other political and military factors may easily intervene between now and the promised elections.

Behind their heavily - barricaded walls, American advisers and planners show little optimism in this crucial Viet Nam spring. But there also was a firm determination to stay on.

Man With Artificial Heart Dies 5 Days After Operation

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Marcel Depudder died today five days after doctors implanted a partial artificial heart in him in an operation that held promise for thousands of heart victims.

Doctors attributed death to a possible rupture of his bronchia or trachea through which air passes to and from the lungs. The exact cause would not be known until a post-mortem operation was completed.

Dr. Michael E. DeBakey, who led a team of scientists in the operation last Thursday, was at the bedside of the 63-year-old retired coal miner from Westville, Ill., when death came at 4:04 a.m. EDT in Methodist Hospital.

Derudder had been unconscious since the operation, but the artificial heart designed to relieve the workload of his own damaged organ was functioning at the time of his death, the spokesman said.

Only hours before Derudder's death, DeBakey said the pump "was working fine and the device design had proved itself."

Derudder, who had a 25-year history of heart disease, had been expected to die without the operation, and DeBakey regarded the surgery as a "last-ditch" effort to save his life.

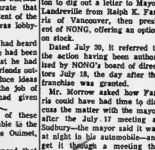
The artificial heart was installed on the left side of his body to give it a partial rest and a chance to heal. It was designed to do the work of the left ventricle, the lower chamber, which pumps blood through the body, and is a common source of heart failure.

Derudder had been at the Texas medical center for a week before the surgery and cardiologists felt "they couldn't help him any longer."



DeBakey told an interview Monday that although biological complications had been a problem, "we don't see why he would have died."

"His own heart still can't assume quite half the work load of a normal heart," DeBakey said several hours before Derudder's death.

Methodist Hospital's last adjoining room was cleared. Derudder continued to show slight improvement from a kidney-anal region, although he "has developed some lung congestion which is being treated by methods usually employed for conditions of this type."

Physicians said Derudder possibly suffered what they termed "temporary brain damage" and began treating him for excessive fluid on the brain.

He then developed the kidney and began treating him for lung congestion announced Monday.

"If win a man would follow me . . . even a Mountie!"

Council Increases Penalties For Dogs Running at Large

Local dog owners who forget to purchase tags for their pets or allow them to run at large are in for a rougher time financially.

Yesterday city council amended its 20-year-old dog by-law to provide for higher penalties and making it more costly for a dog owner to get his pet back after it has been impounded.

Under the new scale of penalties any owner who fails to keep a tag on his dog may be fined a minimum of $5; and for failure to purchase a licence a minimum of $20 and neither the minimum fine for owners, who allow their dogs to run at large.

When a dog is impounded the dog owner will have 72 hours to reclaim it (on payment of another $20 together with the cost of its maintenance). Dogs not reclaimed within the 72-hour period may either be killed or sold at public auction.

Alderman Douglas Boyle spoke in the defence of local dogs, which he said appeared in danger of being legislated out of existence.

But another alderman wanted to know what effect the increased penalties would have if the by-law wasn't enforced.

Mayor J. R. Ellis said the local dog catcher had done a good job, as was shown by the fact that anywhere up to 35 dogs are regularly in the city pound.

Heard Crackling Sound Just Before Explosion

BRIGHTON — "It was as bigaround as a wash tub, circular and tapered off in a trail of bluish light. When I first saw it, it was at about the height of a telephone pole. I heard a crackling sound for ten or fifteen seconds, then it exploded into five or six orange red balls".

These are the eyewitness words of Keith Botting, 17, R. R. 4, Trenton Ont., who with his brother Carl, 16, saw the weird light in the sky at the height of Monday night's flurry of reports of similar sightings from Quebec to Hamilton and resulted in investigations being made to determine the cause in the U.S.A.

As the half dozen smaller lighted particles disintegrated when the object disappeared in the sky to the east over Tilson ton, Keith could see the light disappear and a grey dust fall". The sun was still above the horizon at 8.15 when Keith and his brother spotted the strange light travelling toward the east along the Bay of Quinte shoreline where it exploded and disintegrated.

To Keith Botting a Grade eleven student at East Northumberland Secondary School, Brighton, what he saw he does not feel to be something out of H. G. Wells "War of Worlds" but a comet entering the atmosphere. At the same time the experience has had its effect.

"I've heard neighbors and friends tell about seeing things in the sky, now that I've seen one, I believe it," he said.

PREDICT POWER CAPACITY

OTTAWA (CP)—The installed capacity of nuclear power stations may be slightly more than 10 per cent of Canada's total installed electrical capacity by 1980, Jack Davis, parliamentary secretary to the mines minister, said in a Commons return Monday.

Council Takes No Action on Trash Cans

City council still hasn't made up its mind about those proposed new trash containers for the downtown area.

And it is still looking for some local service club which might be the victim of having one of them take on the purchase.

Public Works Employees Get Wage Increase

Under the agreement between the city and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, local 907, public works employees receive a 15 cent per hour increase as of January 1st this year.

Present hourly rates for works employees range from 1.75 cents per hour for casual and probationary workers, at $1.40 cents for labourers to $2.45 an hour for foremen mechanics.

Obituaries and Funerals

THOMAS HAMILTON IRWIN

Ill for the past nine weeks, Thomas Hamilton Irwin of R. R. 1, Bellefille died Monday afternoon in Belleville General Hospital. He was in his 86th year.

Born in Hallaway, son of the late Mr and Mrs. John Irwin, he had formerly resided in Bayside and at R. R. 1, Bellefille.

Mr. Irwin, a retired farmer, was an adherent of the United Church.

Predeceased by his wife, the former Jeszey Finkle, Mr. Irwin is survived by one son, Eugene of Belle's Corners, and by two daughters, Mrs. William (Doris) Siddall of Ingleside and Mrs. Ernest (Helen) Kelly of R. R. 5, Bellefille. He has seven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. Also surviving is one sister, Alice (Mrs Harry Kennedy) of Bellefille.

Mr. Irwin is resting at the John R Bush Funeral Home until the funeral Thursday afternoon. Funeral announcement elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. MARY WHEELER

MARMORA — Mrs. Mary Wheeler, 85, died suddenly at her home, Victoria Street, Marmora on Thursday. She was born and educated at West Plain, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jeffry of Napanee. She was predeceased by her husband Anson Wheeler.

Surviving are her parents, and four daughters, Mrs. Ida Hicks (Joan) of Toronto; Miss Barbara Wheeler, Smith Falls (Ont.; Miss Marion Wheeler (Marie) Smith Falls; Mrs. L. Wright, (Rachael) R. R. 1 Bellefille. One son, Ernest Wheeler, Bellefille and two brothers Phillip Jeffry, Kingston and Harold David of Napanee. The funeral was held at the Howden Funeral Home on Saturday and Rev. W. H. Dawson conducted the service.

The bearers were Cody Wheeler, George Storms, Everett Woodcock, Samuel Switzer, Edward Naven, Clark McMurter. Interment was in Zion Cemetery.

MRS. STANLEY EMBURY

DESERONTO — A life-long resident of the Deseronto district, Mrs. Mabel Gertrude Embury died on Saturday at the Belleville General Hospital. She had been in failing health for almost a year, and hospitalized for about three months. She was in her 67th year.

Surviving are her husband, Stanley Embury, a nephew, William Donaldson of Kingston, and a brother-in-law, Thomas Clarence Hough of Peterborough. She was the last surviving member of her family.

The funeral service was held Monday, April 25, 1966, in the United and Morris Funeral Home at 2.00 p.m., the Rev. Russell Finley officiating.

Interment was in Deseronto Cemetery.

Mrs. Embury was born in Desoronto the daughter of William Donaldson and his wife, who was Annie Arthur before her marriage. From them she learned the art and the love of gardening. At an early age she began a hobby which continued throughout her life. She and her husband were market gardeners on the outskirts of Deseronto until a few years ago, when they purchased the home on Princes St. where her husband still resides. Here they continued to garden, but on a smaller scale, and their well - kept gardens, not only in vegetables, but also in flowers, were a delight to visit.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Embury were of a quiet nature, devoted to each other, their home, and their garden. They were of an independent nature and as such were good neighbors, who delighted in sharing the fruits of their garden, in a quiet way.

Mrs. Embury, while not taking an active part in the women's organizations because of other work, was a faithful member and regular attendant of the United Church.

JOHN JOSEPH MACAULEY

The funeral of John Joseph Macauley of Hastings Manor, Bellefille was held Monday morning from St. Francis de Assisi Church, in Frankford to the parish cemetery, Rev. Father J. F. McGarvey officiating.

The bearers were Marvin Dalton, Thomas Kidston, Tom Hall and Farrar, H. J. Gillard, Milford Macauley and Frank Orr.

In failing health for some time, Mr. Macauley died Friday in Belleville General Hospital. He was in his 77th year.

Born in Murray Township, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Macauley, he was a resident of Frankford before going to Hastings Manor in 1962.

Mr. Macauley, a retired employee of the Bata Shoe Company, was an adherent of St. Francis of Assisi Church in Frankford and a member of its Holy Name Society.

Predeceased thirty years ago by his wife, the former Irene Latry, Mr. Macauley is survived by four sons, Vincent of Frankford, Joseph of Trenton, Father Peter of Batawa, and Leonard of Toronto, and by one daughter, Mrs. Leo (Marie) Donohoe, R. R. 4, Stirling. He had 18 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. Mrs. Macauley was the last member of his family.

CLAYTON CHARLES VANDERWATER

(R. R. 1, Moira)

Ill for the past two weeks, Mr. Clayton Charles Vanderwater, R. R. 1, Moira, died at Tuesday in Belleville General Hospital. He was in his 77th year.

Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vanderwater, he was born at Moira and had lived all his life in the area where he farmed on the 1st Concession.

He was a member of Moira United Church.

He is survived by his wife, the former Edith Welsh, a stepdaughter Mrs. Harold (Lily) Carlson of Belleville, and by one son William Miller of Belleville. There are two granddaughters and one great-grandson.

Also surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Samuel (Lila) Bond of Toronto, and Mrs. Thomas (Sem) Smith of Bellefille, and by Brother Dan Vanderwater of Belleville.

The funeral will be held from the Earl Gerow Funeral Home on Friday afternoon with interment in Moira Cemetery.

OSCAR JOSEPH LaVALLEE

TWEED — The funeral of Oscar Joseph LaVallee of Tweed was held Monday morning from the Cassidy Funeral Home to St. Carthagh's Church, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Dean C. E. Jones, P.P. Rev. Father Brieland and Rev. P. Carty officiated in the Sanctuary. Interment was in the Tweed Cemetery.

The bearers were William Barnett, Kenneth Fisher, Felix Lesage, Fred Fobert, and Louis Verrenne Rathbone.

Mr. LaVallee died Friday in Bellefille General Hospital after a short illness. He was in his 71st year.

Born in Sorel, Quebec, son of the late Joseph and Rose Vallee and Maria Rajotte, Mr. LaVallee is survived by his wife, the former Hester Greenacre, whom he married in Tweed in 1920.

Also surviving are four sons, Benedict, Kenneth and John, all of Tweed, and Colin of Toronto, and eight daughters, Eunice (Mrs. Peter McGown) of Frankford, Pauline (Mrs. Edmund Coumpsey) of Tweed, and Marie (Mrs. Bruce Mainland) of Bellefille. Mr. LaVallee is survived by 28 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. He had 23 grandchildren.

A member of St. Carthagh's Church and of the Holy Name Society, Mr. LaVallee was also a member of the Tweed Council of the Knights of Columbus. He was an employee at the Eastern Lumber Company for 40 years.

Dr. H. Swann Tells of Change In Trinidad

The Rev. Harold Swann, D.D. of Belleville, who spent 25 years in Trinidad as principal of a teachers' training college, is visiting the new independent island nation in the Caribbean last year to find many of his former students in positions of responsibility in the country's administration, the judiciary and the civil service.

"Here is a land (Trinidad and its sister land of Tobago) which has received its independence and is now a parliamentary democracy with a cabinet system of government," Dr. Swann told Belleville Rotarians Monday.

He went on to thank relatives and friends for their kindness to him and paid a tribute of our late parents. We remember with affection Mrs. Thomas Shoemaker of Belleville who received from the faith and encouragement of our parents. Mrs. Countryman of Belleville, who was also a friend of our parents. 80 Per Cent of City Streets Said Sub-standard or Near It

Belleville is facing a problem of great magnitude if its substandard streets are to be upgraded and provided with curbs and gutters and asphaltic concrete surfaces.

City engineer Wilbur Purcell, in a preliminary report to council on needed street reconstruction in Belleville, said that of the 84.5 miles of streets in the city, about 67.5 miles, or 80 per cent of the total, are now, or very soon will be in a substandard state.

The sub-standard condition results from poor surface characteristics, base failures, deteriorated curbing or no curbing at all, deteriorated sidewalks, lack of adequate storm drainage provision and lack of traffic capacity because of pavement width.

COST $15 MILLION

Cost of bringing the city's streets up to standard is estimated at nearly $15,000,000 a percentage of which would be paid through local improvement charges.

Mr. Purcell said it was important that the local improvement procedure be decided upon by council as early as possible, as the department of highways subsidy on road construction carried out under local improvements is based on that portion of the cost chargeable to the general rate.

Any program or schedule of work set out to accomplish the street re-construction would be governed by the availability of funds, but it was pointed out that the length of the program must be limited to the number of years that would permit its completion before streets reconstructed in the early stages become obsolete through age.

It was suggested the program be accomplished in a 20-year period by the use of three mills per year and an estimated $320,000 per year from the capital works fund.

Alderman Dr. Russell Scott was appointed to head up a special committee to study the engineer's report and bring in a recommendation to council.

Council approved of a separate report from the engineer respecting storm sewer drainage in the eastern section of the city, and approved installation of a sewer system at an estimated cost of $30000. Of this amount the city's share is estimated at $220,000. The project is included in the city's 1966 capital works budget.

PASS TRAFFIC REPORT

A special traffic report submitted to council a month ago by Ald. Jack Deacon was approved by council, subject to this year's budget discussions.

The report recommended erection of traffic signal lights at Bridge and Church Streets, Victoria and Herchimer, and at Farley and Victoria, as well as appropriate signal and w a l k lights at the intersection of Coleman and Catherine Streets.

Creation of a by-pass route at the Bleecker and Pine Street intersection, and a report on the cost of alleviating a dangerous curve (suicide curve) on Canniffon Road were also recommended.

The recommendations to council were made by the committee following meetings with Police Chief J. B. McLauchlan, Traffic Inspector Ralph Blackford and the city engineers. Committee members were Aldermen Jack Deacon, Jack Allin and Thomas Carruthers.

Youth Given Three Days

Bobby Ernest Clapp, 21, was sentenced to three days concurrent on charges of wilful damage and causing a disturbance.

The charges arose from a fight at Mark's Fish House April 6 during which Clapp broke a showcase window and the glass in the front door of the restaurant.

Restitution of slightly over $150 has been made.

"You can thank your sister for this light sentence," Magistrate T. V. Wills said, "and for heaven's sake don't let her down.

"If you come back here again I'll have to send you away for a good while."

District Students Are Awarded Prizes

The 1966 three-month course in dairy manufacturing recently concluded at the Kemptville Agricultural School, was attended by 16 students. An additional 15 young men attended a three-week course in milk testing and grading in January. Eleven of the 16 were awarded the dairy school diploma.

Terry Baxter, Lansdoun, Ont. headed the class, and was awarded the general proficiency prize. Other first prize winners included R. D. Jackson, Springbrook, Ont., who won the Ont. Dairy Manufacturers Association prize. Donald Davy, Trenton, Ont., received the prize for chemistry and bacteriology. The Lawrason Trophy, awarded on the basis of practical work was won by L. E. Nelson, Stirling, Ont.

150 Years Ago

Friday 24th — Making out the amount of the Expenses of Survey.

Notes: The Surveyor General's department literally counted every pencil, as well as every shilling. Senior Surveyor William Chewett in 1790 made the following suggestion:

"I most humbly beg leave to lay before you my opinion of the manner the Surveying Parties may be reduced so as to answer ills, as proposed, and I do most candidly think that the subcommissioned Party will be sufficient to carry on the Surveys as made by the American Surveyor.—viz.—1 Cook, 2 Chainbearers, 1 Blazer, 3 Axemen to open the Line.

"As the Surveyor doth not act by a line of Theodolite, but by a Line of Trees, it is presumed he will have his circumferential continuation in his hand, and therefore, he has no occasion for a man to carry it.

"By the foregoing statement which cuts off from each party three men, you will save fifty dollars per month to make any additional allowance to the remaining seven men, per party, and provision you may deem requisite."

In 1816, the government wrote Surveyor Henry Smith regarding the proposed survey of Belleville, and his following reply surgests a possibility of saving money.

"I duly rec. yours dated the 19th Instant, with regard to the laying out the intended Village in Thurlow, would just with to observe that laboring men cannot be hired here under six shillings, three pence per day. Notwithstanding that difficulty will be remedied by the Gentlemen residing on the lands who propose to make up the deficiency. You will therefore please to communicate your Instructions to me if you think proper, or to some other Surveyor (as I rather you would if convenient) as I have been long indisposed with the Tyfus fever, and just recovering. Also I would beg leave just to observe, that the place where the ridge now stands seems the best for that purpose and as it naturally appears that a street should proceed directly therefrom which will not correlate the plan before us I beg you will communicate your sentiments thereon and further I would just state that the Indian Lot is upwards of 100 links to narrow and some dissatisfaction seems to prevail among the People thereon, allso the Boundary line connecting between Lots 3 and 4, has been proved by the Joint affidavits of two persons, if you should please to send your Instructions, I shall proceed with the business as quick as my state of health will permit."

There were these other developments in the Commons Thursday:

—Final approval was granted a government bill giving the federal fisheries minister the authority to develop the industry.

—The House voted 93 to 55 to give first reading to a private bill of Auguste Choquette (L—Lotbiniere) to repeal the provincial power to commute death sentences, after Speaker Lucien Lamoureux rejected a bid by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker to block the bill's introduction.

Former Trust Officer Faces Two Warrants

TORONTO (CP) — Two warrants have been issued for the arrest of William A. Pike of Stratford, former mortgage officer of British Mortgage and Trust Co., on charges of accepting a $10,000 bribe before dispensing the company's funds to a borrower.

Det. Sgt. Ian Hucheon of the provincial police readers squad said Monday he took out the warrants Thursday after investigating Pike's actions when lending the company's money to William King and his son, David, builders of Treasure Island Shopping Centre at London, Ont.

Memoirs Under Fire

LONDON (CP)—Sir Winston Churchill's son joined today in the criticism of his father's doctor for publishing memoirs describing the mental and physical decline of Britain's great wartime leader.

In a letter to The Times, journalist Randolph Churchill accused Lord Moran, Sir Winston's physician for 25 years, of publishing his diary against the Churchill family's wishes. He expressed doubt his father knew of the doctor's intention.

School Board Member Resigns

Mr. Norman Moore, former manager of the Royal Bank here, and city member on the Bay of Quinte District High School Board, has resigned his seat on the board.

Notification of the resignation was before council last night and council will appoint a new member to fill the unexpired portion of the term which lasts until Dec. 31, 1967. Mayor Ellis said the appointment would be made in two weeks.

Pleads Guilty To Charge of Break, Enter

A Belleville youth was remanded two weeks by Magistrate T. V. Wills today on a charge of breaking and entering.

Robert Woods, 18, 82 Emily St., pleaded guilty. The crown testified that on March 1 at 1.30 a.m., a report was received by police that a vehicle was seen in front of the Belleville Livestock Sales Barns on North Front St.

A car, driven by Steven Dunning was picked up later. A jack and flashlight, reported missing from the Sales Barn, were recovered in the car. Woods was arrested later at his home.

Dunning is now serving two months.

The case was remanded to give the crown the opportunity to determine the cost of damage to the Sales Barn property.

Council Sets Monday as Budget Day

May Day is B-DAY!
Budget Day in Belleville, that is.

Yesterday city council s e t Monday, May 1st, as the date for the annual budget meeting, and it is expected to be a long one.

Council will convene at 3:30 in the afternoon to hear the auditor's report and commence going over budget estimates for the year. There will be a break for the supper hour and then back to work until the job is completed.

maiden name Gerda Hessler would have been destroyed.

The RCMP file stated she associated with underworld characters in Montreal and paid protection as a prostitute. Her European background included admitting espionage for Russia and "entanglements" in forged documents, petty thievery and prostitution.

Mr. O'Brien said the RCMP considered her vulnerable to pressure, although there was no indication she was in touch with Russian intelligence while in Canada.

The RCMP also thought her associates were prime targets for blackmail by racketeers.

Mr. O'Brien said this information was in files about which RCMP Commissioner George B. McClellan and former commissioner Clifford W. Harvison testified in a court of law.

GAVE MINISTER FILE

They had testified that the file was "submitted to the minister of justice" in order to the facts in it. The falsity of the reports, he said, anything to do with the action taken once they handed" the reports to the government.

Mr. Justice Spence invited E. A. Goodman, counsel for Mr. Hees, to have his client repeat at an open session the testimony he gave in secret a week ago. At that time, Mr. Goodman's application for an open hearing was rejected.

Mr. Diefenbaker said former Conservative justice minister Donald Fleming has asked to appear before the commission Thursday.

Jules Deputer, counsel for Mr. Hees, said the latter client hopes to appear after the RCMP witnesses have been cross-examined Wednesday.

Mr. Sevigny has said his relationship with Mrs. Munsinger was social and non-political and the facts would prove the controversy a "big story about nothing."

Mr. Hees said in a statement to the Commons last month that he lunched twice with a woman who may have been Mrs. Munsinger although he did not know her by that name.

Hear Address On Landscaping

The general meeting of the Belleville Horticultural Society will be held at Moira Secondary School on April 18, at 8 p.m. with approximately fifty members and friends present.

Mr. Mitchell, who is Guelph graduate, gave a very interesting address on "Landscaping", offering many timely hints to would-be gardeners. He discussed the care and growth of flowers and lawns, MERCY-elective questions were answered by Mr. Mitchell at the close of his lecture.

Mr. Frank Becker thanked Mr. Mitchell.

The president outlined briefly the recent "workshop" held at Brighton. Two four delegates from Belleville were Mr. C. A. Smith Capt, J. Buchanan, Mrs. R. W. Norris, and Mrs. W. Yates.

Consulting engineers have recommended that the Dundas Street bridge and roadway project be done in three stages and state that re-alignment of Bay Bridge Road and construction of an overpass over the CPR tracks should be the first step.

However, earlier this year council voted to proceed first with the bridge construction and the Moira River, leaving the roadway and railway overpass construction to the last.

Businessmen in the area below the Devil's Elbow hill have objected strenuously to the overall plans, claiming the proposed high level of the new Dundas Street roadway would have the effect of cutting their business off from direct entrance to Dundas Street.

The proposed 4-lane College Street bridge however is expected to go ahead this year as planned.

The by-law authorizing the project has received first and second reading in council and application will be made to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval as soon as arrangements have been made with respect to temporary financing.

Dumas and Smith were instructed to proceed with the preparation of detailed specifications, to obtain Department of Highways approval and to prepare tender documents.

Cost of the four-lane bridge has been estimated in the neighborhood of $240,000.

CNR Revenue Up

The Rapido, Canadian National Railways' crack express train between Toronto and Montreal, is reported to be averaging 2,400 passengers a week, with peak capacity yet to be attained.

CN's annual report shows the company carried more than 17 million passengers (almost as many as there are people in Canada) in 1965, an increase of 12½ per cent over 1964. And since the CN-CP pool system between Toronto and Montreal was dropped there has been a 20 per cent increase in passenger traffic on that route.

This is a very encouraging trend for Canadian National and it is proof of the efficacy of its low fare schedules allied to vigorous advertising and salesmanship.

Nevertheless, Canadian National is still operating on a large deficit and the company is well aware of the need to increase passenger revenues still further.

There is also room for improvement in passenger comfort. To travel between Toronto and Montreal on a busy holiday weekend is to find things are not quite as comfortable as the advertisements claim. At least this was our own experience at Easter when it was some time before we were able to find a seat-or-the claim as our own. For some time we sat in one left vacant only because its owner was in the dining car.

Getting people seated seems to account for some degree of confusion when large numbers of people board at any one point, and there is a lot of wandering up and down the train by people carrying luggage and wearing a "nowhere to go" look on their bewildered faces.

An American railroad which serves the Atlantic coast all the way to Florida is reported to be introducing hostesses. As the airlines have long since discovered, it goes a long way toward making travel as pleasant as possible.

Some time ago we suggested Canadian National might do the same. If the Americans are giving a lead in this matter, it may not be long before we have hostesses on the CN routes, their duties might include giving information to passengers on the route over which they are travelling. In the Prescott area, for example, the train passes close to the St. Lawrence Seaway. At this point passengers could be told of the river and the New York shore. There is the international bridge near Johnstown, grain elevators and other interesting sights.

This is an historic area. It was the scene on both sides of the river — of a number of important engagements in the war of 1812. Yet passengers are scarcely aware of its importance in this respect. A commentary, or brochures containing such information, would make the journey even more pleasant and interesting.

Men of Mettle

While much of their ruggedness in this respect comes from experience (even the most bitter and persecuted of leaders must end sometime), it takes a lot of nerve to withstand the awesome pressures of political life.

Not only is there the work of parliament to be considered, the needs of constituents as well — the meetings, the public speeches, etc. — for ministers the never-ending responsibilities of their departments.

Yet the true-blue politician just keeps going and displays seemingly superhuman powers in fighting off fatigue, exasperation and the other pressures that usually daunt lesser men.

Prime Minister Pearson, who has just celebrated his 69th birthday, is a good example. Photographed recently with his two grandchildren ,the prime minister certainly belied his years. Yet he has weathered a great deal in a long and distinguished career.

Part of the success of such men is that they are in politics because they like it, and because this is the field in which they can serve their country best. Knowing this — knowing that they are helping to make history — is what turns out men of unusual mettle. Such a man is Lester Pearson.

North Country Tour

One of the most beneficial centennial projects to b eannounced to-date is that of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire in Ontario. The provincial group of the IODE is financing a scheme to send 25 teenage boys from southern Ontario on a tour of the north country.

Mrs. W. R. Morrison, provincial president, describes the project as an adventure in which teenagers will see the vastness of their province.

The trip will include Moosonee, Moose and northern shipping harbors in Hudson Bay. The tour, to cost $5,000, will take place during the first three weeks in July. School principals will select the boys from the 16 to 17 age group completing grade 11.

Like the exchange plans between Ontario and Quebec this is the sort of initiative we need in this country — so vast and yet so unknown to young and old alike.

Overactive Children Need Expert Attention

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

I have had inquiries from mothers of hyperkinetic or overactive children: I've had letters from mothers who didn't know what ailed their youngsters. One described her eight-year old:

"I have tried everything to settle her down. Her school grades are dropping because her teacher says she refuses to do her work even though she apparently can do it. I have tried punishment, talking, no TV, etc., but they don't seem to help."

* * *

There is such a thing as an overactive thyroid in children. Although it is rare, it must be considered. But there is also hyperkinesis: because of a neurological condition the child is so wound up, nervously, that he or she "has to be doing something" all the time, and does so to excessive and unhealthy useful. This compelling urge to be constantly active finds its outlet in jitters, fussing, tinkering, talking, teasing, walking around, fidgeting, anything.

Naturally such a child is a perpetual annoyance to others in the schoolroom who are trying to work. Couple this to the fact that the child himself has a very short span of attention—leaps from one activity to another — and you have a picture of a child who cannot get along in school, no matter how bright he is basically.

And these children are not dull or incapable. They are driven by an inner nervous pressure they cannot subdue. Studies have shown that certain areas of the brain are unresponsive to ordinary stimulation, and the child reacts by being overactive or hyperkinetic.

* * *

This supersensitivity tends to quiet down as such a child approached puberty. However, by then the pressures may have been such that the child is emotionally warped.

Hence it is important to help him through the early troubles if it is possible. Fortunately, it is very often possible. A mild sedation may help, but oddly enough, a wholly different type of drug sometimes is even better, one that gives a "lift." This appears to help the child focus his unruly energies into useful activities instead of random action.

Clearly this requires expert diagnosis as well as knowledge about what medication to give and how much. The truly overactive child must not be confused with one who merely needs discipline.

Child psychiatrists or psychologically sophisticated professionals can distinguish between the two, and then some real progress becomes possible.

When the child is genuinely overactive, neither a demand that he use will power nor punishment can cope with his inner pressures. Punishment will merely make him resentful and rebellious because he can't help it.

There is no way for average parents to diagnose overactivity but knowing a little about it can help them decide when it is time to get expert advice and diagnosis.

Dear Dr. Molner: What do you think of whirlpool baths for tired, aching muscles? — L. O. Whirlpools have been in use medically for a long time. They add a form of massage to the soothing effect of a hot bath. The important thing is to know when the tiredness and aching stem from some underlying disease that needs other treatment.

* * *

Note to Mrs. W. S.: There is no medical reason to believe that masturbation is harmful. It is extremely common among boys at some time in their lives. Among girls the proportion is lower, but still hardly small. I think you are torturing yourself to no purpose by worrying. Just ignore the practice. Time will take care of it.

April 26, 1966 . . .

The Pazzi Conspiracy against the Medici family of Florence came into the open 488 years ago today—in 1478 —when the two senior Medici brothers were stabbed while attending high mass in the cathedral. The younger was killed but Lorenzo, called "the Magnificent," escaped and took vengeance on the Pazzi family. Some members were hanged at the windows of their palace, others dragged to their death in the city streets. The pope, who was implicated in the Pazzi plot, declared war on Florence, but Lorenzo arranged a reconciliation and ruled in republic unchallenged until his death in 1492.

Return To Sanity

Winnipeg Free Press

The first lesson to be learned (by MPs) at the grass roots is the people's demand for action in place of political intrigue, for legislation in place of oratory, for leadership in place of manoeuvre, for sanity in place of scandal and hysteria: above all, for decisions in place of party welfare.

Shameful Incident

Kingston Whig - Standard

It is a relief to know that the suffering and torment endured by the whale which ventured some 70 miles up the James River in Virginia have mercifully been ended—no thanks to the most savage, callous crassness of all. Forty bullets, fired from the guns of who knows how many men, finally resulted in death for the harassed mammal.

Nobody is quite certain as to the beginning of this shameful incident, but the whale first received public attention a week ago. When sighted at that time the whale had already been used for target practice many times. The creature was still alive and swimming strongly. However a commercial fisherman decided that the whale was a menace to river navigation, secured a rope around it, tied it to a boat and dragged 13 more heavy-calibre bullets into the body. When he attempted to tow it away, however, the whale once again showed signs of life, broke the lines and swam away.

On Friday, the whale finally died. The official announcement came from the State Commissioner of Fisheries and the Governor of Virginia who said that the carcass would be towed out to sea.

But where was officialdom when, as it struggled vainly to survive, the creature was suffering from man's inherent cruelty?

Farms Give Low Return

Saskatoon Star-Phoenix

In 1963, the average work week totalled 38.8 hours and the weekly wage was $78.90, in specified industries. These included metal and coal mining, manufacturing, construction, and service. In the construction category are buildings and structures, highway, bridges and streets. By comparison, the Saskatchewan farm worker put in at least 70 hours per week, varying with the type of farm operation, and he received less than $40 per week, without board, in 1964.

It is obvious from the foregoing figures that farmers cannot compete with industry for manpower. The advantage is weighed in favor of industry because its workers are eligible for unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation.

Ottawa Offbeat

Listening to Constituents Is Major Part of MPs Task

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Out of the debate on capital punishment has come an entirely new classification of Members of Parliament.

And one — since each side was so firmly dug in, so emotionally committed — that may see the line of the new division become even more clear and hard.

In the debate, the line was drawn not just between the abolitionists and the retentionists, but, as it turned out, between those MPs who consider themselves as assigned to the business of Parliament independent of almost any reference to or influence by public opinion at home.

Generally the abolitionists debated and of course, voted on the basis that they had been sent to Ottawa to think for themselves and make up their own minds — even should their thinking and decision be in direct contradiction to the majority opinion in their constituencies.

Generally, too, the abolitionists were the representatives of the ridings in the larger metropolitan areas, although there were some exceptions to this almost geographical rule of thumb.

ELECTED? APPOINTED?

Some of the abolitionists said quite frankly, with a few, there was good reason — considered themselves as intellectuals.

They spoke and so otherwise deported themselves as if they were a thinking scratch or two above the mental level of the Commons.

As this would give them a flatteringly lofty IQ since, in theory at least, Parliament is supposed to contain the pick of the crop of men of public affairs in each community.

Some of them also regarded themselves as somet hing of the elected, talented, on the grounds of coming from the larger and supposedly more enlightened population centres, better understanding and appreciation of the many complicated factors of crime and law enforcement.

The other — the retentionist — side of the capital punishment coin?

Well, most of these MPs have taken the position that while they, too, have been sent to Parliament to think for themselves, the fact that they were elected imposes on them an obligation to consider the opinions as well as the wishes of the majority of their constituents.

They regard themselves as subject to influence and perhaps even pressure—by what they determine is the community opinion back home.

How do they establish it? Well, is the majority of community feeling on an issue that catches the public interest and arouses emotion?

By careful reading of their mail from ridings, by keeping an ear to the public interest and listening aided—in scores of cases — by telephoned threats of vituperation from anonymous callers. Abusive letters are also employed in this cruel form of harassment. Investigation by the defence department of a Hundred such communications has revealed no common pattern, much less a common source. They reflect the sadism and irrationality of the diseased minds.

Mostly they come from the smaller centres, some of them from largely rural constituencies.

But in these days of instant communication, of newspapers, rapid travel, ever higher standards of education and living, they claim no less understanding and appreciation of such basic factors as life and death and crime and punishment than their supposedly more sophisticated and self-considered intellectual colleagues from the cities.

In fact, they like to think that with smaller populations to serve, they are in closer community touch with things because they have the time and inclination, (and know the names and faces), to get around the ridings on personal basis and ask.

They say that if it was intended they should come to Ottawa to debate and decide the issues independent of public opinion at home, theirs should have been appointed rather than elective office.

Perhaps a bit old-fashioned — at least in the eyes of those in City colleagues — these MPs from the smaller centres and rural areas contend that if they ask for a man's vote at election time, it puts them under a moral obligation to at least try even consider that man's thinking on the issue.

On a wider basis, the onus is to listen to the community at large, and represent it in the voting in the House of Commons.

A Study in Superfluity

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I should like to read or hear, just once about tasks that aren't brass , questions that aren't moot, coasts that aren't clear, fates that aren't worse than death, and a mean that isn't golden.

And, just once, a null without a void, a might without a may, a far without a wide, a six of one without a half-dozen of the other, tooth without a nail, and ways without means.

And, just once, an unfit fiddle, a warm cucumber, a young hill, a stupid owl, a hard impeachment, a vague direction, a sage's paradise, feet of gold, the pepper of the earth, an unbaked plutocrat, and a sad Lothario.

And, just once, a social catastrophe, Father Knows, a carriage of one's eye, an uncracked dawn, a picture of illness, ignorance in the form of a tower of weakness, an unsure slowness, a love-grass, and a lively earnestness.

And, just once, a fair without a square, a safe without a sound, a sackcloth without ashes, a wear without a tear, a fast without a bone, a race without a rule, a kill without a cure, a long without a short, and a storm without a port.

And, just once, a merciless errand, an ungrieved error, an unpsychological moment, a light horse, a live certainty, an indicative effect, an embarrassment of poverty, a virtual quandary, an enactated rule, and a someone who has been frightened into his senses.

And, just once, a nail that is not hit on the head, a feather that will knock you down, a gift that doesn't come from the gods, a bad Samaritan, a delicate expenditure, a law that doesn't drop, and a heart in the wrong place.

And, just once, an ungilded lily good dirty fun, tepid congratulations, a wagon hitched to a meteorite, something that costs an ugly penny, someone who is poor and forgotten, and someone who would go through fire but not through water.

And, just once, a line without a cry, a hem without a haw, a hit without a miss, aither without a nor, a bird in hand, a shoulders, a spick without a span, a hammer without a nail, fish on a string or a net or a gas but not in a bottle, a prophet without honor, and purse by without simply.

And, just once, sweet grapes, soft sayings, a considered bone, a tempest in a coffespot, a duck song or a goosesong but not a swansong, a hill that is taken by the tail, and a rhinestone in the rough.

TORONTO STOCKS TODAY

TORONTO (CP) — Industrials were the only major section to show any strength in morning trading that followed the Toronto Stock Exchange as share turnover took a sharp decline.

A total of 973,000 shares changed hands at 11 a.m., well below the 1,432,000 that traded at the same time Monday.

Industrials were up 0.10 to 170.31 while the TSE 25 index 161.55. Golds dropped 2.42 to 165.85, base metals .08 to 94.79 and western oils .01 to 114.37.

Jaye, which climbed 14 cents on more than 1,300,000 shares last week, added 17 to 30 cents on 677,620. The company is expected shortly to release information on its exploration activities in the Yukon.

Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd., which rode a spectacular boom and bust cycle on rumors in July 1964, rose 8 to 39 cents on 156,000 shares.

The company has turned its attention to exploration well in British Columbia from its Timmins property. In 1964, the stock soared from 10 cents to 98 on rumors that were eventually denied of a copper find in the Timmins area.

Industrials were mixed. Aluminium gained 1¼ to 43¼ as speculation persisted that the aluminum may be used as a substitute for copper as world copper prices skyrocketed.

Golds suffered the largest group loss. Dome slid 1¼ to 39, Giant Yellowknife and Kerr-Addison ⅛ each to 11⅝ and 12¾.

Base metals were fractionally higher with Pyramid up ⅛ to 10⅜ and Rio Algom ¼ to 22. Canada Tungsten climbed as much as ¾ to 10¼.

Of the actives, industrials were off 0.10 to 170.11, golds 1.97 to 163.27 and the TSE .01 to 161.42. Base metals were up .04 to 94.75 and western oils .32 to 114.68. Volume was 3,029,000 shares compared with 4,004,000 Friday.

Bridge Street United Choir Presents Stirring Messiah

(By EUGENE LANG)

George Frederic Handel's crowning masterpiece in the field of religious music is his monumental oratorio "Messiah" which is perhaps the most popular large sacred work in existence. Written in a surge of heated inspiration, the entire composition was composed in the short space of twenty-one days — days of tremendous physical fatigue for the composer, for at times he would go for a day or two without eating, so great was his interest in the composition of this immortal opus. Since its first appearance in Dublin, Ireland, on April 13th, 1742, "Messiah" has been performed more steadily in English-speaking countries than any other choral work in existence.

Last evening a large congregation was in attendance at Bridge Street United Church for a performance of this well known colossus. Seldom is this oratorio given in its entirety, last night being no exception, but a total of forty of the original fifty-six numbers were performed by the Bridge Street United Church Choir with additional instrumentalists, under organist under the direction of Robert Reid.

To attempt to review this performance section by individual section is well nigh impossible, so a general comment (pro and con) culled from hither and thither must suffice. The four soloists gave a fine showing of their vocal prowess throughout. Soprano Hazelane Reid sang with distinction her musical stature in this district with every succeeding appearance and displayed a singing proved this statement once again. Two notable examples of her artistry were her adept handling of the lively pace set in "Rejoice, Greatly, O Daughter of Zion" and the poignant utterances in "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth." Visiting soloist Elaine Rose maintained a high standard of rendition in all of her arias. One that stood out was her soulful importation of "He Was Despised." Tenor Garnet Brooks from Queen's Park had good voice in his solos, with "Every Valley Shall be Exalted" as one of his memorable high spots, along with his forceful and heroic interpretation of "Thou Shalt Break Them." Baritone Ross Dodington, another imported soloist for the evening, created effective vocalings in his various recitatives and arias. His best effort was the "But Who May Abide the Day of His Coming?" was both fruitful and fluent.

CHOIR EXCELLENT

Under Robert Reid's guidance the choir excelled in practically all of its numbers. Mr. Reid certainly knows what he wants from each and every singer and he did not hesitate to draw from the fifty-odd voices every nuance of tonal variety that was available from the choir. A fine example of the variation that he wished from his singers was attained in "Since by man came death" in which hushed chantings were followed by incisive outbursts. Controlled attack in this were proven in the "And we like sheep", with the sinuous counterpoint of Handel's work handled. We might mention that in this number the accompaniments were not in the best advantage, the organ registration being in harsh conflict with the strings. Very accomplished was the interpretation of "For unto us a child is born", with powerful choral grandeur being instilled into "Lift up your heads". The familiar "Hallelujah" was voiced with splendid sonority with pomp and panoply. The final double chorus "Worthy is the Lamb", culminating in the tortuous contrapuntal traps of the "Amen", was sung in precise control under Mr. Reid's careful conducting, and increased in an every swelling crescendo that left the hearers entranced and exhausted (as well the choir may have been by this time) as the closing measures concluded in a glorious zenith of vocal (and instrumental) splendor in a peace of triumph.

Violinists Marion Stretton, William Grant and Joachim Reimans added immeasurably in the accompaniments with their contribution of string background. They are to be complimented for their arduous work throughout. Organist Alec Gordon, as always, turned in dignified organ accompaniments through the entire three hours. Timpanist Dwayne Ellis held up the instrumentalist dominant pylons of tonal solidity in the heavier choruses — this an added asset in a grand work such as this.

A few words of greeting were spoken by Rev. Harry M. Davis, minister of Bridge Street United Church, prior to the performance. Two years were rung by the choir with congregation participation that lent more fervor than ever to the religious feelings of this well molded performance.

Summing up: small flaws there were, but they were smothered in the overall fine interpretation that all gave under Robert Reid. Bravos to all, brickbats to none.

linary transfers be made without showing demonstrative cause. In disputes the association wants compulsory arbitration by the federal labor department. The association also demanded CBC management make no production decision on television programs without consulting producers and supervisors.

Meanwhile, CBC producers in Winnipeg have announced they intend to call a meeting of local producers associations across Canada in attempts to strengthen their unity and bargaining position.

The Globe and Mail quotes a source as saying the head of H. G. Walker, CBC vice-president and general manager, may resil as a result of the decision to dismiss the Seven Day boss. It says Mr. Ouimet and Mr. Walker both apologized to public affairs and news department employees for the situation which has arisen from the Seven Days incident.

Mr. Walker said that for the first time in his career he had violated line of authority and done directly Mr. Ouimet said Mr. LaPierre, instead of following chain of command, and passing his decision down through Revree Naggan, director of public affairs," the newspaper says.

Mr. Ouimet left for Ottawa with Tom Symons president of the Toronto Producers Association, and Vincent Tovell, secretary-treasurer, to discuss the affair told there would be no action until after the full report is made again today.

tion to top, and then determine whether there are troubles in the French network.

Mr. LaPierre said he was told in mid-April by Mr. Lamerman that his contract would not be renewed because management said there was a question about his loyalty and he used Seven Days to express a personal viewpoint.

He said neither reason made sense to him, since the loyalty aspect concerned civil liberties and should not apply to a person working on contract, and his performance on Seven Days was edited and approved by his producers.

Mr. Walker concluded these reasons were "irrational," he then began to think that he and Mr. Watson were being pressured on the CBC could improve its "corporate image" in order to attract more advertising revenue.

He said he has no proof but believes the CBC plans to embark on a policy of greater commercialism to raise money to pay for the $270,000 extra cost of a possible new wage agreement with the Association of Canadian Radio and Television Artists (ACTRA).

AFFECTS IMAGE

Seven Days' criticism of advertising, automobile safety and the arts had not affected CBC image that would induce advertisers to spend money with the corporation, he said.

Mr. LaPierre said he thinks Seven Days now is dead.

Even if the CBC rescinded its decision and the same personnel returned next season, the program's vitality had been zapped.

Mr. LaPierre said that as a result he has become more concerned about the ignorance among English-speaking Canadians about Quebec.

He was convinced that only through the CBC could a dialogue between French and English corporation had failed to put the two founding groups in communication with each other.

Seven Days had proved that a dialogue could be established.

He criticized CBC President J Alphonse Ouimet for stating there was no reason for not renewing his contract was that he had not an ode program.

He said he knows the decision not to rehire him was made late January or early February. "I didn't weep until the middle of March."

The CBC board of directors, within last weekend upheld the management decision, cause for heavy criticism in the committee and in the Commons

Glowing New Art Form Meets Instant Success

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP)—The longing for a splash of warm color in a dark, drooping winter's day in Canada led Helen Duffy to devise a glowing new art form which had a sellout success at a recent Toronto exhibition.

Banners, as these distinctive wall - hangings are known, are not new in the field of painting. What nobody had done before was to use fabrics in place of paint, to juxtapose materials of contrasting color and texture in vivid geometric designs.

The way fabric tones change with texture and light also was fascinated this gifted Swiss-born artist, who worked with textiles as part of her training in Zurich before further studies in Geneva, London and Quebec City, where she was a pupil of Jean-Paul Lemieux at the Ecole des Beaux Arts.

Before her marriage 16 years ago to Canadian journalist Robert Duffy, she worked as a lithographer and free-lance writer.

This particular winter day in Toronto, just after Christmas, 1965, Helen Duffy was experimenting with fabric remnants, tossing them in a heap on the floor to see how the various textures, silks and woollens in their vivid colors reacted to each other. She then developed a simple geometric design that became her first banner. The mural-sized work took two months to make.

EVERY BANNER SOLD

When he saw it, Toronto gallery owner Jack Shadbolt offered to arrange a show as soon as Helen had enough. She completed 12 banners in the Duffy apartment in Ilford. They moved to Britain in July, 1965.

By the end of the two-week show in March, Helen had sold every one of her 16 banners at prices ranging from $100 to $400 — a total of some $3,000. Toronto art critics gave her enthusiastic reviews and she was invited to London with a second date at the Pollock for February or March, 1967.

The day a reporter called at the Duffy apartment, the gaping unpartioned terrace house in Chelsea, Helen, a dark-haired, vital woman with a pretty accent, then was restlessly eager to begin work on next year's show.

In the tiny kitchen-cum-dining-room she uses as a studio, she went to a corner cupboard and pulled out a rolling cascade of richly - colored dressmaking scraps. Some had been bought for the show, others acquired from friends — sometimes as the result of a well-placed hint when perhaps that seemingly needs shortening or that dress would look better without sleeves.

Piling the fabrics in brilliant abandon on the grey-green carpet, she laid silvery - rose green velvet, part of an old ball gown, over rich purple satin, then twisted a piece of mustard linen in the light to show how it changed hue.

CHILDREN HELP

"When I start, I can't leave it alone. I become completely obsessed," said Helen, who sometimes works eight to 10 hours at a stretch.

"Then when I stop, it goes out of my mind completely. I can't even sketch the design from memory, as I could with a painting."

Her sons, eight and 11, and daughter Catherine, 13, who wants to be an interior decorator, wander in and out of the workroom. "I'm welcome to make suggestions and seem to get a great kick out of their mother's occupation.

After deciding the color combinations, Helen cuts squares of material which will eventually form interlocking patterns in the design—perhaps brown velvet laced to turquoise tweed, or scarlet silk slashed across linen-green linen. The pieces of the mural are carefully cut with a razor - blade, fitted together, successively glued and stitched to a fabric backing. This allows the finished banner to be rolled up like a scroll, even dry-cleaned.

During the making of a banner — from a week to two months—Helen sees the design from every angle except the one she will finally assume—standing on a wall.

"When I first saw the banners in the gallery, I was stunned. They had a life of their own. Unlike paintings they don't fade with age and time and where in semi-darkness a painting gets quite dull, fabric can be set up any light to advantage."

"When everybody had gone from gallery, I turned out the light and they had the quality of stained glass after sunset."

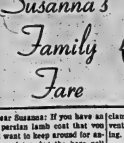
Friends Hold Shower for Future Bride

FRANKFORD — Women of Full Gospel Tabernacle gathered at the home of Mrs. J. Reichart on Thursday evening to honor Miss Gloria Reilly a bride-elect of March. Hostesses were Mrs. Willard Whitman with co - hostess, Miss Linda Fisher of Batawa.

The living room was decorated with pink and white streamers. Gloria was seated in the guest chair which was decorated with pink and white streamers.

Mrs. Whitman began the activities of the evening with singing gospel choruses. Mrs. Knowlton Wright gave a reading and Mrs. Tom Peterson led a solo.

—Mrs. Lonnie Reilly conducted an Animal Game and winners were Mrs. George Chapman and Miss Janice Lockwood. Miss Linda Fisher gave a reading and Miss Theresa Grant also gave a reading.



Miss Linda Fisher spoke briefly and the honored guest was presented with many beautiful, useful gifts for which she expressed thanks in all her friends. A fancy hat was placed on Gloria's head and pictures taken.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and co-hostess and a time of fellowship was enjoyed.

TO PLANT TREES

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario department of lands and forests will plant more than 43,000,000 trees throughout the province this year, a department release said Monday.

Susanna's Family Fare

Dear Susanna: If you have an old persian lamb coat that you still want to keep around for another winter, but the bare patch is showing, buy some darning wool the color of your fur.

Darn loops and loops of wool over the bare spots and it will take more than a casual glance to tell which is wool and which is fur. — Gertrude Bate

STRING SAVER

Hi Su: To keep odds and ends of string tidy in that kitchen catch-all drawer, wrap the pieces around an empty adhesive tape spool.

While not adding string to, or removing it from the spool, clamp the cover back on to prevent the pieces from unwinding. — Miss B. B. Howard

Ann Landers' Children and Husband Dislike Her Hair Tint

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why should the color of a woman's hair be so important to a husband that he would walk out of the house and not talk to her for two days?

I am 43 and look it. My husband is a youthful 44. My hairdresser suggested that I lighten my hair a few shades — just enough to lose the gray down and give the appearance of being blonde. I don't mean a brassy blonde — I mean a nice, soft, honey color.

I was thrilled when I left the beauty shop. Everyone in the place raved. I felt 15 years younger. When my teen-agers came home they told me right off that they didn't like it. Teenagers never like the way their mother looks so I discounted their remarks. But when my husband saw me he went through the roof. He said I looked like a streetwalker and added a few other comments.

I like my hair this way but I'm wondering if it's worth all this fighting. My husband insists he'll never get used to it and that I should switch back to natural. What would you do, Ann Landers? — MINORITY OF ONE.

* * *

DEAR MIN: I'd rather switch than fight.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope you will publish this letter for the benefit of the 16-year-old girl who was caught sneaking her mother's car. She asked you to intervene in her behalf and you refused.

We, too, had a 15-year-old daughter who couldn't wait until she was given permission to drive. She had had some class room instruction and it was only a matter of weeks before she would have been granted the permission that she so eagerly desired. But she just couldn't wait. She borrowed a car from a girl friend and nobody knows for sure exactly what happened.

When she police called us they could only say our darling daughter had smashed into a concrete bridge, the car had turned over in a ditch, and she was drowned in less than three feet of water.

What a horrible price our little girl paid for her mistake. The teen-ager who wrote to you should take her punishment and thank God she got off as lightly. — MRS. M.J.

* * *

DEAR MRS. M.J.: Thanks for a letter which I'm sure was extremely difficult to write. But it was worth the effort, mother, take my word for it. Millions of teenagers read this column and (hopefully) learn from it. You gave every high school student who ever "borrowed" his parents' car something to think about.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Due to illness I am just now getting around to acknowledging the cards we received at Christmas time. I have a whole stack of cards I can't acknowledge because I don't know who sent them.

The signatures read "Jim and Alice," "Betty and Bill," and "Lois and Dick." We know several couples who have these names. The envelopes have been thrown away so there is no city to clue by.

This may not be a timely letter but it would surely be a national service if you'd remind people to put their last names on their Christmas cards and not assume that they are only Ron and Beth in the whole world. — TIRED.

DEAR TIRED: A good letter is always timely. Thanks for writing.

Annie Oakley's Home County Has New Sheriff

GREENVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Annie Oakley's home county has a women sheriff but she doesn't plan to tote shootin' irons.

The new sheriff of Darke County, a grandma and former shoe clerk, figures on leaving to her menfolk subordinates the chore of bearing arms in patrolling the county's 677 square miles and protecting its 47,000 citizens.

The Democratic central committee picked her to serve until a November election can fill out the last two years of her husband's unexpired term.

Mrs. Howard's husband died, at 50, on March 26. The widow said she felt obligated to carry on her husband's work the way she feels he would have wanted it done, and that's why she announced as a candidate for the appointment.

NO DIFLUENCE

As for any influence the fabled Chief Sitting Bull of Annie Oakley, might have had on Mrs. Howard's career, forget it. She doesn't read up too much on the wild west show marksman who became an expert shot in the county hogging game for a family left fatherless, said the sheriff. "But my grandniece is quite a history buff and always talked about her."

As a child, Mrs. Howard remembers Annie coming to town, and vaguely when she was a girl back here for burials. "Actually I don't recall whether I saw it myself or just heard of it."

Asked whether she would wield a gun like Sheriff reples, "I don't intend to carry one— but I do know how to use one."

Primarily, however, she says she will be in the office as executive.

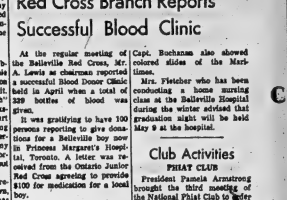
Red Cross Branch Reports Successful Blood Clinic

At the regular meeting of the Belleville Red Cross, Mr. A. Lewis as chairman reported a successful Blood Donor Clinic held in April when a total of 299 bottles of blood was given.



It was gratifying to have 100 persons reporting to give donations for a Belleville boy now in Princess Margaret's Hospital, Toronto. A letter was received from the Ontario Junior Red Cross agreeing to provide $100 for medication for a local boy.

Reporting for the Home Nursing Service Mrs. Eagleton stated that 73 cases had been cared for as well as 129 children's cases. Magdalene Circle with 170 calls made by the supervisor.

The Loan Cupboard was in receipt of a portable chair donated by Mrs. G. A. R. Mason and equipment loaned by Mrs. Tabernacle United Church where they were served refreshments and presented to members of the Hi-C group.

Capt. Buchanan also showed colored slides of the Marilimes.

Mrs. Fletcher who has been conducting a home nursing class at the Belleville Hospital during the winter advised that graduation night will be held May 9 at the hospital.

Club Activities

PHIAT CLUB

President Pamela Armstrong brought the third meeting of the National Phiat Club to order on Wednesday evening at the YMCA.

The cultural part of the program was conducted by Miss Marilyn Gray. Miss Gray gave an informative talk on the history of the YMCA, and showed a film.

The Phiat is a young business and career women's club for girls aged 18 to 30. It meets two Wednesdays a month at 7.30 p.m. Activities include educational programs, service projects, fund raising and social events.

Any members are invited to attend.

Panel on Continuing Education Heard by University Women

A panel discussion on "Continuing Education For Women" was presented to the April meeting of the University Women's Club of Belleville and district. The moderator of the panel was Mrs. Joyce of Belleville introduced the panelists: Mrs. J.—W. McVicar of Belleville, Mrs. A. Elliott of Kingston Mrs. D. M. Curzon and Mrs. R. B. McNichol, both of Queen's University.

Mrs. McVicar initiated the discussion with an informative talk on the aims, methods, and enrichment involved in securing post-graduate education. The speaker stressed that education has 64 post-graduate courses, Queen's University 37 and Toronto University many. She outlined the procedure for a student proceeding from a pass to an honor degree, then to a master's degree and finally a doctorate.

FREED FROM SLAVERY

Mrs. D. M. Curzon continued with a discussion of today's freedom for women to plan their lives. She said that progress in labor saving devices and in medical science has freed women from slavery in their homes and their biological nature. Also, there is evidence to suggest that the biological parent is not necessarily the person best equipped to raise the child. Excellent Kindergartens have been produced under the influence of yet nurses, nannies, governesses and boarding schools. There are many myths and taboos concerning what a woman is and what she should be.

The speaker stated that women have meaningful values for themselves and take a positive, active part in progress. They have a strong drive self-respect and self-confidence to creat a new image of women. The panel concluded with the request that the Canadian Federation of University Women strive to have the Canadian government establish a committee on the status of women similar to that in the U.S.A.

EDUCATION NOT WASTED

Mrs. R. M. McNichol supported the view of the non-working university graduate. She said that women's first consideration is her husband and children and she can obtain further fulfillment from volunteer work. However, she must not feel that her education has been wasted but should wear it as an ornament spread through her efforts. Its value will be apparent as she converses with her children and selects books and records for them.

Mrs. Elliott spoke of the Christian religious supporting the idea that men and women are equal. She felt that family stability is achieved through adherence to family customs and traditions. She stated that we must not equate education with degrees only. We are indeed in an affluent society where women can take time to hold discussions regarding whether they should work.

The speaker felt that the main battles concerning women's freedom have already been won and we are dealing now with the minor points. Movement from working but most women may receive fulfillment from working but must reconcile themselves to having others help to raise their children. As women today we should be concerned with realistic issues such as the mother who works through

The panel members were necessity to support a family, thanked by Mrs. H. Lebel.

REPORTS HEARD

At the preceding business meeting the report of the nominating committee was presented by Mrs. T. J. Lally.

The conclusions of the reading group as summarized by Mrs. G. Boyce were read regarding the minimum legal age for marriage. It was recommended age be raised to 18 for girls and 18 for boys and that pre-marital counselling be given.

An invitation was received from the University Women's Club of Peterboro to attend a tour of modern and historical homes on May 15.

Doris Recommends Strong Self-Control

DEAR DORIS: Did I understand by your reply to "Grateful for an Understanding Mother," that you condoned her behavior? If so, I don't think you should be writing a column of advice. You is your position should be all in your power to point out and discourage this behavior amongst single people. You say it isn't sinful, well, I say it is outside of marriage.

In my young day we were taught control and we weren't always thinking of sex. — DISGUSTED.

DEAR DISGUSTED: You understood wrong. When I used the phrase "marital sex," I was referring to physical relations within marriage. The word "marital" is the key.

Read me a little more and you'll find I am completely and constantly consistent in urging self-control and some healthy and intelligent diversions for unmarried young people; things well above the self-indulgent animal level.

Confidential to WIT'S END: You just haven't lived long enough to be sure of yourself. Your boy friend's threat of going into the army if you won't marry him right away shows he is not very grown up. Like a child, he wants what he wants right away and hasn't learned how to wait for things. Listen to your mother. I'm sending you my leaflet "What Is Love?" Think it over.

Tide of India's Population May at Last Be on Turn

By ADRIENNE FARRELL

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—The tide of India's population may at last be on the turn.

Mass sterilization campaigns and the widespread distribution of the contraceptive device known as the "loop" are beginning to provide the first hope of checking the phenomenal birth rate which each year gives India 10,000,000 more mouths to feed.

Family planning clinics have performed more than 1,000,000 sterilization operations on men and women, and distributed more than 1,000,000 loops for intra-uterine insertion.

Within two years, India hopes to have distributed 10,000,000 loops, making this contraceptive device available in every village in the country. But its effect on the birth rate will only become fully apparent when the next 10-year census is taken in 1971.

India has set up a plant to mass produce 5,000,000 of the plastic loops a year. They cost only about two cents each.

The government is conducting an intensive campaign to popularize the loop.

Newspapers have carried strip cartoon advertisements showing a married couple discussing how to limit their family so as to be able to give the children whom they already have the things which they need. The couple end up at a family planning clinic, being told all about the loop.

PREVENTS CONCEPTION

The device is a simple piece of flexible plastic which is inserted in the uterus to prevent conception by acting as a foreign body. Once in position it need not be changed for one or two years and can be removed at any time if the couple wants to have children.

The birth control pill is still experimental and is too expensive and complicated for a country with widespread poverty and lack of education.

With an annual birth rate of 41 per 1,000 in a population of 483,000,000, India now has 19,000,000 babies born every year. Since the death rate is about 20 per 1,000, or 9,000,000 a year, the ever-all annual increase in population is 10,000,000.

India's goal is to lighten the birth rate down to 25 per 1,000 within 10 years.

American Employers Prefer Dumb Men to Smart Women

NEW YORK (AP)—A Columbia University professor says most American employers still prefer dumb men to smart women.

Dr. Eli Ginzberg, a manpower expert, sounded a call for sweeping changes to help educated women overcome what he said are prejudices against them and live a more balanced life.

Ginzberg, who heads President Johnson's national manpower advisory committee, contended modern society hasn't faced up to the potential of married women in a man's world.

He debunked a view held by some social critics — many of whom are women—who argue that women today are torn between the home and the outside world and don't know which way to turn.

"All those people who have been harping about women's problems and conflicts have made this up largely out of their own imagination," he said in an interview. "Many women nowadays are able to have the best of both worlds and there is no reason why they shouldn't."

Ginzberg presents evidence for his thesis in a book just released entitled Life Styles of Educated Women, in which he examines the views of 311 women who pursued higher education at Columbia University over a six-year period.

While acknowledging that the study was based on women with above-average means, he argued that they will become typical of women of the future, as more and more women pursue advanced learning.

"Three - quarters of these women did not regard their lives as being full of frustrations," he said. "In fact they are willing, given the chance, to fulfil their potentiality outside of the home."

But, Ginzberg suggested, shortsightedness on the part of employers, the U.S. government and universities in their attitudes is hampering women in attaining such a goal.

CHICKEN CACCIATORE FOR SIX

Since Chicken Cacciatore jokingly crept its way into the news I wanted to taste it again so I made a big panful for Sunday evening's dinner.

It is a tasty flavorful chicken dish that goes a long way economically that it could be made for one 3½ or 4-lb. roasting chicken.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Pan Fried Baby Beef Liver and Bacon; Baked Potatoes; Creamed Onions; Individual Fruit Salads on Lettuce; Pineapple Slice, Orange Sections and Cheese-stuffed Prunes with Fruit Dressing; Fruity Frosted Applesauce Cake (see Monday); Coffee.

CHICKEN CACCIATORE (serves 6 generously)

one 3 ½ or 4-lb. roasting chicken cut up
1 cup flour
1 ½ teaspoons salt
¼ cup oil (Italians use olive oil)
4 medium-small onions sliced
1 green pepper, seeded and sliced,
½ lb. spiced cooked ham or prosciutto cut in shoestring strips one 4-oz. jar canned pimientos, sliced
1 clove garlic finely chopped
1 cup chicken broth (or water)
one 15-oz. can tomatoes
½ lb. mushrooms, scrubbed and sliced.

Ask the butcher to cut your chicken into 10 or 12 serving pieces.

Into a strong paper bag measure the flour and salt and shake the chicken pieces in them. Heat oil in large frying pan and brown chicken pieces in it on all sides being careful of spattering fat. Transfer chicken pieces, as you brown them, to large baking dish, preferably one which may be carried to the table. Cover uniformly with the sliced onions, green pepper, ham strips, pimiento and chopped garlic. Pour in chicken broth at one side. Top evenly with broken up canned tomatoes. Cover snugly with foil. (Note: If desired this dish may be made in advance up to this stage and cooled and refrigerated until baking time.)

Bake at 300-deg. Fahr. 2 hours but ½ hour before it is finished top with raw sliced mushrooms, recover with foil and finish baking. You may want to add a little more salt.

Traditionally in Italy Chicken Cacciatore is served with noodles or spagetti but it is good too with Italian bread sticks or hard crusty rolls or French bread.

Note: If desired, instead of baking, Chicken Cacciatore it may be simmered covered on top of stove for 2 hours, adding ingredients in same order as above.

MENU Magic from the TEST KITCHEN

Seafood Special

Frozen foods, a boon on busy days, combine beautifully with dairy foods. Try frozen scallops for a change of pace, with a smooth sauce made from handy evaporated milk. Arrange a 16-ounce package scallops in a buttered shallow casserole dish. Combine a 10-ounce can of frozen cream of shrimp soup and ½ cup evaporated milk in a saucepan and bring just to the boiling point. Pour over scallops and sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a 400°F oven 25 minutes. Good for a family of four!

Hint of Summer

Don't save that wonderful combination of dairy sour cream and berries for the summertime—treat guests to Raspberry Cream Sherbet anytime now. Thaw a 15-ounce package frozen raspberries, add 1 cup sugar and stir well to dissolve sugar. Blend in ½ pint dairy sour cream and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Freeze until firm, stirring occasionally. The fresh tangy flavor is just right after a heavy meal!

Better With Butter

Everyone knows that chicken broils to golden brown tenderness when brushed frequently with melted butter. Next time, add some lime juice to the butter for a fresh spring touch.

Show-Off Dessert

Show off your chafing dish at dessert time with Hot Bananas Flambé. You'll need 6 large firm bananas; halve them and brush with lemon juice. In your chafing dish, melt ¼ cup butter, stir in ¾ cup brown sugar, add bananas and cook until just tender. Sprinkle with cinnamon and nutmeg and serve with big scoops of vanilla ice cream. Delicious too with sweetened whipped cream, if you prefer.

Breakfast Brief

Drink it! That's our answer to folks who say they don't have time to eat a good breakfast. An egg, and ¾ cup each of skim milk powder and cold orange juice make up into a frothy light drink in the blender. Sweeten slightly if desired. Just another reason for keeping that box of economical skim milk powder within handy reach on the kitchen shelf.

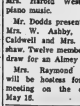
Horticulturalists Hold Meeting

STIRLING — Stirling Horticultural Society held its April meeting Monday evening in St. John's Parish Hall. A delegation from Brighton Horticultural Society and Phillip Dodds of Picton, director of district 3, were in attendance.



Mrs. Floyd Armstrong, president, opened the meeting and Mr. J. B. Belshaw announced a flower sale for May 21 and the annual festival of flowers for June 16.

Mr. Philip Dodds of Picton, director of district 3, suggested each society take as its motto, "Make the world a little better and a little more beautiful because you live in it." He said the district has a membership of 1682. He mentioned the value of wearing a flower at each meeting, as the aids to the beauty of the meeting.

The program consisted of several readings and the showing of movies, by Mrs. Ivan Caldwell, of a visit to Florida. Mrs. Harold West provided piano music.

Mr. Dodds presented gifts to Mrs. W. Ashby, Mrs. Ryan Caldwell and Mrs. J. B. Belshaw. Twelve members won the draw for an Alberta bran tree.

Mrs. Raymond McConnell will be hostess for the May meeting on the evening of May 18.

Especially now during the Car buyers' field days at your Chevrolet Dealers

Corsa Convertible

One of the nicest things about '66 Corvair is the confidence it inspires as you head for anywhere you like. It's the dependable sports car...the sporty family car. Corvair's dependability and handling superiority have been proved over and over again in the roughest rallies and the most critical road tests.

Motor Trend's road test summed it up this way: "Corvair was very stable at high speeds. Even unpaved and gravel surfaces didn't leave any doubt that Corvair has the superior handling of a car bred for performance driving". Car Life calls Corvair "one of the better-handling production sedans in the world". And the readers of Car and Driver voted Corvair "the best compact sedan" for the 3rd successive year.

What's Corvair got to earn such praise? Plenty. An air-cooled rear engine that does away with a complicated cooling system. A fully independent suspension that makes each wheel soak up its own bumps so you ride smoother. And a Corvette-type rear suspension that keeps those driving wheels glued to the road.

Like to drive Corvair for yourself? Now's the time. This is Car Buyers' Field Days — so your Chevrolet dealer has plenty of Corvairs in stock. You can compare a 140-hp, 4-on-the-floor Corsa Convertible with a 110-hp, PowergRide-equipped Monza Sport Sedan or with a 500 Sport Coupe with the standard 95-hp engine.

Take your pick. You'll get immediate delivery...plus top dollar for your trade-in and a great deal on your spirited, sporty, un-temperamental '66 Corvair. What more could you ask?

Schools to Have Authentic History of Indian Tribes

TYENDINAGA RESERVE—"There is every possibility that Ontario schools will soon have authentic histories of the many Indian tribes in the province," says Mr. Leslie Claus, a member of the staff of the Quinte-Mohawk School.

This school is believed to be even better equipped than any of the small public schools being built today. It has equipment for teaching both shop work and household science. Mr. Claus is a specialist in art.

For three years Mr. Claus was the president of the Indian section of the Ontario Educational Association. He retired at Easter. He was also a member of the senate and of the executive council of that Association and so is familiar with all the new trends in education. He was also a member of the delegation of the Indian-Eskimo Association which presented a brief on Indian education to the Hall commission.

During the convention at Easter, a motion was passed by the Indian section that special histories be prepared by the Indians themselves for distribution to the schools of the province. The idea is for knowledgeable Indians, with the aid of historians of recognized authority, to present their own history without bias. The plan is to have one book outlining the history of the three tribal bodies, Six Nations, Algonquins and Hurons, and then to have smaller reference books giving the details of the history of each large Reserve or group of neighboring Reserves. These would probably be paper-backs to keep down the price.

Especially for the early history, the writers would make use of the wealth of material published by ethnologists, anthropologists and recognized historians. The histories would carry the story to the present, pointing out the contribution modern Indians have made, and are making to society.

Because of so much published material, Mr. Claus recognizes that these histories will be difficult to write, but believes writers can be found. The Jamieson sisters of the Six Nations Reserve near Brantford, Irwin Christjohn of the Mounties and Arthur Solomon of Sudbury are some of the available writers he had in mind. He himself is working on the history for the Tyendinaga Reserve.

"It will be difficult to find writers for the stories of the Indians of the Sioux Lookout and Kenora districts," Mr. Claus said, and here the supervising principals of the schools may be commissioned to do the work. He pointed out that the history of the Indians of Northern Ontario must be divided into two parts, as those of the east and of the west are very different.

The ground work has been done, and the motion passed at the convention made this a Centennial project.

"These histories are necessary, not only so that non-Indians may learn the truth, but also for the good of the Indians themselves," Mr. Claus declared. Most Indians, especially in the north, do not know their own background, and so have no pride of race. This makes them feel inferior when they leave their own people to mingle with others who have that pride. Many of them fall by the wayside unable to make use of their potential abilities. With a knowledge of the achievements of their ancestors, they would be on a more equal footing with other races.

"You have to have pride in your race to make a success of your life," Mr. Claus concluded.

Two By-laws Passed at Council Meet

NAPANEE — Two by-laws were passed at the special meeting of the town council last week. Three readings were given to a by-law to close a section of West St., in Clarksville, a short street extending from William St. to the Napanee River.

A second by-law empowers the town to appropriate an area in lots 1, 2, 3, and 7 in plan 43, so that an interceptor sewer from Clarksville to Dundas St. can be installed and maintained. The town will pay the property owners $1. a running foot. The property is owned by Slater, Pollard and Storey, and the Historical Society.

Permission was given to the Jaycees to hold a celebration May 28, to include a fireworks display.

Council itself became responsible for granting taxi licences to Bernard Kent and Russell Gregg, provided they comply with regulations regarding insurance.

The finance committee and the public works committee met Monday to prepare reports for the regular council meeting May 2. The public works committee toured the town to decide what work must be done on the streets this summer.

Other NATO Soldiers Envied Canadian Clothing and Food

By BOB MacKENZIE

OLSBORG, Norway (CP) Canadian soldiers bundled up in their Arctic clothing drew envious glances from other NATO troops during Exercise Winter Express in northern Norway in March. But they had some problems of their own.

"This gear is too warm for some of the weather here," said Sgt. Laurie Dirks of the 1st Battalion, Black Watch.

"It's great in cold weather, but you have to start undoing buttons and zippers when it gets mild, especially if you're moving."

The weather in this region, 180 miles north of the Arctic Circle, was a pleasant surprise to most Canadians.

"If they think this is cold they should spend some time at my home in Biggar, Sask.," Sgt. Dirks added. "A week at 30 below would change their minds."

Despite the northern latitude, Norway has an almost temperate climate compared with most of Canada. Warm waters from the Gulf Stream flow along the coast, keeping all the deep fiords free of ice throughout the year.

High winds and low temperatures make life at the top of the mountains uncomfortable, but the valleys have a climate similar to that of central Ontario.

Canada's winter army gear was unique in a couple of instances. The windproof parkas and special nylon wind pants are used by some other countries, but the Canadians' mukluks and sleeping bags were superior to anything else in use.

The mukluk, a rubber-soled boot with a calf-high outer nylon cover, has a thick woolen inner boot that keeps feet warm in the coldest of weather. The nylon cover has a lace at the top to prevent snow from sifting down and melting inside the boot.

By contrast, the Norwegians, British and Italians wore ski boots. The thick Italian boots were more than sufficient, but British and Norwegian troops felt the cold whenever they stopped moving.

"You don't worry about the temperature outside the tent when you sleep in these," said staff Sgt. Joseph Gauthier, another Black Watch soldier who has been in the army for 21 years.

"In those days you simply added mittens and a great coat and you had your winter gear."

Canadian ration packs—containing about 3,000 calories a day per man—also were rated the best of the lot. The packs, containing cans of chicken stew, chili, luncheon meats, tea, instant coffee, instant hot chocolate and orange juice, candy, jam and crackers, were supplemented daily by fresh bacon, eggs and milk.

The Canadians exchanged rations with the British troops for one day to get a change of diet.

"It was okay for a day but I wouldn't want to live on it," Gauthier said.

If anything, the Canadians were over - fed, an army doctor observed.

"Normally, you figure on a minimum of 2,500 calories a day per man in the Arctic. If a man ate everything in his pack, plus the extra food, he's get double this. But it's better than going hungry."

Receives Facial Lacerations in Car Accident

NAPANEE — Clinton David Madigan, 19, of R. R. 1, Napanee is in the Kingston General Hospital with facial lacerations as the result of a one - car traffic accident Sunday at 12.40 a.m.

The accident occurred near Moscow, two miles south of Enterprise. Madigan was in a car driven by Stewart Ray Perry of R. R. 2, Napanee. He was taken to hospital by ambulance, but is reported not in serious condition. Damage to the car is estimated at $200.

IMPORTANT MESSAGE TO OLD AGE PENSIONERS IN ONTARIO

Many Ontario residents receiving the Old Age Pension believe they will be automatically enrolled in OMSIP — the Ontario Medical Services Insurance Plan.

However, the only pensioners who have been automatically enrolled in OMSIP are those who receive pensions under The Old Age Assistance Act from the Ontario Department of Welfare and those who have previously been receiving medical coverage from the Ontario Department of Welfare.

All other persons aged 69 and over who receive the Old Age Security Pension of $75 a month from the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, and are eligible for OMSIP coverage must send in an application form if they wish to join.

Many of these persons will be entitled to full OMSIP coverage and benefits at no cost to themselves. Many others will qualify for partial premium assistance.

Pensioners who have not already received their OMSIP registration cards must, therefore, send in an application form if they wish to join the Plan.

Application forms are available at all chartered banks in Ontario or may be obtained, along with any additional information required, from OMSIP, 135 St. Clair Avenue West, Toronto, Telephone 365-5911 or 365-5951.

later and questioned whether his recollection of the event was better now than it was in 1962.

The Ontario judge said his memory has been "prodded" by testimony and documents produced by the inquiry over the last six weeks.

The session here, the start of final sittings expected to conclude Wednesday, was Mr. Justice Landreville's first on the witness stand. He had been a spectator at earlier sittings in Vancouver—Toronto's home city—Toronto and Sudbury.

'IT CROPPED UP'

"I didn't think much importance to the stock," Mr. Justice Landreville said. It had cropped up only when he discussed with Farris the possibility of his doing some work for the company after he left the mayoralty.

"The stock purchase was merely to show my goodwill," he said. "I thought I was being rather venturesome."

There had been no discussion of amounts or prices and he had been surprised to get Farris' letter of July 20 offering an option on 10,000 shares at $2.50. He replied to the letter rejecting off any action on a purchase until after he left the mayoralty.

He got a letter the following February from Continental Investments Corp. of Vancouver enclosing 7,500 shares. The inquiry has been told the firm bought 10,000 for him at $2.50 and paid off the cost by selling 2,500 of these at $10.

LBJ's Aide New Film Czar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hollywood has turned again to the U.S. political scene for a new "czar" of the movie industry—this time to President Johnson's aide, Jack J. Valenti.

The 44-year-old son of Italian immigrants Monday quit his $367,500-a-year job as Johnson's special assistant to become president of the Motion Picture Producers Association of America. His new salary, though undisclosed, will be much higher.

Of the assistants who work with Johnson to the White House in 1963, only press secretary Bill D. Moyers now remains on the payroll.

Valenti's predecessors at the movie association were Will Hays, onetime Republican national chairman and postmaster-general, and Eric Johnston, foreign policy adviser to U.S. presidents.

Old Regional Differences Are Stirred By Yugoslavia's Reformed Communism

Yugoslavia plans major economic reforms which will move it farther away than now from the Communist camp, Canadian Press reporter John Best, writing from Belgrade in the course of a tour of Eastern Europe, says the shakeup is stirring protests from Yugoslavia's leading cohesive force.

BY JOHN BEST

BELGRADE (CP) — Multiracial Yugoslavia, whose territiory has been an historic cockpit of nationalistic strife, is seeing old differences astir again over government plans for reforming the economy.

The reforms are designed to revitalize the country, but they are getting on many touchy nerve-ends of regional feelings. All the massive influence of Peripheral Tito is being brought to bear to keep them from being derailed.

Yugoslavia is a land of six republics, five major nationalities, three major languages. It has a tradition of ferment. The fact that the changes are pinching some regional concentrations of particular nationalities more than others has made for protest since 1945.

The reforms, begun last summer, are among the most profound ever introduced in a Communist country. They will make the face of nominally - Communist Yugoslavia look even less Communist than now.

Western goods are being imported in quantity to force Yugoslav manufacturers to produce more competitively. Customs rates have been cut by more than half. Subsidies and export premiums have been scrapped, to make industries stand on their own feet.

TURNING WESTWARD

All these steps are really aspects of a more fundamental decision that the Yugoslav leadership has made: To align this country more closely with the West, though recently the Communist bloc's share has been creeping up.

Within a few months, Yugoslavia is expected to be a full member of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), and initial steps are being taken to make the dinar currency fully convertible in the West.

A saying about the currency unheard "the dinar needs a visa" to get from one Yugoslav republic to another—illustrates the country's deep-seated tendencies towards regionalism, the idea of peoples and republics trying to live unto themselves.

There are "haves" and "have - nots" among the republics, and one of the chief sources of resistance to the reforms is people in have-not areas who resent the closing of uneconomical factories or their removal to other and already better-off regions.

Macedonians, Montenegrins, Bosnians and Serbs (Belgrade is in Serbia) complain that the new measures will close them in an even more disadvantageous position than they have been in relation to the relatively prosperous Croats and Slovenes.

ENVY CROATS

The fact that millions of dollars are being poured into already well - off Croatia to promote the glamorized Dalmatian coast for tourists doesn't help soothe matters.

Government spokesmen candidly admit that these are "politically delicate" problems. But Tito has made it clear that he is wholly committed to the cause of Yugoslavia's liberal economists, whose rallying cry these days is: "Take politics out of economics."

One casualty of this philosophy has been the power of some local Communist party bosses whose influence has been rooted in the control of the "political factories" which now are being shuffled around or closed. Their grumblings are being heard.

In a fiery speech to the party's central committee in late February, Tito applied to the dissenters some of the strongest language he has used in years. Those who aren't carrying out decisions of the Communist League, he said, should get out of it.

In fact, sources here said, 2,300 Communists had resigned over the reforms by then.

PRICE BOOST HITS

Coupled with regional and individual resistance were fairly widespread complaints about food-cost increases that occurred from a government decision to lift artificial depressants on prices of farm products.

An important aim was to halt an exodus of people from the land—35 per cent of which is privately - owned—into the cities.

Government officials say the hole in real wages which was punched by the food increases now has been largely closed.

The multiple grievances, and the government's sharp response, have combined in present to rare spectacle of a Communist government marshalling all its forces to align people into what must look to them like the beginnings of a return to capitalism.

OLD DIFFERENCES ASTIR — Reforms to revitalize the Yugoslav economy are running into nationalistic differences. Yugoslavia has five major nationalities and three major languages. Millions of dollars will be poured into Croatia, which is already well-off. Macedonians, Montenegrins, Bosnians and Serbs complain that the new measures will place them in an even more disadvantageous position.

(CP Newsmap)

Tito has made it clear that his government is prepared to use whatever means are necessary to see the reforms through.

The question arises: If stringent measures are needed to reshape the Yugoslav economy far a coming institutional linkup to the West, what has kept it going until now?

"United States aid—$1,100,000,000."

"Yugoslavs make good workers when they go abroad, but at home, no. They know they'll be taken care of by the state whether they work or not. It's next to impossible to fire anyone in this country."

Under the new fashion, it won't be. And with more material incentives for workers—there is talk now of eventual profit-sharing at a reward for productivity—the government hopes Yugoslavia will gain new strength.

Main Cause Of Allergy Outlined

CHICAGO (AP)—Faulty action in the body's metabolism may be the cause of allergy in some persons, a doctor suggested today.

Dr. Ando Sternivanyi proposed the theory that such allergic conditions as hay fever, bronchial asthma and eczema are not caused by a malfunctioning of the body's enzyme system that metabolizes the hormone adrenalin.

Dr. Sternivanyi, associate professor of pharmacology at the University of Colorado school of medicine, Denver, made the suggestion at the annual meeting of the American College of Allergists.

He said the constitutional abnormality could be inherited or acquired. It could be triggered by many factors such as certain foods, ragweed or other substances, infection or psychic stress.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

This is the season of the experts.

Hockey is on its last legs, although as usual the season has been stretched out too long, and baseball is toddling into the limelight and doing its best to snare a share of the sports-page sway from the Stanley Cup.

All the living room coaches can tell you right now how they would have won the National Hockey League crown had they been coaching the Leafs or Black Hawks.

The same fellows will, however, take time out to give you the lowdown on next fall's major league pennant winners. "This is the year the Giants can't miss" or "look out for Baltimore now that we got Robinson." But don't remind these chaps of their choices next fall.

We're not knocking it, (can't very well since we are as guilty as the next guy) and right now things are stirring on the local sports scene, at least as far as actual events are concerned.

True, the golfing bug has bitten but the ice is gone, gone, gone for another five or six months and the ball clubs are just retaging field practice shortly.

• • •

Bowling leagues are pretty well drawing to the end of another busy season but several top tournament-type events will keep the best of the keglers on the go for another couple of weeks.

The annual "Mr. Bowling" men's singles tournament is on tap this coming weekend at the Bowl-O-Drome. Always a top-notch show for area five-pinners, this one promises to be no exception.

As of yesterday, 12 entries from Kingston, six from Trenton, four from Brampton, three from Peterborough, two from Lindsay and another from Campbellford had joined the best of this city on the entry list.

There is still room for more bowlers on Saturday and entries will be accepted until Friday.

Top prize money, a wrist watch and the "Mr. Bowling" crown will be up for grabs. Play starts Friday at 7.00 p.m. and resumes Saturday at noon.

Also scheduled for next weekend, Saturday and Sunday, are the women's 10-pin singles and doubles championships. They will be held at the Lucky Strike Lanes, in Deseronto, at 1.00 Saturday with the second shift coming on at 2.00 Sunday afternoon.

And the following Saturday, May 7, the new Intelligencer Scout Cup will be up for grabs at the Bowl-O-Drome, with the top average five-pinners going after the gold and the glory.

This new tournament promises to be a dandy and early response to the call full entry forms is being received from both the invited bowlers and firms donating prizes. There will be more on this later.

• • •

Ball wise, the Belleville and District League held its entry deadline meeting Monday night and will operate with five clubs. The Commercial League has its entry deadline meeting slated for next Monday. Both leagues are, of course, softball.

On the baseball front, the Eastern Ontario Association is holding its registration meeting in Newcastle Thursday night of this week, at 7.30, and all clubs, from tyke to senior, must register then. Things have been rather quiet concerning the good old South Hastings loop but it stands as the safest bet in sport to operate, come hell, high water or inter-squad disputes. The Canalton Club opens practice tonight and we expect a low down on the League's plans shortly.

Also scheduled this week, on Wednesday at the Recreation Centre, is a general meeting of the Belleville Minor Softball Association. They are looking for under way in the planning stages and promises a big opening weekend come May 24.

The Belleville Minor Baseball Association is well under way in the planning stages and promises a big opening weekend come May 24.

Soccer clubs are working out and Belleville Parsons, along with Bataws, Picton Guards and seven clubs from down east, are back in the Kingston and District fold, loop.

Word also has it that professional wrestling will be moving into Memorial Arena in the near future; lawn bowling is just around the corner; the Trap and Canoe are booming them out while the handgunners and archers are moving outdoors from their inside winter quarters.

Ah, yes, matters may be a little quiet at the moment, but a month from now 'twill be another story.

Upsets Dick Tiger ★★★★★ Griffith Wins Two Titles ★★★★★ Wants Two Titles

Griffith New Middleweight Champ

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK (AP) — Emile Griffith, the freshly crowned middleweight boxing champion, plans to go to court today in an effort to keep the welterweight crown, too, after his close, controversial, upset conquest of aging Dick Tiger Monday night.

* * *

EMILE GRIFFITH

The 28-year-old king of the 147-pound division was a 6-5 underdog when he dethroned the 36-year-old Tiger as ruler of the 160-pound class on a unanimous 15-round decision in Madison Square Garden. The odds are even bigger against Griffith's chances of being permitted to hold both crowns.

There is a strong possibility that Griffith will give Tiger a return shot at the middleweight crown at the Garden June 13.

"Tiger can have the return bout, if he wants it," said the unmarked victor. "He was a good sport, too."

WANTS REMATCH

"I'd like the return," said the dejected Nigerian, who was knocked down in the ninth round for the first time in his 14-year career. "I thought I deserved the decision. It takes two to make a fight. I had to make the fight."

The ninth round knockdown was the difference in the scoring of the two judges.

Referee Art Mercante had it 9-5-1 for Griffith, while Judge Frank Forbes had it 7-6-2 while Judge Tony Castellano had it 7-7-1. Griffith won 7-7-1, but Griffith ahead on points 8-7. The knockdown, at about the two minute mark, earned the round and the extra point for the New Yorker.

Tiger got up at three and took the mandatory eight count. Griffith followed with a left hook to the jaw that almost tumbled the 160-pound Tiger again. But he banded downward, Tiger grabbed the 150½ pound Griffith and saved himself.

It was the second time Tiger has lost the middleweight title. He dropped it to Jory Giardello in 1963 and regained it from Giardello last Oct. 21 in the Garden.

Griffith, the third welter weight champion to capture the middleweight crown, automatically vacates the lighter division title under the rules of the New York State Athletic Commission, the World Boxing Association and most other boxing bodies of the world.

"As soon as he won the middleweight championship, he's 160 automatically was out as welterweight champion," said Mrs. Melvin Eglewitch, chairman of the New York Commission. "We will make plans soon to set up a welterweight tournament to determine Griffith's successor."

"We're going to court Tuesday to seek an injunction to prevent the commission from taking away the title."

Johnson Stops Giants And Mays

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Jean Johnson's variety of pitches might have fooled Willie Mays, but as far as Jose Pagan is concerned none could have been as evasive as Jim Bunning's bunt pitch.

Bunning so befuddled Pagan that he obliterated a budding Pittsburgh Pirate rally and went on to pitch Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-0 victory Monday night.

Johnson held Mays hitless in Atlanta Braves' 5-0 triumph over San Francisco, preventing the Giants' star from setting a National League record for career home runs.

"I wasn't thinking about his record," Johnson said afterward. "I was just thinking about winning. I just try not to give him the same pitch twice. I have six pitches, and I throw them from two different angles so that gives me 12 different pitches."

Pagan didn't have much to say after his performance against Bunning. It came in the third inning of a scoreless game and followed no-out singles by pitcher Bob Veale and Matty Alou.

Pagan came to the plate intending to bunt, but he let Bunning's pitch go by, and Veale was trapped off second. The throw from catcher Bob Uecker to shortstop Dick Groat nailed the first out.

Then Bunning was concentrating on Pagan, Alou stole second. And when Bunning cornered himself with Alou, the pitcher threw the ball into left field, allowing Alou to reach third.

By this time Pagan had two strikes on him, but that didn't keep him from trying the bunt. The squeeze play was called for.

Pagan, however, missed the pitch for strike three and the second out and Alou was trapped off third and run down for the third out.

It was almost as if Pagan's swung—or didn't swing — into a triple play.

In other NL games, St. Louis Cardinals handed Los Angeles Dodgers their third straight 2-0 defeat and Houston Astros edged Cincinnati Reds 2-1.

Gibson limited the Giants to three hits while retiring Mays on a pop up, a strikeout and a fielder's choice, sending his 320th home run, also walked. Johnson received support from Lee Thomas' three-run homer and Hank Aaron's two-run blast.

Bunning stopped the Pirates on five hits and got the only run he needed when Rich Allen homered in the fourth. The Phillies added four runs in the sixth, two on a single by Cookie Rojas.

The Cardinals scored both of their runs in the sixth inning. Curt Flood driving in one with a double and Charlie Smith the other with a sacrifice fly.

Don Cardinal notched a five-hitter as Houston handed Cincinnati its seventh defeat in the last eight games. John Bateman doubled across an Astro run in the fifth, and Jim Gentile snapped a 1-1 with a run-scoring single in the sixth.

Short Series Tied

Shawinigan Upsets Generals

OSHAWA (CP)—Oshawa Generals found out the hard way Monday night Shawinigan Bruins aren't going to be pushovers in Eastern Canada Memorial Cup finals.

In fact Shawinigan's 5-4 victory in the opener put the best-of-five series at Oshawa in a tight spot for the first time in playoffs.

The last three games in the best-of-five series are scheduled in Shawinigan, which means that the Generals must win twice on the road if they are to advance to the national junior hockey final against Edmonton Oil Kings or Estevan Bruins.

The Bruins struck first three goals in the first three minutes of Monday night's game, Pierre Hyndman getting both of them and had the Generals in trouble from then on.

The Generals showed signs of recovering by tying the score before the first period ended and taking a 4-2 lead early in the second. But from that point on the Bruins took command.

Mike Hyndman cut the margin to 4-3 late in the second and Alain Beaudoin and Clement Tremblay connected in the third period for the victory.

The series shifts to Shawinigan for games Wednesday, Friday and, if necessary, Saturday.

The misconduct penalties went to Bill White of Oshawa and Mike Hyndman of Shawinigan after they prolonged a brawl involving four players late in the game.

Takes 2-1 Lead

Guelph Tops Sherbrooke

GUELPH (CP) — If Guelph Regals' line of Walt Bradley, Ray Ross and Keith Worrall can keep up its blistering pace of three goals a game the Eastern Canada Allan Cup finals will be in the bag for the Ontario club.

For the second straight game, the line made the difference as Regals downed Sherbrooke Beavers 5-2 here Monday night to lead their best-of-seven series 2-1. They also gave Guelph the edge Saturday with three goals in a 4-3 victory in Sherbrooke, Que.

The teams were tied 3-3 at the end of the first period and Guelph took a slim 52 margin into the final period. Fourth and fifth games of the series will be played here Wednesday and Friday.

Ross scored twice while Bradley, Dave Larkin and Terry Oliver got the other Regal goals. Bill Burega, picked up by Guelph from Kingston Aces for the playoffs, earned three assists.

Rejean Richer scored both Sherbrooke goals.

Richer put the Beavers ahead 1-0 midway through the first period when he dumped a rebound past Guelph netminder Harold (Bost) Hurley with Guelph shorthanded. Less than three minutes later Ross rapped Bradley's rebound into the net with Jean Levesque of Sherbrooke serving a minor.

Richer scored his second goal of the night just past the 17-minute mark but Larkin came back 57 seconds later to tie the score 2-2.

Ross got the only goal of the second period when he went in alone on a pass at centre ice from Bradley to slip the puck past Serge Aubry in the Beaver net.

Sherbrooke maintained an edge in play throughout the game, firing 35 shots at Hurley. Aubry handled 26 shots in the Beavers goal.

BRITON BEATEN

PARIS (AP)—Jean Josselin of France won the European welterweight boxing championship Monday by stopping Brian Curvis, the British Empire titleholder from Wales. Curvis failed to come out at the bell for the 14th round.

Will the Lawn-Boy owner please stand up
Lawn-Boy with Grasscatcher picks up grass, leaves, and weeds as you cut!
If you're a Lawn-Boy owner stand up and take a bow. You're one of the smart ones. Then sit down and relax. Isn't that easier than raking or pushing a heavy old-fashioned mower? Lawn-Boy's grasscatcher does the raking for you. It picks up grass while you cut. It picks up leaves in the fall and tidies your lawn in spring. It collects weeds before they spread over your lawn. To empty, you just snap off the bag and unzip.
Lawn-Boy starts easier, too. You use just two fingers and 94% less effort than old-fashioned heave-and-haul type mowers. And Lawn-Boy is warranted for two years—that's longer than some mowers last.
See your dealer for the full line of Lawn-Boy rotary mowers, including self-propelled. In all, there are 18 reasons you should own a Lawn-Boy. Your dealer is itching to show you every one.

McDowell Throws One-Hitter

Tigers Keep Pace

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

It takes two to tango but the way Sam McDowell and Del Crandall were working on Kansas City, it looked more like a field twist with the Athletics in the middle.

McDowell, Cleveland's fireballing left - hander, best the Athletics 2-0 Monday night and gave most of the credit to his journeyman catcher, Crandall.

"I don't want to take anything away from our other catchers," said the Indian ace who gave up only one hit, "but this is the first time I've had the experience. He came out to the mound twice and both times he caught things I was doing wrong."

McDowell, now 3-0, has had Crandall as his batterymate in each of his four starts and he likes the idea of pitching to the 36-year-old veteran.

"I shook him off a couple of times in the opener," said McDowell. "It's different now. We're working together in sort of an easy rhythm. Like a dance team."

McDowell was walking along on a no-hitter for five innings before Tom Tresh singled and single leading off the ninth broke the spell.

McDowell struck out eight.

Larry Brown drove in both Indian runs with a two-out, bases-loaded single in the sixth inning.

Elsewhere in the American League, Denny McLain hurled four-hitter as Detroit Tigers blanked Minnesota Twins 3-0, Chicago White Sox downed Washington Senators 3-2 despite a titanic home run by Frank Howard, and Boston Red Sox handed New York Yankees their seventh straight loss as Cleveland now has eight straight victories, one less than the league record for consecutive wins at the start of the season set by St. Louis Browns when they won the pennant in 1944.

McLain got home run support from Norm Cash and Al Kaline to bet the Twins for his third victory of the season. Cash walloped a bases-empty homer in the fourth and McLain protected the slim lead until Kaline's two-run shot in the eighth gave him some breathing space.

The loss was Minnesota's sixth in the last seven games.

Tim McGraw's ninth inning sacrifice fly beat the Senators for Chicago but Howard's homer stole the show. It was still rising when it zoomed into the mezzanine seats in deepest centre field, 480 feet from home plate, it was believed to be the longest homer in the five-year history of D.C. Stadium.

Howard pooh-poohed the ex-clamour over his shot. "I've hit 'em further," he said. "Would you believe it?"

Starter Don Lock didn't. He was convinced it was Howard's longest shot.

McGraw's sacrifice fly brought Floyd Robinson home with the winning run after Robinson had walked and moved to third on Pete Ward's single. Ward's hit came after Wash Senators catcher Doug Camilli dropped his foul pop for an error.

Carl Yastrzemski ripped four hits for Boston which handed New York Yankees its 10th loss in 11 starts. Ray Barker, Bobby Richardson and rookie Roy White also homered for the last place Yankees.

Montreal Gets Help With Olympics Bid

TOME (CP) — Banff, Alta., bid to bat today for the 1972 Winter Olympic Games after a stalling bid by Montreal for the summer Games that may have left its competitors reeling.

Corridors buzzed with talk that Mayor Jean Drapeau may have made a strong impression on the International Olympic Committee with his multi-million-dollar plans for a stadium and board for all participating athletes and officials—perhaps up to 10,000—at Montreal is picked as the summer Games site.

But the 62 IOC members here for today's crucial vote are keeping silent on the approach which hit the conference room Monday like a thunderclap.

Never before at the annual affair been made. Drapeau, after a 35-minute speech to the conference, told reporters he made clear this was in no way a bribe but a benefit that would be available because of contributions resulting from the 1967 Montreal's world fair. He declined to estimate the cost, but some observers suggested it could run to more than $2,000,000.

BANFF FIRST IN.

Banff was to be the first of the winter competitors to appear before the IOC today. The delegation, joined by Mayor Jack Leslie of Calgary, left reverently to tie up last-minute points.

There was concern over Montreal's impact, since it is widely considered that if Montreal should get the summer Games, Banff's prospects might suddenly collapse.

Banff has been a strong contender for the winter events since IOC members gathered here last week for the secret vot.

Both the international ski and ice hockey federations have announced their full support for Banff. Others also are reported to favor the famous Alberta resort, although the proposal is strongly opposed by wildlife organizations. Canadian Health Minister Allan MacEachen is standing by to assure the IOC the Canadian government feels no harm will be done to the wilderness by the Games, which may take only about 40 acres of Banff National Park.

The IOC will meet each of the winter Games bidder in the morning. Voting will begin in the afternoon on a decision that can make the winners big tourist attractions and world sports centres.

Procedure calls for the winner to have a clear majority on the first ballot, or the trailing two cities are eliminated and a second ballot is taken to pick the winner by simple majority. The summer site will be decided first and the winter second.

Under the Drapeau proposal, athletes and officials would have their transport paid by sponsoring groups but Montreal would absorb the cost of their meals and lodging for 30 days. This, he argued, would help countries save needed foreign exchange.

Jim Worrall of Toronto, president of the Canadian Olympic Association, said he doesn't believe IOC members might consider this is the nature of a bribe. Montreal happened to have built-in advantages because many of the facilities required for Olympic Games already are being built for the 1967 fair.

Members of the International Ski Federation figured that the contest for the winter Games would boil down to Banff and Sapporo.

Marc Hodler, Swiss president of the International Ski Federation, said, however: "Salt Lake City suffered from its late start in the race. The Utah city did not get the U.S. nomination until Jan. 15.

Announce New Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured tissues.

Most important of all — results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months. This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

New Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Confident Abel Rests Wings

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP)—Sid Abel, Detroit Red Wings' manager-coach, came to Montreal looking for a split in games with Montreal Canadiens in the best-of - seven Stanley Cup final round But today he feels his chances of sweeping the first two games here have risen "to better than 99 per cent."

The Wings won the opener 5-2 here Sunday and go against the Canadiens again tonight at 8 p.m. EDT.

"That win gave us a real lift," Abel said. "They have to come to us now, because they're behind."

Abel received the good news Monday that Bill Gadsby, 39, his star defenceman, will be able to play in tonight's game.

Gadsby, never on a Stanley Cup team although he has been in the National Hockey League for two decades, suffered a broken blood vessel in his elbow and the joint was still sore and swollen after Sunday's contest.

However, Gadsby took whirlpool treatments for the injury Monday and will "definitely play tonight." Gadsby scored one goal and was a standout on defence in the Wings' victory.

POINTS ON CROZIER

Abel said he hopes Roger Crozier can come up with another sterling performance tonight. It was netminder Crozier who emerged from the opener as the individual hero.

HENRI RICHARD

Blake said four Canadiens worked out that if centre Henri Richard does not regain his previous form and "come up with a couple of good games against Detroit, we're in trouble."

He said he may move Ralph Backstrom into Richard's spot to pivot wingers Dick Duff and Bobby Rousseau for tonight's game.

Blake said he will continue to start Jean Beliveau, Gilles Tremblay and Claude Provost against Detroit's big line of Gordie Howe, Alex Delvecchio and Dean Prentice.

"For ability against ability I have to start them that way."

Abel doesn't think his club will slow down in the second game.

"We'll skate better," he said. "Some of our older fellows really didn't start skating until the last period of Sunday's game and now that they've started they'll be up there all the way."

Leafs Win Behind Rookie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs, getting little deserved help for a victory in the International League, pinned their hopes on a rookie pitcher's 22 - game winning streak Monday night and it paid off.

Bill McLeod made it 23 in a row with a neat eight-hitter as the Leafs handed Toledo Mud Hens a 4-0 setback in Toledo. The second shutout in a row suffered by the Hens. The win was Toronto's first in three starts.

McLeod, called up to the Leafs after going 18-0 with Pittsfield, Mass., of the Eastern League last year, struck out six and allowed only two Toledo base runners to advance as far as third.

McLeod, a left - hander, gained his victory streak in 1966 when he finished the season with four victories for Reading, Pa., of the Eastern League.

In two other games Monday night, Jacksonville Suns defeated Rochester Red Wings 4-2 for their fifth consecutive victory and Syracuse Chiefs stopped a four - game losing streak by edging Richmond Braves 3-2. The loser was Richmond pitcher [illegible] without a victory.

[illegible]shlander Tom Seaver, [illegible] draft choice by New York Mets, made his first start in professional baseball and pitched and batted Jacksonville to its victory.

He struck out seven and walked two while throwing a six-hitter and drove in the winning runs with a single in the fourth inning.

WEDNESDAY

- The Hallmark Hall of Fame presents an hour and a half long dramatization of the conflict between the scientist Galileo and the Church entitled "Lamp At Midnight." The Italian astronomer Galileo Galilei was condemned by the Church as a heretic for daring to defy the theory that the earth was the centre of the universe. Starring the distinguished actor Melvyn Douglas, the drama will be carried by channels 3 and 8 at 7:30.
- From 9:30 till 10:30, the CBC presents a documentary on what happens during buying and selling operations involving thousands of dollars in a stock exchange. "Buy Low — Sell High" follows the normal process of a market transaction, capturing the excitement of the exchange floors as Mike George, former president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges comments on the 1929 Wall Street crash, its causes, and the possibility of such a disaster ever recurring — channels 11 and 13.
- "A Remnant of Harry" — is a half-hour drama about a poet whose talents are not appreciated while he is alive — so he returns to earth after dying to see how posterity feels about them — channels 11 and 13, at 10:30.

CHENEY'S SIGNED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tom Cheney, who hasn't pitched since June 14, 1964, was signed Monday by Washington Senators of baseball's American League. The 31-year-old righthander, who missed all of last season with an ailing elbow, is a major league record by striking out 21 in a 16-inning game against Baltimore Orioles in 1962.

CJBQ to Air Sport Show Every Saturday

All they need is a radio tuned to CJBQ on Saturday afternoons from 3:30 to 6.00 p.m. EST when "The Summer Sound of Sports" is on the air.

Bob Wilson and Al Hamel are co-hosts of Sound of Sports, which starts Saturday, April 30 on CJBQ. The series will cover important athletic events taking place from Vancouver to Newfoundland, and from Jamaica to Hudson's Bay. There will also be regular weekly features including: a roundup of North American sports news by Fred Sgambati; reports from Europe by Jacob de Vries; a sports editorial by Trent Frayne; sports news for women by Marg Cunningham; commentary on outdoors activity such as hunting, fishing and camping; plus appropriate light, recorded music selected by Del Mott.

On April 30, Bob Wilson, Bob MacGregor and Bill Good report from Vancouver, starting point of the 1966 Trans-Canada Relay, as men and machines await the beginning of the 4,000-mile test of driving ability. On the same program, Al Hamel reports from a skydiving centre about 40 miles east of Vancouver. There is also a preview of events to be covered on future editions of Sound of Sports.

Hall of Fame Series Will Enter Dangerous Area

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Construing a television series or even a single special program so that it lands on a by-PARTISAN ground between the sponsor's demands and the viewers' interests demands delicate balance.

It cannot be too exciting because the commercial interruptions would irritate the viewers. And it can't be too bland or viewers would turn to another channel.

It must be provocative—but not so controversial that some viewers might stop buying the sponsor's product.

That is a basic reason why the really controversial issues—U.S. policy in Viet Nam, legal abortion, divorce, auto safety, health hazards and others—are infrequently the subjects of television dramas. They are considered likely to be handled as neatly balanced documentary programs, leaving any conclusions up to the individual viewer.

CONTROVERSY RARE

NBC's long-running series of dramatic specials called Hall of Fame and its long-time greeting-card sponsor have rarely sailed into the turbulent seas of controversy. Rather, the program has specialized in the safe biographical drama — Florence Nightingale, Queen Victoria, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Napoleon.

Earlier this season it tackled a mildly controversial adaptation of Inherit The Wind, a play about the famous Scopes monkey trial in the 1920s. But there are few crusaders today against Darwin's theory of evolution.

Wednesday night it moves into a slightly more dangerous area with Lamp At Midnight.

This tale of the struggle in the early 1600s of the astronomer Galileo against the teachings of the Roman Catholic church that the earth was the centre of the universe. Galileo believed that the planets revolved around the sun, and the church gave him a rough time for his heresy.

But, while the plot line is history, it is still controversial to a degree because it shows a man in conflict with his church—and church leaders play the villains of the piece. So, to add a little anti - controversy insurance, Hall of Fame will have a Roman Catholic archbishop presenting the play to the viewers before the broadcast.

Oil Kings Grab 2-1 Series Lead

By JOHN SHORT

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oil Kings coach Ray Kinasewich smiled without pleasure Monday after his club defeated the Estevan Bruins 6-4 before 6,746 fans to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Western Canada Memorial Cup hockey final.

"It's good to know we can play as badly as that and still win," he said. "But we can't count on being able to do it again."

"About eight of our guys played pretty well," he said. "The rest played sporadically. We'll win Wednesday to tie the series."

Munro said three crucial breaks in the game favored Edmonton.

In the second period, with Edmonton leading 1-0, Estevan centre Morris Stefaniw broke in alone on goaltender Don McLeod but had the puck roll off his stick just as he was about to shoot.

BEATEN BY BUZZER

At the end of the second period, Hoganson drilled a deflected shot from the point that hit the net behind McLeod in a fraction after the buzzer. In the third period, forward Ted Hodgson attempted to steam out of the Estevan zone but lost the puck when it hit a linesman.

The puck rebounded to Al Edmonton player and led to the winning goal when Dave Rochefort picked the short side behind Don Caley.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For April 28

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Day features decisions concerning emotions and money. You can get to heart of matter. Emotions respond. Truth about others — and yourself — comes to surface.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Solid indications of progress . . . but avoid overspeed. Don't rush. Maintain pace. Money outlook favorably settled. Knowledge — highlight reasonable attitude.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Day may find you light-hearted . . . in no mood for serious contemplation. Plan for fun with friends, innovating new activities which delight family. Be versatile.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Friends and money not most favorable mixture today. Know difference between necessity and desire. Take practical side. Check fine print — and responsibility.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Day features opportunity for change, creative endeavors. Cycle moves up. Challenges appear. You respond favorably under pressure. Utilize sense of showmanship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You can gain favorable judgment for enterprises. Make some adjustments, blight will bring harmony. Don't irritate others by insisting on the impossible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Journey may be necessary in connection with income, possessions. Refine meanings — your desires clear. Sweep away confusions, look behind scenes. Discover motives.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Much action indicated. Where there is movement . . . advancement is likely. Promotion very possible. Significant day. Pride, standing in community accented.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Favorable lunar aspect promotes journeys, higher education, added knowledge. You can learn ways of accomplishing basic chores. Welcome streamlined methods.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Seek new ways, make new starts. Stress confidence, originality. Avoid apathy, dig deep for knowledge. Gain indicated in financial area. But seek cooperation of associates.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Cement agreements affecting property, security; home comforts. Gather forces . . . push toward unity. Fight tendency to be moody. Pace is slow — but progress is steady.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Express talents, increase social activity. Adhere to basic principles. If you are moderate, you gain much in admiration. Avoid excess speed. Walk away from disputes with relatives, neighbors.

• • •

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are determined, but possess flair for originality. You succeed best in working for your own basic interests. Be true to your own desires.

Local Cruiser First Boat Under Bridge

TRENTON — Trenton Legion (branch 110) welfare officer, Stanley Sears, thinks he should get "the credit and take care of being the first boat "under the bridge" this year.

Mr. Sears brought his 25-foot steel hull "Georgian" cruiser down from Niagara on the Lake yesterday, and slipped and s e Trenton's swing bridge.

The cruiser sleeps four and Mr. Sears bought her this year in order to form a part of a "flotilla" of boats from this area to EXPO next year. He says there are many items of com-fort he wants to add to his boat before the trip and besides that, he "wants to get the feel of the boat."

Navigation on the Trent Canal opens May 13 this year. A Flor-ida-based boat, "The Bonita" is generally the first boat "offici-ally" through the bridge a n d Lock No. 1.

Harold Quibell Given Party On Retirement

TRENTON — A "doodle bug" was the conversation piece at a weekend farewell party for re-tiring CNR agent, Harold Qui-bell at the Division Street home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Coon. Mr. Coon and Murray Poulson "drew" the electric train which used to ply between Lindsay, Blackwater and Midland in Bon Ami over the living room fire-place, where it met the eye of the 30 persons attend i n g the party.

Operating manager R o n a l d Messinger read out a letter to Mr. Quibell from area manager H. J. Fast, commending t h e agent for his 40 years of ser-vice with the railway.

Mrs. Quibell was presented with an orchid corsage and a centrepiece of red roses in a vase, and Mr. Coon presented Mr. Quibell with a p u r s e of money.

Mrs. Coon greeted the many relatives of the Quibells and the long-time business friends at the door, wearing a corsage of red roses.

Veterans Are Not Second Class Citizens Says Cobourg Mayor

TRENTON — Mayor J a c k Heenan of Cobourg, an RCAF veteran of World War II, told the more than 150 vets attend-ing the annual Vimy-VE ban-quet in Trenton last night that it was "time the national press changed its image of veterans."

"Veterans," said the mayor, "have been depicted as second class, beer drinking citizens. I can find you more people in worse conditions regarding drink in any hotel then you ever see in Legion halls."

Mayor Heenan, who said he hadn't had a drink in 15 years, said it was time the members of the Legion stood up on their own two feet and told the country what the organization stands for . . . which, he said, was re-forms in welfare legislation and such things as the encourage-ment of education through schol-arships and outright subsidies.

"Many a doctor or lawyer re-ceived his education through the Legion," said Mayor Hee-nan, "and doesn't even belong to the Legion. No more is there preference for Legionnaires in Canada. Some people don't even want to recognize veterans. It's hard to believe a Rotary button will get you further than a Le-gion button."

University students referred to Remembrance Day last year as a "celebration sponsored by sadists." They should be "run" ther from the truth, said t h e mayor. Remembrance Day was the greatest deterrent to war there is.

"Today we have more peace keeping organizations in t h e world than ever before in his-tory. And we have less peace and more chance of war. The 200,000 members of Royal Cana-dian Legion the greatest peace keeping force in this country."

Mayor Heenan urged the vet-erans present to offer t h e m-selves for public service in or-der to prove to the critics that they were not "second class citi-zens."

He cited the case in point of ex-mayor Ross Burtt, a Vimy vet, who was at the banquet to bring civic greetings from Mayor James MacDonald, who was unable to attend.

Vimy vets and those who had been at the gas raids of Ypres rubbed shoulders with their younger counterparts from World War II at last night's meeting. A special guest was Charles Baker, a Boer War vet-eran and also a First World War veteran. Comrade Baker is 89. There were 22 Vimy vets at the meeting and seven "Wipers" veterans, by actual count, which fact, said Trenton branch president Russell King, was a "record" for veterans' gather-ings across Canada.

Mr. Heenan was introduced by past branch president Wm. Lawson and thanked by vice president George Briggs.

Grace was said by F r a n k Barry, Sr., and the Toast to the Queen was proposed by Louis Rauch. Following the singing of the "Queen," several of the Old Sweats were heard to say, "The Queen . . . God bless her."

The Last Post was sounded and two moments' silence ob-served for the fallen.

Wm. Farrell thanked the la-dies of the auxiliary, which was he said, "the best ladies' auxili-ary in Ontario. The ladies pre-pared and served the banquet.

In a tribute to the Vimy vets, Earl Donaldson said "the crowd has thinned out, but the tradition set at Vimy will never die."

Auto Industry Will Accept Safety Rules

WASHINGTON (AP)—Spokes-men for the U.S. auto industry told Congress today that car manufacturers have reversed themselves and agreed to ac-cept mandatory federal safety standards for all vehicles.

Faced with rising congres-sional demands for mandatory regulations, the industry aband-oned its insistence that it should be allowed to devise its own safety standards.

The industry's new stance, to be outlined to the house com-merce committee by vice-pre-sident John Bugas of Ford Motor Company, embraces most of the Johnson administration's legis-lation—with some reservations.

But it goes beyond the ad-ministration's bill in the key matter of safety standards:

WANT STANDARDS SET

The administration proposed that the commerce secretary—or transportation secretary if such a position is created—be empowered to set such stand-ards. But the auto makers plan to tell Congress they favor re-quiring him to set standards.

The auto makers were re-ported seeking a revision giv-ing the states a role in setting and enforcing the standards if something not included in the administration bill. Auto mak-ers were reported to view the key question as not whether there should be standards—but how they should be devised and enforced.

CERAMIC-ARMOURED EXHAUST SYSTEM
NOW FROM AMERICAN MOTORS!

Our exclusive Ceramic-Armoured Exhaust System is not just sheet metal alone. It's made with a tough, ceramic-armoured coating exactly like the nose cone of a space rocket. It withstands the blasts of hot, corrosive gases. It defies rust. It resists wear season after season, mile after mile. It reduces the danger of leaking fumes; passengers ride in safety. It's only one of the advanced engineering features you get from American Motors now—features others won't offer for years to come.

Advanced engineering is the built-in plus that every American Motors car offers you. Unbeatable quality through-and-through. Features that lead the field. Take a look:

Single Unit Construction. Body and frame on all American Motors cars are welded together into one, single, solid unit for tremendous strength and safety. Result: a stronger, safer, longer-lasting car—a car free from rattles.

Double Safety Brakes. Not just one braking system, but two. If one set ever fails, the other stops you safely. (Double Safety Brakes have been an exclusive feature, at no extra cost, on all our models since 1962. Some other manufacturers have now announced that they will adopt this feature—but not until their 1967 models.)

World's best rustproofing. All our cars get a "bath." They're deep-dipped up to their rooflines in rustproofing compound six separate times. Then they're dipped again in primer and given a separate spray coat of primer. Then come three gleaming coats of Lustre-Gard super enamel. You get a beautiful finish and long-lasting protection from the ravages of rust.

Widest range of seating options in the industry. Luxurious reclining seats (buckets, if you want). Armrests and adjustable headrests. And fine-furniture coil springs in all our seats in all our models. (Only one other North American car offers this—and it's in the luxury class).

Fibreglass rooliners and double door seals. A far cry from flimsy fabric rooliners and single door seals. Noise stays out. Drafts, winds, chills can't get in.

Attention to detail. American Motors offers the durability of plastic kick panels, all-metal rear-deck shelves, even ashtrays that roll out on ball bearings. Small details, yes—but they add up to overall quality.

Beautiful luxury fittings. A big, big selection! All the power equip-ment and features you want. And floor consoles. Thick-cut pile carpeting. Wire wheel discs. Walnut interior paneling. Houndstooth Check fabric. New vinyl patterns. Exciting styling in top-of-the-line Ambassador DPL, Rambler Rogue and Rambler Rebel.

New car quality. We believe that quality is what you build in—not what you add on. We build quality into all our cars from the beginning. We take the time. We take the trouble. We always have. We always will.

Used car quality. The exclusive quality and features that we build into our full line of cars mean that an American Motors used car is a better value and a better buy.

THE FONTABERRY

The newest of the Rollins plans for 1966, the Fontaberry contains all the tried and true features common to a Rollins Home.

A larger bungalow at a price everyone can afford, the Fontaberry has a large separate formal dining room, larger than average kitchen and 3 spacious bedrooms.

THE KITCHEN — is truly a recipe to last a lifetime. Unanimously endorsed by a group of housewives polled by the builder. The new style cupboards are vinyl faced for care-free and wear-proof use. The general layout of the kitchen requires a minimum of steps to cover the work area and the new seamless, dirt-free floor (a joy to keep) is optional in the Fontaberry. Daily chores become a cheerful pastime in this kitchen.

THE BEDROOMS — Because of the general increase in size of this model the bedrooms are afforded large closets from floor to ceiling providing an abundance of storage space. The floors are finished in care free poly-urethane, forever precluding the need for waxing.

THE LIVING ROOM — is indeed an invitation to relax. Well separated from the sleeping area, it affords quiet and privacy. The floor is finished in hi-gloss, poly-urethane and a variety of picture windows are available.

BASEMENT — Services, utility and future rec-room areas well planned for ultimate in useable space.

ELEVATION — The addition of higher pitch roof and extruding brick in corners gives the Fontaberry that expensive look common to much higher priced homes. The Fontaberry is truly a classic home with a classic look.

Add to this handsome home the experience and integrity that goes into the construction of every Rollins Home. In all the many models that Maurice Rollins builds, only the finest brand name materials are used. only the latest and advanced techniques are employed, to ensure that your Rollins Home will not become obsolete in the future. Add too, the many, many extras in interior decor, the numerous "finishing touches" which enhance the beauty and practibility of your home.

Here's a special message to young families, A new house is an excellent investment for the future, it's your protection against inflation. As the cost of living rises over the years, so will the value of your home.

CANNED RASPBERRIES

Select nice, firm, not too ripe berries and don't use ones picked directly after a rain. Place a cloth in the bottom of your wash tub, wash boiler or pan serving kettle and pour in about 2" hot water. Pack the raspberries raw in hot sterilized jars filling jars to neck; fill to within ¼" of top with boiling medium syrup.

Tighten lope, place jars as soon as they are filled in prepared tub, boiler or kettle. As soon as all your jars are filled, pour boiling water into container, to 2" over top of jars. Cover immediately with lid and with old blankets or clean old rugs and allow them to stand until cold. Remove jars making sure tops are tight, store in cool dark place. (Syrup for 1 qt. — 1 cup sugar to 2 cups water for medium syrup.)

Mrs. Don McLaren,
R R 1, Corbyville, Ont.

½ cup water
¼ cup rice
1½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
⅛ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 egg

METHOD: Mix well by hand. To make stuffed peppers, cut top off pepper, scoop out seeds, fill with meat filling and replace top. Bake in oven for 1½ hrs, put 1 cup water in pan.

To stuff squash, boil squash 3 min. in water, take out and run cold water over it. Cut in half, scoop out seeds and stuff with the filling. Bake.

For stuffed cabbage, put cabbage in boiling water for 10 min. remove and run cold water over it. Cut each leaf off and lay flat on table, put 2 tbsp. hamburg filling and fold it together. Place old leaves or hard veins you cut off leaves in bottom of pot, and place rolled leaves on top. Add stewed tomatoes, and cook till rice is tender with an old heavy plate placed on top as a cover.

RHUBARB-STRAWBERRY DEEP DISH PIE

1 1/2 qts pkg. frozen strawberries
4 cups cut up rhubarb
2 tsp grated lemon rind
1 tbsp lemon juice
1 cup sugar
3 tbsp quick-cooking tapioca
2 tbsp butter

Pastry for 1-crust pie, milk sugar

METHOD: Thaw strawberries enough to break apart. Heat oven to 400 F. Butter an 8" sq. glass baking dish. Combine rhubarb, strawberries and lemon rind lightly in large bowl. Sprinkle in lemon juice.

Combine sugar and tapioca. Toss lightly through the fruit. Put in prepared baking dish. Dot with butter. Roll pastry in a square larger than baking dish. Lay it over the fruit, turn edges of pastry under and crimp and seal well to the sides of the dish. Cut vents in top to let steam escape. Brush the pastry with milk then sprinkle it generously with sugar. Bake about 45 min. or until pastry is well browned and the filling is bubbling well. This is delicious if served slightly warm with vanilla ice cream.

Mrs Doreen Walsh.

HONEY - APPLE PIE

Pastry for 2-crust 9" pie.
3/4 cup sugar
1 tsp. nutmeg
6 cups sliced peeled apples
1 1/2 tbsps butter
1/3 cup liquid honey
1 tbsp. grated orange rind
Icing sugar

METHOD: Heat oven to 425 F. Line 9" pie pan with half of pastry leaving 1" of pastry hanging over edge of pan.

Combine sugar and nutmeg add to apple slices, mixing lightly. Put apples into prepared pan. Dot with butter. Roll remaining pastry and cut into 1/2" strips. Moisten edge of bottom pastry with water and make lattice top with strips, sealing them to bottom crust.

Turn bottom crust and strips under and fold to make a high edge. Over edge carefully with 1 1/2" wide strip of aluminum foil to keep it from getting too brown. Bake 50-60 min. or until apples are tender and pastry is well brown.

Combine honey and orange rind, pour slowly through the openings in the lattice when the pie is baked. Return to the oven for 5 min. Cool to lukewarm and sift icing sugar over top. Serve warm or cold.

Tasty Foreign Gourmet Dishes

Main Dishes

FATHER'S FAVORITE SOUP

2 lb. potatoes (approx. 8 medsized), peeled and diced
2/3 cup finely-chopped onion
3 cups water
1/4 cup butter
5 cups milk
1/4 cup all purpose flour
1 28 oz. can tomatoes
2 tbsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper

METHOD: Combine potatoes, onion and water in deep heavy saucepan. Place over high heat and bring contents to boiling point. Cover saucepan, lower heat and simmer for 30 min. or until potatoes are tender. Add butter, 4 cups milk and cook over medium heat stirring frequently, until mixture comes to just below the boiling point. Meanwhile, place flour and remaining 1 cup milk in a bowl, stir until smooth. Add about 1/4 cup hot potato mixture and blend well. Stir potato-flour mixture into remaining hot potato mixture in saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until potato mixture is smooth and thick. Add tomatoes salt and pepper. Continue to cook and stir over med. heat until soup comes to just below boiling point. Don't allow soup to boil. If it might curdle. (Although curdling is necessary to prevent sticking, it should be done with a light hand so that the potatoes and tomatoes remain in pieces).

Ladle soup into heated bowls and garnish each with a generous sprinkling of finely-grated Cheddar Cheese. Makes 8 servings.

Mrs. Doreen Walsh,
R R 1, Shannonville, Ont.

CURRIED BEEF

Heat 2 tbsp. salad oil in large saucepan over med. heat. Add:
2 med. onions, chopped
2 tbsp. imported curry powder
½ tsp. black pepper

Cook until onions are soft. Add
1 lb. beef cut into ½" cubes and brown thoroughly. Add:

1 tsp salt
8 bay leaves
1 cup tinned tomatoes or
1 - 4 oz. tin tomato sauce

Simmer for 2 - 2½ hours. If necessary add water to make a thick rich gravy. Serve on rice with such accompaniments as: chopped tomato and onion; sliced banana; chopped hard cooked egg; chutney; chopped peanuts; orange segments; raisins; coconut; pineapple cubes; poppadums; Bombay duck. This is even better heated up and served the next day. Should the meat be not for your tastes, a little grated pobse or orange marmalade can be added. For an economical dish to serve 8-10 people, use 2 lb. round steak roast cut up, and triple all the ingredients.

Mrs. D. J. Davey,
90 Rollins Drive, Belleville, Ont.

SWEET AND SOUR SHORT RIBS (CHINESE)

2½ to 3 lb. short ribs (beef)
Salt, pepper, flour, shortening or cooking oil
2 cup sliced onion
1 sliced clove garlic
1½ cups hot water
1 small bay leaf
2 tbsp. brown sugar
1-3 cup ketchup
¼ cup vinegar
METHOD: Have short ribs cut in individual servings. Trim off fat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and roll in flour. Brown well in shortening on all sides in a dutch oven or heavy saucepan. Remove meat, cook onion and garlic in fat left in pan for 2 or 3 min. Combine remaining ingredients and add to dutch oven, along with meat, cover, and simmer over low heat until meat is tender — 2½ to 3 hrs.

Remove meat to a warm platter, pour off fat in pan. To remaining liquid in pan, stir in mixture of 2 tbsp. flour and 2 tbsp. water. Allow to thicken. Serve.

Mrs. Clare Wood,
Myer St., Belleville, Ont.

DELICIOUS CREAMY PUMPKIN PIE

1 cup pumpkin 15 oz. size
1¼ cup carnation milk
¾ cup molasses
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs beaten well
¼ tsp. nutmeg
½ tsp cloves
½ tsp. ginger
2 tbsp. soft butter

METHOD: Blend all ingredients together and put in large pie shell. Bake 45-50 min. at 375 F. or until knife inserted in side of filling comes out clean. Serve with whipped cream or cream whip.

Mrs. Marjorie Redquest,
17 Benjamin St., Belleville, Ont.

PLAIN PASTRY

2 cups unsifted all purpose flour
½ tsp salt
⅔ cup chilled shortening
2 tsp. white sugar
2 tbsp. chilled butter
Ice water (about 4 tbsp.)

METHOD: Measure and sift flour, sugar and salt together into a bowl. Cut in the chilled shortening until mixture is like coarse oatmeal. Cut in the butter until pieces are ¼" thick. Sprinkle with very little ice water and stir with fork. Continue adding small amounts of ice water and stirring until mixture clings together and clears bowl. Press lightly into a ball. Chill for a few minutes to make rolling easier.

Yield enough pastry for a two crust 9" pie plus four 2" tart shells.

NOTE: If you prefer, use two cups unsifted pastry flour in place of all-purpose flour, but reduce shortening to ⅓ cup.

Mrs. Doreen Walsh,
R R 1, Shannonville, Ont.

KITCHEN CONTENTMENT BEGINS WITH A RANGE from GE

AFTER THE ROAST HAS SPATTERED, THE STEAK HAS SIZZLED, THE CASSEROLE HAS BUBBLED AND THE BERRY PIE HAS DRIPPED, WHO CLEANS THE OVEN ?

THE OVEN DOES!

Hard to believe, isn't it, that you can say "goodbye forever" to oven cleaning drudgery. But it's true! All you do is turn the dial to 'clean", set the timer, and that's all. Your Canadian General Electric P-7 oven does the rest. The same electricity that cooks your food cleans up the spatter and mess completely. Within 2 - 3 hours, all those crusted-on pie juices and roast drippings disappear, leaving your oven as clean as the day it was new. Even in corners and ridges, spots where you could never clean before. There's no smoke, no smell and no mess. And no danger either. The oven door cannot be opened during the cleaning process. The cost in electricity? Pennies. Much less than you spend on chemical cleaning materials.

APPLE DUMPLINGS

1 egg
¼ cup sugar
4 level tbsp. shortening
½ cup milk
2 cups flour
3 level tsp. baking powder
Mix like biscuits. Cut in squares, and put a quarter of an apple in each.

SYRUP

1 cup brown sugar
2 cups water, salt, vanilla
1 tbsp butter.

Combine, bring to a boil. Pour over dumplings and bake.

Mrs. Charles Ross,
R R 4, Stirling, Ont.

APPLE PUDDING

BATTER:
1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
2 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp salt
½ cup milk
1½ cups diced apples

SAUCE:
2¼ cups boiling water
2 tsp. butter
1 cup brown sugar

METHOD: Cut and place apples in deep sauce pan. Make batter and pour evenly over apples until covered. Then add sauce, bake at 350 F for 1 hr. or until crust is browned well.

Mrs. Donne Carmas,
R R 1, Foxboro, Ont.

BAKED RICE PUDDING

1-3 cup regular style rice
3 cups milk
1-3 cup white sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1-3 tsp salt
Raisins and nutmeg.

METHOD: Preheat oven to 325 F. Wash and drain rice. Into buttered dish measure milk, sugar, vanilla, salt, raisins and nutmeg. Add rice and combine thoroughly. Bake in slow oven till rice is tender and pudding has started to thicken. Stir occasionally during first hour, to prevent rice from settling, then bake without stirring to allow a nice brown crust to form. Add a little milk during baking if pudding seems dry. Serves 4-5.

Mrs. Ernest Dorey,
Dasseronto, Ont.

BROWNIES

1 tin eagle brand milk
1-1-4 cups graham wafers
2 tbsp. cocoa
1 tsp. vanilla
½ cup chopped walnuts

Roll out graham wafers, add cocoa, milk and vanilla, add nuts. Stir well. Bake at 300 F. for 40 min.

ICING:
½ pkg. Philadelphia Cream Cheese
Icing sugar
Milk
Peppermint flavoring

Mix altogether and pour over above mixture. Make another icing of cocoa, vanilla, milk and icing sugar, and pour over the first icing.

Mrs. Duane Martin,
Corbyville, Ont.

BOILED RAISIN CAKE

2 cups seedless raisins
1-3 cup butter
1 cup well-packed dark brown sugar
½ tsp. each cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger
1 cup hot water
2 cups sifted all - purpose flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking soda
½ cup orange juice
1 tsp. vanilla

METHOD: Mix raisins, butter, brown sugar, spices and water in heavy saucepan. Place over high heat and bring contents to boiling point. Lower heat, simmer for 5 min.

Remove from heat, turn raisin mixture into large bowl. Allow to cool for 20 min. at room temp. Meanwhile, combine sifted flour, salt and baking soda and mix gently with fork.

Add orange juice, vanilla and dry ingredients to cooled mixture and beat well with wooden spoon. Turn batter into well-greased 10¼" x 3¾" x 2¾" loaf pan. Using a spatula, make a path in the batter (lengthwise) so that it is higher on the sides of the pan than it is in the centre. Bake in preheated, moderate oven, 350 F, for 1 hr. Allow cake to cook in pan for 10 min, then unmold onto wire rack and cool completely. Let cake ripen for at least a day before slicing.

NOTE: This loaf cake is ideal for cottage or hunting camp as it stays fresh and moist for some time.

Mrs. Roy Parks,
Box 384, Tweed, Ont.

SHORTBREAD BARS

FRUIT BREAD DELUXE

1 pkg. active dry yeast
¼ cup warm water
¼ tsp. salt
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
1 egg yolk (set aside white)
¼ cup margarine
2¼ cups unsifted flour
¼ cup almonds
¼ cup chopped citron
¼ cup candied cherries
¼ cup raisins
1 tbsp. grated lemon peel
2 tbsp. margarine
1 tbsp. water
Confectioners sugar frosting

STEP 1:
Dissolve yeast in warm water. Add sugar, salt, eggs, egg yolk, margarine and half the flour. Beat 10 min.

STEP 2:
Blend in rest of flour, almonds fruits and lemon peel. Cover; let rise until doubled, about 1¼ hrs. Stir down batter by beating 25 strokes. Cover tightly and refrigerate overnight.

STEP 3:
On well floured board, divide dough in half. Press each half into a 12" x 7" oval. Spread ovals with 2 tbsp. margarine. Fold each in two, longways. Firmly press folded edges only. Place on greased baking sheets. Brush with slightly beaten egg white mixed with 1 tbsp. water. Let rise until doubled (1 hr.)

STEP 4:

METHOD: Bring orange juice to a boil. Remove from heat, add potato flakes and beat well with a fork to blend. Set aside. Cream butter, add sugar and eggs, and beat until fluffy. Stir in vanilla, potatoes and pumpkin. Sift flour, soda, salt and pumpkin pie spice together into mixture and beat until smooth. Fold in orange rind and nuts.

Spoon into well greased 2 qt. mould (one with a tube is preferable). Cover mould with foil. Set on rack in large kettle and add boiling water to half-way up side of mould. Steam about two hours or until a toothpick stuck in centre comes out clean. Serve hot, in wedges and topped with following pudding sauce.

PUDDING SAUCE

½ cup butter
½ cup sugar
½ cup brown sugar
2 egg whites
1 tsp. vanilla
½ cup whipping cream

METHOD: Combine butter, and sugar in top of double boiler. Set over boiling water, stir until blended. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form and fold into sugar mixture. Continue cooking until sugar is all melted, stirring occasionally. Cool, stir in vanilla, chill. Stir to blend at serving time. Whip cream until stiff and fold in. Serve over steamed or baked puddings.

HOW TO MAKE A PERFECT PIE

Many almost-perfect pies fever or become prize winners because of one of the following reasons. Soggy crusts, burnt edge, tough too short or too bland pastry; and unattractive appearance of spillover; tasteless filling. If you set out to win a contest, practise on the family ahead of time, following these tips.

SOGGY CRUST: You are apt to get a soggy undercrust if the pie is baked at too low a temperature, or left for too short a time at the high starting temperature. (Shiny pans and foil plates reflect heat and sometimes need 20 to 30 min. at 450 F. before reducing heat to 350 F. Glass, dark pans, enamelware, and earthenware absorb heat, so try baking at 425 F for 40 min. before reducing heat.) Often soggy undercrusts are the result of the pie being too high in the oven. If it's baked too low in the oven, there's a chance of a soggy top crust. If you have this trouble, start the pie on a low rack and raise it halfway through cooking.

BURNT EDGE:- This most often occurs when pastry is too short or made with hard and-or butter, and the pie is being cooked in a pan that absorbs heat. If the edge begins to brown noticeable before the last half of the baking time, protect it with strips of foil.

TOUGH, TOO SHORT, OR TOO BLAND PASTRY: Too much fat will make a mixture that cracks during rolling, and crumbles when cooked. Not enough fat and too much handling will result in a tough texture. In regular pastry sprinkle the cold liquid gradually over the fat and flour mixture to avoid overwetting. When there is too much liquid, pastry will be sticky and extra flour is needed for rolling. This toughens the pastry. Pastry needs try edge oatmeal ¼ inch beyond the edge of the pan. With scissors cut it at ¼ inch intervals to a depth of ½ inch. Fold one ¼ inch strip in and give the next a half turn and press down. Continue around pie.

Dampen the bottom strips where the top strips touch and press lightly together, slip onto a cookie sheet and chill. Dampen the pie edge and invert the woven top over. (You may like to twist strips while weaving, unless your pastry cracks too easily.)

CUTOUTS:- Roll top pastry on wax paper and cut out holes with a small flower-shaped cutter or bottle cap. If you remove too many cutouts, chill the pastry before transferring it to the pie, otherwise it might break. Place the cutouts here and there over the pastry, ¼ you like.

BRAIDS: These look pretty around the edge of an open-faced or crisscross pie, but are too heavy on a two-crust pie. Roll leftover pastry into a large rectangle and cut ½ inch strips. Braid enough to encircle the pie, sealing the braid on by dampening the edge with water and pressing lightly.

LEAVES: Let the double pastry edge extend ¼ inch beyond the edge of the pan. With scissors cut it at ¼ inch intervals to a depth of ½ inch. Fold one ¼ inch strip in and give the next a half turn and press down. Continue around pie.

LAUREL WREATH: Cut out small circles of pastry (about ½ inch in diameter) with a bottle cap. Cut each in half. Press one semi-circle with rounded side out at an angle to the dampened pastery edge. Press the next one slightly overlapping the base of the first, and with rounded side in, continue around pie.

SPILLOVERS: This generally happens when there is too much filling for the size of the pan, or the pie is baked at too low a temperature to start with. (Standard pie plates can hold as much as ½ inch in depth and ½ inch in diameter.) Before baking, always seal dampened eges by turning top pastry under the edge of bottom pastry and crimping firmly.

TASTELESS FILLING: Most fruit fillings need a flavor lift, and small amounts of lemon or orange juice, vinegar, grated lemon or orange rind, even a pinch of salt may be needed. Cherries and peaches came alive with a drop or two of almond flavoring.

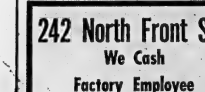
PUMPKIN CREAM PIE



1 deep 9" unbaked pie shell (unpricked)
1 (15 oz.) can pumpkin or 1¾cups
3 eggs beaten
¼ plus ½ cup cream
2-3 cup brown sugar lightly packed
3 tbsp. molasses
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp cinnamon
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tsp ginger
¼ tsp. nutmeg or mace

METHOD: Preheat oven to 450 F. Chill pie shell in the refrigerator or freezer while preparing filling. This helps to prevent a soggy bottom. Mix filling ingredients, thoroughly together, and half-fill prepared shell. To prevent spilling, set pie plate on rolled out rack in preheated oven and pour in remaining filling. Bake for ½ min. then reduce heat to 350 F and bake until filling is almost set, about 30 min longer. Remove from oven when centre is still slightly soft. It will set to a firm consistency on cooling. Overcooking sometimes causes pumpkin to crack.

Supreme Court Will Review Truscott Case

OTTAWA (CP) — A country-wide debate over the guilt or innocence of Steven Truscott has brought the seven-year-old murder case to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Solicitor-General Pennell told the Commons Tuesday that Canada's highest court has been asked to decide if there was a miscarriage of justice when Steven, then 14, was convicted of the strangling of 12-year-old Lynne Harper near Clinton, Ont., in 1959.

The order-in-council referring the case to the Supreme Court asks the justices to consider the existing record — transcript of the trial and the appeal — and the appeal — "and such further evidence as the court, in its discretion, may receive and consider."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who repeatedly has asked the government to order granting Steven a new trial, asked why this hadn't been done. Mr. Pennell said new Supreme Court rules, which allow it to consider questions of facts as well as law, assure the case will be thoroughly reviewed.

Mrs. Dan Truscott, who now lives in nearby Richmond, was in the Commons gallery as the announcement was made. She said she was happy about the reference but added she would have preferred a royal commission investigation into the case.

HAVE MORE FAITH

It would have more time and could hear more witnesses than the Supreme Court, she said.

Steven's father, a warrant officer with the RCAF here, called Collins Bay medium security prison when he heard the news. He wasn't allowed to pass it along to his son but was assured Steven would hear of it.

A justice department official said the Supreme Court hearing could have three outcomes — a pardon, a new trial or affirmation of the conviction.

It's the second time the Supreme Court will hear an appeal in first decided should not argued before it.

The first was in 1956 when the cabinet referred the conviction of Wilbert Coffin, the Gaspe prospector found guilty of slaying three American hunters.

COFFIN WAS HANGED

The court upheld the conviction and Coffin was hanged on Oct. 10, 1956.

Mr. Pennell said Tuesday there is "a considerable difference between the type of reflection in this [Truscott's] case and that in the Coffin matter."

The Supreme Court had been restricted to hearing arguments based on law in the Coffin case. It could hear all arguments in the Truscott matter and any new evidence that might be presented.

With a busy spring session ahead of it, it wasn't known just when the Truscott appeal would come before the court.

"There's still a lot of nerve-wracking days ahead," said Mrs. Truscott who with her husband has managed to see Steven at least once a month in the seven years he's been in jail.

SENTENCE FLOORS

TORONTO (CP) — A young bride of 20 days, collapsed in court Tuesday when her husband, Paul Leybourne, 22, was jailed for six years. Leybourne admitted stealing goods worth $17,800 from several Toronto stores.

FIRST CALL with Bonkers

"If you knew Gerda, Like we knew Gerda, Oh . . Oh . . Oh! .."

Spirited Defence Of Judge

TORONTO (CP)—Arthur Isabel LeBourdais, whose book brought the Steven Truscott trial and conviction to public attention last month, says she regrets the federal government's decision to refer the case for review to the Supreme Court of Canada instead of investigating it through a royal commission.

"What the government has announced is not a full inquiry into all the facts which led to the conviction of Steven Truscott," she said in a statement today.

"It is not even an inquiry in the correct sense of the word. It is a reference to the Supreme Court to be heard as though it were an appeal by Steven Truscott under the present law relating to appeals."

Mrs. LeBourdais' book, The Trial of Steven Truscott, suggests there has been a miscarriage of justice and that he is innocent of the rape - murder seven years ago of 12-year-old Lynn Harper of Clinton, Ont.

BEGIN HE DEATH SENTENCE

Truscott, now 21, has his death sentence commuted to life imprisonment and is currently in Collins Bay Penitentiary, Kingston, Ont.

Mrs. LeBourdais said Tuesday's order-in-council sending the case to the Supreme Court "does not mean that it is referred to lawyers as it means to the public.

"For example, the statement that the court will consider such further evidence as the court in its discretion may receive sounds as though the court could consider any evidence.

"But lawyers give the word discretion a special meaning—judicial discretion—which is to be exercised judicially in accordance with the practices and precedents of the courts.

"I understand the solicitor general (Larry Pennell) attaches great importance to the words "further evidence" in the order-in-council, but further evidence about what?

PROBE PUBLIC ATTITUDE?

"The so-called investigation of Lynn Harper's disappearance? The taking, re-taking and re-drafting of statements from child witnesses? The publicity given the preliminary hearing?

The public attitude in Huron County that made the search for a foregone conclusion in the minds of so many people? The tremendous pressure on all possible resources to get a conviction and the public's concern of the facilities for the defence?"

Mrs. LeBourdais says these were the factors which mattered most before and during the trial, whether the jurors usually gone into by an appellate tribunal.

WHAT IS NEEDED

"What is needed, The Trial of Steven Truscott considerable research was done into the medical evidence, particularly as it related to the arbitrary setting of the time of death that became the basis for the entire case against the boy.

"I hope that it seems unlikely that a Supreme Court hearing could provide any opportunity for a thorough examination that experts and textbooks overwhelmingly support the medical views of the defence on these principles involved.

"I can only hope that because of the grave concern already expressed by Canadians from coast to coast, the Supreme Court may in this instance go beyond usual practice."

Toronto CBC Producers Sunday Eve Strike Deadline

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Producers' Association early today issued an ultimatum that they would withdraw their services from the CBC television network at 10 p.m. EDT Sunday if CBC President Alphonse Ouimet doesn't take action to remove the causes of a current dispute.

Tom Koch, association president, didn't name the causes when he made his announcement after an eight-hour meeting of the producers in a downtown hotel.

* * *

In Ottawa Tuesday, Mr. Ouimet rejected a request from the association executive to reopen the case of Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre, disclaimed co-hosts of the CBC public affairs program This Hour Has Seven Days.

The 10 p.m. withdrawal deadline is one minute before Seven Days is to go on the air Sunday.

Mr. Koch said no other course was left open to the producers.

"We're not looking for a strike; we're looking for a solution," he said.

INVOLVED IS

A CBC spokesman said 68 producers belong to the association.

Mr. Koch said the association had received the promise of general and immediate support from French-language producers in Quebec, and indications that withdrawal action would be supported by producers across the country.

The strike threat was first lowered Tuesday when the association statement said its members would withdraw their services unless Mr. Ouimet accepted a three-point ultimatum.

Demands include a CBC guarantee that no firings or disciplinary transfers be made without showing demonstrative cause. In disputes, the association wants compulsory arbitration by the federal labor department.

The association also demands that management make no production decision on television programs without consultation with producers and supervisors.

Two MP's Ask Action Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Producer Douglas Leiterman, stating it would be a tragedy if the dispute over the Seven Days hosts killed the popular TV program, said Tuesday night he thinks a way will be found to "get it back on the rails."

Mr. Leiterman, executive producer of This Hour Has Seven Days, made the statement in the Commons as broadcasting committee several hours after CBC management rejected a demand by producers to reconsider the removal of the co-hosts, Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre.

He said he thought Mr. LaPierre was wrong when he told the committee earlier in the day that Seven Days was dead.

The committee is investigating the removal of the hosts and allegations that the controversy is only a symptom of wider problems within the publicly-owned corporation.

Earlier, CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet announced that management would not reconsider its decision about Mr. Watson and Mr. LaPierre, two committee members presented a petition aimed at persuading producers to delay any strike at least until the hearings have been completed.

PROPOSES THE MOTION

Gordon Fairweather (PC—Royal) proposed a motion asking the producers to waive any strike deadline until all witnesses are heard, and to take up Prime Minister Pearson's offer to use his "good offices" to help in the dispute.

Barry Mather (NDP — New Westminster) proposed an amendment urging the CBC management to postpone any dismissals until the committee hearings are completed.

Both motions were referred to the steering committee. A decision on what action will be taken could not immediately be expected when the hearing resumes today.

If there is no view a solution can be found, Mr. Leiterman told the committee earlier in the day that several actions he expects management to take will have the effect of "emasculating" Seven Days.

He had received indications some other personnel will be removed, the program is hedged out, the use of satire restricted, and reporting of injustices reduced.

Items management considers "sleeper issues" such as segment on the bare - breasted dancer with the silicone bosom, would be withheld.

WOULD BE GRADUAL

Mr. Leiterman also said any strike is unlikely until Sunday, but may start with "a gradual withdrawal" of services so the CBC's programming would not be disrupted.

He said this Sunday's Seven Days program is in preparation

Meteorite Landing Point Fixed as Southern Ont.

OTTAWA (CP)—The meteorite sighted as a greenish fireball by ground watchers in eastern Ontario, Quebec and the northeastern United States Monday night, probably came down in southern Quebec, a Dominion Observatory official said Tuesday.

Dr. Ian Halliday, chief of the observatory's meteor physics division, said the point of impact has been narrowed down to the area between Montreal and the American border.

"We have an interesting report from Sherbrooke, and combining this one with observations from widely separated points on the continent we've narrowed the area down as close as we would like to say at the moment," Dr. Halliday said.

"Prompt discovery will be extremely important."

To recover a meteorite with that sort of speed and getting it studied in a suitable laboratory within two days after its impact "has never been accomplished yet."

Dr. Halliday said a fresh meteorite on the ground would certainly appear black.

"It would have a thick black crust on its likely wavy surface. It could be of any size but might be very heavy in relation to its size."

Houses Faces Busy Day

BY DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons embarks today on afinal, six-day opportunity to air complaints about the way its 265 seats will be reshaped by post-political redistribution.

Members must hand the electorations issue of constituency redistribution back to independent commissioners after next Wednesday.

In the meantime, scores of MPs from all parties will be crowding for a chance to speak.

The 10 commissions, one for each province, tabled their blueprints for boundary changes Jan. 19. Since then unexpected Commons hassles have left just six days for debate on MPs' appeals, despite a month's extension of the deadline set up by the redistribution statute.

After next Wednesday, the record of proceedings will be sent to the commissions, which may amend their proposals in light of objections or leave them unchanged.

Eighteen complaints involving specific constituencies and two applying to the whole province are expected to be heard today as the House begins with the redistribution of Quebec's present 75 seats.

HIT NEW HIGH

Anticipating the break for the redistribution debate, the Commons went to work in earnest Monday and Tuesday, hitting a new high in its post-Easter detente.

Three bills were passed Tuesday and a Canada-United Kingdom agreement eliminating double taxation received approval in principle.

The three new acts:

VATICAN CITY (CP) — Pope Paul and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko held a historic meeting today and agreed to work together for world peace.

A Vatican communique said the meeting was "in continuation of the talk" the pontiff and Gromyko had at United Nations headquarters in New York during the Pope's visit there last October. They had exchanged remarks in a receiving line.

Vatican sources said it was almost certain they discussed the Pope's visit to the UN and his repeated pleas for world peace. The sources said the Pope probably urged the Soviet government to use its great influence to ease tensions and seek permanent peace.

The sources added that it was most unlikely that such ticklish subjects as recently worsened relations between the church and the Communist government of Poland were raised.

But the Soviet Church is not studied in a suitable laboratory visited the Saints Chapel to see the Michelangelo frescoes.

The audience, on the last day of a six-day visit to Italy by Gromyko, was seen here as likely to have far-reaching effects on the climate between Roman Catholicism and Communism.

Gromyko arranged to fly back to Moscow shortly after the unprecedented meeting.

Teachers May End Strike

QUEBEC (CP) — "Premier Jean Lesage said today government and union negotiators have agreed in principle that could settle a teachers' strike affecting more than 30,000 students.

The premier made the announcement after 2 a.m. today following a marathon meeting which began Tuesday afternoon.

Terms approved by the negotiating teams include a raise and to the membership of the 2,200-member teachers' union, Le Syndicat professionnel des instituteurs et institutrices de l'Est du Quebec (CNTU), at general meetings today.

Lesage said teachers from technical and arts schools as well as teachers colleges, have been on strike since Monday after a Superior Court injunction obtained by the government April 13.

The union's executive now must explain to the courts why the injunction was ignored. The case has been postponed until May 3.

Mr. Lesage said the union's negotiators had agreed on conditions which do not come within the terms of the contract, including the government dropping all legal proceedings against the union's 13-member executive and that, when the teachers be paid for a certain number of the days they were on strike."

"Neither of these requests was accepted," he said.

Granting these requests would be equal to making injunctions meaningless he said. Also, the teacher's decision to defy the injunction had been directed against the courts, not the government.

It was up to the judiciary to decide whether charges would be dropped, said Mr. Lesage.

Mr. Lesage said that although the government refused to pay for time spent on strike, "we did offer to pay for extra time that would be spent in holding

Only 4 Killed as Earthquake Wrecks Tashkent

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The earthquake - stricken city of Tashkent in Soviet central Asia, hit by a series of tremors Tuesday, was reported returning to normal today, with all transport and public utility services functioning.

Experts flown in from Moscow have begun to advise Tashkent officials on how to reconstruct this city of 1,127,000.

There have been no new casualties figures since the initial reports of four dead and 130 injured.

The main damage was reported in the old town of the historic city, where many of the local Uzbek inhabitants live in white - washed mud - walled houses.

The new buildings in the city, which lies in an earthquake-prone zone, are specially constructed to resist shocks.

Tass news agency said many homes and hospitals were destroyed along with several schools and public buildings. Two factories were also seriously damaged by the quake, the strongest to hit Tashkent for almost a century.

The quake registered 7.5 points on a 12-point seismic scale — which is described as "very strong" in Soviet reference works—and was centred about three to six miles below the city.

Madawaska Products Group Pleased With First Season Results in Syrup-making

With the first season's syrup-making operations completed, high hopes for the maple syrup industry in their area are being held by members of the Madawaska Valley Products Association.

The Association, with temporary headquarters in the old Catholic rectory in Combermere, takes in the extreme northern township of Hastings county and adjacent townships in Renfrew county, W. E. Murray is the association president.

Eighteen members of the 52-member association have built new sap houses and have taken advantage of ARDA grants to install new equipment such as sap evaporators, buckets and pipeline tubing.

The season's sap run was a good one and syrup makers are reported to have sold their product at $6.50 per gallon. Garnet Yuhs, association manager reports the demand for syrup is so great that it was sold as fast as it could be made.

BIG POTENTIAL

Estimates are that within a 50 mile radius of Combermere there are more than a million maple trees, capable of producing at least 200,000 gallons of syrup each spring.

Thus, if all the trees were tapped the syrup-making industry could become an additional farm income of more than a million dollars for the area.

Organized less than a year ago, the Madawaska Valley Products Association has attracted considerable attention in various parts of Canada.

A team of CBC cameramen came to the Combermere area several weeks ago and filmed a program on the new development. The film has already been shown on the "Country Calendar" TV show.

The success of the Madawaska Valley Products Association is said to be due to the leadership and initiative of the local people involved, who have banded together to take advantage of ARDA grants and boost income levels throughout the valley.

MEMBERSHIP CHEAP

A farmer joining the Madawaska Valley Products Association pays only one dollar membership fee. He receives as much new equipment from the ARDA plan as he requires and is instructed in the use of the equipment.

The average grant per farmer is about $2,000 which is asked to be paid back over the association at the rate of $300 for two years, with no interest charges.

The loan must be recovered by the Association if not returned to ARDA. It is used to set up more farmers in the syrup-making business.

Belleville Man Charged With Armed Robbery

L'ORIGINAL, Ont. (CP)—Two men standing trial for armed bank robbery dismissed their legal-aid defence counsel Wednesday and one of them told court he would conduct the defence.

George Ward, 30, formerly of Toronto, took over from Hawkesbury lawyer Rene Marin after Judge Ainslie told the court to defend Watson and Richard Frank Latta, 31, of Belleville.

The pair are being tried for the $12,000 armed robbery of the Bank of Canada at Plantagenet last November. A third man arrested at the time of the robbery has died of gunwounds following a gun battle with police at the scene.

Bank Manager Ludovic Pallard told the court as the trial began that Watson was the man who entered the bank on the robbery, tying outside the bank covered by a police officer with a machine gun.

The trial is continuing.

Kiwanis Club In Michigan To Visit Here

George Hume, a past president of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, yesterday outlined plans for the club's visit of the Belleville, Michigan, Kiwanis Club. Mr. Hume is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the event. The Michigan club is coming here on a visit made in April, 1965 by the local Kiwanians.

Mr. Hume explained that the 46-member party from Michigan will arrive at RCAF Station Trenton at 5.30 p.m., June 21, after a flight from Windsor. Accompanying the group will be Robert Ellis, a member of the Detroit No. 1 Club and one of the founders of Kiwanis.

An Air Force pipe and drum band will help local Kiwanians greet the visitors at Trenton. Members of both clubs will then motor to Belleville where a band will lead the procession to the Kiwanis Centre here.

The Michigan Kiwanians will be in charge of the afternoon and noon meeting. Later in the day, a trip to Black Diamond Limited, Ltd. at Madoc is scheduled and the visitors may also tour the Ontario School for the Deaf here.

WILL TAKE CRUISE

The next stop will be the Belleville Yacht Club where a small flotilla of boats will be waiting to carry the Michigan Kiwanians to the Trenton RCAF Yacht Club on the Bay of Quinte.

There, the visit will continue with a social gathering. Then, the short trip to the airbase for the flight back to Windsor will signal the end of the day's program, Mr. Hume said.

An alternative program is now in the planning stage and will be used should the weather-wise rule out part of the main agenda.

At yesterday's meeting, president Frank Hicks also spoke with Belleville, Michigan Club president Harry Higenfelter on a special Bell Telephone hookup that allowed club members to hear both ends of the conversation, as the two men discussed the June visit. Kiwanian C. Buckley, with Bell Telephone here, arranged for the use of the amplifophone system.

Belleville Kiwanians were reminded that the annual Peanut Day is scheduled for May 4 this year. Thirty-five Kinsman teams will participate in the one night blitz of the city.

Veteran Flying Workhorse, C-5 To Be Retired

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCAF will bid a formal goodbye Thursday to a veteran flying workhorse, the C-5, the only aircraft of this type ever built.

It was built for the air forces of Canada and Australia as a prototype, but the RCAF ordered no more. In many ways it's a forerunner of another plane on the way out, the North Star.

The last RCAF North Star was retired in 1965. The four-engined C-5 will be mothballed at a ceremony with Defence Minister Hellyer accepting the aircraft's logbook.

The big planes 9,500 hours of air time and 2,500,000 miles flown in its 16-year life with an air transport squadron.

MANY TOUR NORTH

Norwegian youth hostels put up travellers for 442,149 overnight visits in 1965, 57 per cent of them foreigners.

Cast Is Chosen For Guild Play

The Belleville Theatre Guild has announced the members of the cast for its upcoming production of "Amphitryon 38" by the French dramatist Jean Giraudoux.

The four principal lead roles will be played by Jim Alexander, Colin Mitchell and Elena and Peter Williamson. Those in the supporting cast will be Ruth MacGregor, Jim Patterson, Ed Wiens, Neil Phiefer, Nancy Rakestraw, and Joan Guthrie.

Two performances of the play will be given at the B.C.I. Auditorium on the nights of May 13 and 14.

Deidre Warren will again perform the directorial duties in Guild presentation, which places a great deal of emphasis on the power of dialogue.

Weed Cutter May Be Used In Harbor

TRENTON — Les Grills, MP for Hastings South, said from Ottawa yesterday he was negotiating with the Department of Transport to have the weed cutter brought into the Bay of Quinte again this year to cut the weeds in the harbor and the bay in the immediate Trenton area.

Mr. Grills said his action had come about owing to requests of area boat owners and those in the area concerned with the tourist trade.

CAMPAIGN LAGGING

James Duncan, the chairman of the Trenton Rotary Club's Easter Seal campaign, said yesterday the campaign this year was "lagging" as compared to other years. Mr. Duncan said he felt many householders who had received the seals in the mail meant to send in a contribution but had just forgotten.

Thomas Ostrander and Clayton Hetherington, said $1,700 had been received so far. The money is used to assist the club with its work with crippled children in this area.

DISTRICT COUNCIL MEETING

MADOC — The April meeting of the Moira Valley District Council, executive committee was held in the Anglican Rectory Madoc with president James H. Thompson in the chair.

Mr. Thompson spoke on the theme for this year in the movement, "Fit for Service". It is hoped that each group throughout the district would stress the importance of this theme and try to render all kinds of help especially living in such a busy tourist area.

D. C. Joe Irish reported that the 1st Bayside Group had disbanded owing to the lack of council support. However good news was received that Foxboro was concerned in forming a new group. A meeting has been planned to discuss the possibility of re-grouping.

Wally Harper, provincial field secretary, Quinte Region gave information on various subjects. He mentioned that National headquarters required information concerning any plans in the making for scouting in the District in relation to the Centennial year. The district itself is planning a few special events with details not fully worked out as yet for the Centennial.

In the future all Insurance claim forms are asked to forward three copies of notice of claims.

POSTPONE JAMBOREE

The Provincial Jamboree has been postponed until 1968. It was thought with so many activities being promoted for the Centennial year, sufficient leaders would not be available.

Mr. Harper requested a brief summary of district and group activities which would give news at the Provincial level. Often it is the small group with activities take place in a district a Provincial Commissioner only by chance sees a paper clipping or hears about it by accident.

At the district Cubaree on May 28th award will be given to the best packs, in the form of crests. It is hoped to award recognition to leading boys also. Rev. J. H. Thompson, D.C. for Irish and Mrs. G. Russell will be judges for the day.

The Scout camp weekend will be held on May 13-14-15 at Vanderwater Park, Thomasburg.

It is hoped that all groups from the district will attend and compete in various outdoor activities.

CHURCH PARADE

The second annual church parade for the whole district will be held in Madoc this year. Plans were discussed in regards to location, time of activity and district officials. Awards of special badges will be presented at this open air service. The district chaplain will again be in charge of the service program.

Mr. John VanVolkenburg, representative for the Marmora Council announced the District Scout Swim Meet for June 4th, 2 - 5 p.m. at the Tops Motel, Belleville.

Mr. Harper requested at the conclusion of the meeting that groups be consulted as early as possible in the beginning of fall for recruitment and for registration. A letter at the end of August will be sent to each group in the Moira Valley District to begin this early.

Refreshments served by Mrs. J. Thompson, Mrs. A. Pigden and Mrs. Bernice Young ended a most profitable meeting for the executive.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET

The annual father and son Scout banquet was held on Monday night at the Sacred Heart Parish Hall, Madoc. Rev. David Potter, chairman of the local Council presided over the evening's program with 150 persons sat down to dinner.

Head table guests included; A.D.C. Gordon Russell; A.D.C. Ernest Harvey; D.C. Joe Irish; Dr George Mullin, secretary of the Moira Valley Association; Rev. J. H. Thompson, president of the District Council; Wally Harper, Provincial Field Executive; Quinte Region Scouter Troy Owen; Cub Leaders, Ed Gall and Wayne Hagerman.

Following the meal served by the mothers, a sing-song given in the mothers by an appropriate song sung by all the was led by Ed Hill. Thanks were boys. A toast presented to all the fathers was given by Mike Mullin and Mr. Dave Gall returned the thanks to the boys.

CUB STAR PROGRAM

District Commissioner Joe Irish was first speaker who gave a run down on the cub star program. He requested assistance from fathers to help the leaders in training the boys in various activities.

Guest speaker for the evening was Mr. Wally Harper. In his opening remarks he brought greetings from the Provincial office and remarked that some 30,000 boys were registered in the Region. The following questions were put to the audience; "why do boys join the Movement"; "what attracts boys in wearing of the uniform" Many boys present answered these questions themselves which showed the appeal of the Scouting program was still winning boys.

STRESSES THEME

Mr. Harper stresses that the Movement was training boys to be prepared with this year's theme, "Fit for Service," in the development of love of country scouts and cubs being prepared, had rendered help in mishaps in the district. He said it was a great need for more leadership and each community should provide capable leaders to train boys and not leave it, as it seems the case so often, to just a few service clubs groups belong to the community although the movement provides the program, the public is apt to tries to develop the boys in the aims of scouting, physical, mental and spiritual training.

Scout Harold Pigden on behalf of the group thanked Wally Harper for his topic and interesting thoughts.

ROLES OF COUNCIL

Scouter Jacob H. Thompson, president of the Moira Valley District Council spoke briefly on the role of a council member. Each group must have an active council responsible to assist the leaders of the troop or pack in everyway they can. Mr. Thompson called upon the fathers present to assist the local council in the various activities that were being planned for the coming months. From the district level, Madoc will be the host this year for the cubaree on May 28th and the second church parade for June 19th.

Much local help will be required to make these two events a success.

Rev. David Potter thanked all for their attendance and trusted that the remarks of the evening will create a new interest in the Scout activities for this community.

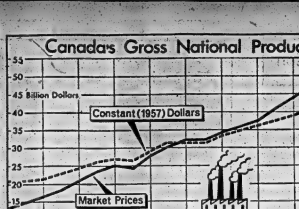
Cream Shippers Will Likely Change Over

OTTAWA (CP) — The increase under the new federal dairy policy is for farmers to ship whole milk rather than cream to the factory, S. R. Williams, chairman of the agricultural stabilization board, said Tuesday.

He told the Commons agriculture committee he is "quite certain that cream shippers when ever possible will change over."

The incentive under federal policy in recent years has been for such a shift. There is no significant change in this area in new support arrangements that went into effect April 1, Mr. Williams estimated farmers throughout the year would receive 40 to 41 cents a pound for their butterfat delivered at the factory. This figure included government subsidies "and everything else."

$2.50 A HUNDREDWEIGHT



At 80 cents, this works out to about $2.50 a hundredweight for top-quality milk from which the cream is drawn. The $2.50 would not include the value of skim milk left over after cream separation. Skim value varies according to its use.

This compares with the $4 a hundredweight guaranteed to farmers as a national average price for milk — rather than cream—shipped to processing plants to make butter and other products.

Of the $4, the farmer would get $3.25 from the processor and the remainder in direct government payments by the board.

Answering questions, the federal administrator also said he expects a decline in total milk production this year, "despite declines in dairy cattle numbers. The decline has been partly offset by increase production per cow.

He thought the main reason for the decline in dairy cattle numbers was favorable beef prices, which led to farmers reducing dairy herds to take advantage of them.

GNP RISES 9.7 PER CENT — The gross national product — the total market price of all goods and services produced in Canada — rose 9.7 per cent during 1965 to a record total of $51,998,000,000. The figures, released Thursday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, surpassed the budget-speech prediction by Finance Minister Sharp that the increase would be 9.5 per cent. Invite a Mrs. Fairclough To Appear at Inquiry

OTTAWA (CP)—A Mrs. Fairclough has been invited to appear at the Munsinger inquiry, Conservative counsel C. P. H. Carson said today at a commission hearing.

She was not further identified by Mr. Carson.

Mr. Carson also said a Mr. Levesque has been asked to appear if he wishes. Neither will be further identified.

Mr. Carson made the disclosure during argument that commission counsel J. L. O'Brien had made public Monday "extracts from RCMP security files which former prime minister Diefenbaker and former Conservative justice minister Fulton have not been given by the commission.

Mr. Justice Wishart Spence, who is conducting the one-man inquiry, said he was "rather astounded" that portions of statements in the RCMP file on Gerda Munsinger "which appeared in certain press articles.

He said the press information could only have come from reading or being told about confidential exhibits marked top secret placed before the commission.

"I don't want another security case," the judge said.

"There probably will be another if things keep leaking in this way."

WATCH SECURITY

Mr. Justice Spence said Mr. O'Brien had made a statement about Mrs. Munsinger's background with a careful eye on security.

But some press articles had given more information than Mr. O'Brien had.

"I object to these breaches of the security curtain," the judge said.

E. A. Goodman, counsel for former Conservative trade minister George Hees, asked that the script of Mr. Hees' recent testimony last week be made public.

He also asked that two clauses in an RCMP document referring to Mr. Hees also be made public.

Mr. Justice Spence agreed to the request. There was no objection when this transcript would be available.

SET CONDITIONS

Mr. Carson said the commission had agreed to make available to Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Fulton copies of the RCMP script of the secret proceedings April 6 as long as they did not disclose the contents to the press or make copies for themselves.

He said Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Fulton had declined to take possession of the transcript on these conditions and that they therefore have not had the transcript.

Mr. Carson said that Mr. O'Brien on Monday at an open hearing had summarized what had taken place in secret April 6.

The result was that the public through the press had been given a full account of matters that Conservative counsel regarded as confidential.

In effect, the public had been given full information about three RCMP reports on Mrs. Munsinger at a time when Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Fulton could not discuss them with anyone, including other privy councillors.

Mr. Carson said that under the circumstances Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Fulton declined to take possession of the documents subject to any ruling.

Former RCMP commissioner C. W. Harvison took the witness box and said under cross-examination by Mr. Carson that Mrs. Munsinger was kept under RCMP surveillance for her final three months in Canada — November and December, 1960, and January of 1961. She left the country Feb. 5, 1961.

DEPARTURE KNOWN

He said the RCMP first learned she intended to leave Canada Dec. 7, 1960. On that day he had received a report from the RCMP's Montreal office and he went to see justice minister Fulton about it.

He said he thought it desirable in the interests of security that Mrs. Munsinger not return to Canada and he had "pointed out" this view to Mr. Fulton Dec. 7.

He said the matter was taken up with the immigration department under the supervision of then RCMP deputy commissioner George B. McClellan, now commissioner, who was directing the Munsinger inquiry.

Mr. Carson asked "to see the Dec. 7 report which Commissioner McClellan received from the RCMP in Montreal.

Commission counsel J. L. O'Brien warned that questioning seemed to be reaching the point of secrecy of RCMP sources of information and techniques of investigation, adding "I haven't seen this (report) myself."

However, the report was brought into the courtroom in a black - bordered folder and the two lawyers went into a huddle over it.

Alex McLeod New President Of Jaycees

Alex McLeod was elected president of the Belleville Jaycees last night. A former vice president, Mr. McLeod has served as a director for the past two years.

Five directors were also elected. They are Stan Albert, Wendell Crowell, Earl Amyotte, Roger Gibson and Don Harrison.

Highway Sign Was Turned Wrong Way

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada Tuesday upheld lower court decisions which found the Ontario highways department mainly responsible for a car accident that took the life of Mrs. Robert M. Jennings of Barrie and put her husband in hospital with injuries.

The department was ordered to pay $60 per cent of a $180,000 damage action brought against it on behalf of the Jennings. Garry Cronberry, 22, of Toronto, driver of the second car involved in the accident, was ordered to pay the remainder.

The crash occurred Nov. 8, 1961, at an intersection of a concession road and Ontario Highway 12 just south of Beaverton.

In its unanimous judgment the court said a highway stop sign turned the wrong way by some mischievous boys" was the effective cause of the collision.

It also said the sign had been reversed four days earlier and allowed to remain that way despite daily patrols by highway employees. This was an unreasonable length of time and of the stop had been in its proper position, it was probable that the crash would never have occurred.

Government's Financial Aid Could Revitalize Brighton District Fish Industry

BRIGHTON — Government financial aid, of the kind available to east and west coast vessel fishermen in building refrigerated plants for fast freezing of fish could spark a revival of Gosport's once-thriving commercial fishing industry, Southumberland News Service has learned.

Although no one has written a ballad like Newfoundland's famous "squid jigging" song, it's smelt fishin time on Brighton Bay.

When more trains stopped regularly at Brighton, there were thousands of boxes of fish packed in chipped ice on the station platform waiting to be shipped to markets in Montreal, Toronto and New York. Now, there is no market for the tons of silver smelt that is being hauled out of Brighton Bay. The lack of fast transportation facilities, a fast-freezing refrigeration plant and the fact that Lake Erie fishermen are able to fish for smelt and market them the year round, an open water except for about two cold months in winter.

However, there is still a use for the smelt, Purtell Quick, operator of the Gosport Fish Market explained to Bill Bastner. Smelt, in season, are used as bait for catching American Eels. The eels are 2 to 3 feet and weighing up to 10 or 11 pounds are in demand in restaurants in Montreal, Toronto, Montreal, Detroit, Chicago and New York where regional epicures appreciate delicacy and gourmets delight.

ALWAYS EXPORT MARKET

"There is even an export market available for them, said Mr. Quick.

But while there is a limited volume of smelt netted in deeper water (where they are firmer), the competitors of Lake Erie fishermen, transportation handicaps plus the need of a plant for fast-freezing has "hurt" the once major industry in the Brighton Bay community of Gosport seriously.

Mr. Quick told the Banner that government financial assistance to inland fishermen on the same basis as aid for financing refrigeration plants for commercial fishermen "as Canada's salt water coasts would do a great deal toward rebuilding of the fish industry" locally and in other Ontario inland centres.

Meanwhile, as darkness falls, bonfires twinkle along Brighton Bay and Lake Ontario to the west. Netting of smelt along creeks has been forbidden by the Lands and Forests in order to prevent the accidental netting of inland salmon eggs and fingerlings.

The inland salmon have been "seeded" in stream such as Gosport and Shelter Valley with the view of maintaining Lake Ontario fishing as a sport and as a commercial enterprise.

Once numerous lake trout have been virtually wiped out by lampreys and carp, and according to some authorities, by pollution of the Great Lakes.

Mental Health

Whatever is wrong with our society might be summed up in its broadest sense as a lack of warmth in human relationships — a simple lack of communication and of love.

It is ironic to think that governments seem to care more for people's welfare than do people themselves. Thus we have pensions and medical plans and the like, but you cannot legislate for the inner soul of man, his deep fundamental needs. Human happiness depends on so many things — on the atmosphere of home and school and of work and environment and friends who are really friends.

Yet more and more we hear of the rising incidence of mental illness, even in the very young. Dr. Carter B. Storr, an Ottawa psychologist, said recently there are more cases of emotional disturbance in public school children than ever before.

This is confirmed by The Canadian Mental Health Association in a bulletin relating to Mental Health Week which is being observed here and in other countries May1-7.

Mental illness is striking more young people than polio ever did. Indeed, the number of children and adolescents in the 10 to 19 age group in mental hospitals is steadily increasing.

In any one day there are more people in hospital with mental illness than all other illnesses combined, including cancer and heart disease.

Mental illness shows up in 50 per cent of all medical and surgical cases, either as a cause or result.

That home atmosphere is vitally important to the "disadvantaged" children and in the prevention of mental disorders is very apparent in a report from the Ontario division of the CMHA. It describes the work of a Niagara Falls native, Mrs. Murray B. Frum, among "culturally deprived" youngsters in Toronto.

An important part of the answer to school dropouts, Mrs. Frum feels, is to correct the deficiencies in a child's life before he gets to school. Some of the children she works with had never been more than three blocks from their homes. Many were shy and resentful because of lack of communication at home.

Aided by high school students, Mrs. Frum leads her group of 15 culturally deprived children every Saturday morning on adventures in learning — learning about themselves and learning to identify the community they live in, and the things and people about them.

Appropriately, Mrs. Frum has been described as the "Mary Poppins of the deprived child." The work she and others like her do with these children is a poignant reminder that the seeds of mental illness are often sown in the home — and they stem from nothing less serious than neglect.

Focus on Inflation

Today's cartoon by Blaine is a clever interpretation of Canada's centennial coinage as it relates to the inflationary trends of the day.

The wolf, a critter with a price on his head, would doubtless be flattered to know he was being immortalized in these new products of the national mint. Bounties of $25 or more are paid for dead wolves and the cost of his scourge may account for his image on the relatively valuable, but no less inflationary, half-dollar piece.

In the cartoon, this much-maligned beast is shown in the guise of Prime Minister Pearson or the hand, and of Opposition leader Diefenbaker on the other. They sit facing each other in an attitude symbolic of a typically acrimonious day in the Commons.

Meanwhile, Canada Goose (representing the economy) flies south, and a rabbit (the harried taxpayer) is also seen in full flight, while a luckless fish on the dime, representing inflation, has had an encounter with sharks representing the growing cost of living.

However, to return to our friend the wolf. He may be baying at the moon, but it is only to tell his friends that he is "the greatest," because he has been chosen to appear on a 50-cent piece, and never mind the fact that the Canada Goose technically has top status — on the silver-dollar!

Russia Still Totalitarian

Recent economic policies announced by the rulers of Soviet Russia have been taken by some Canadians as indicating that there is getting to be "not much difference" between their way of doing business and ours.

This is a dangerous point of view because it ignores the fact that a totalitarian regime does things for the purpose of tightening, not loosening, its grip on the nation. Reforms such as the decentralization of industrial control represent a departure from strict Marxist doctrine. But Soviet Russia has long been nationalist first and Marxist second. Remember the Hitler-Stalin pact?

The present leaders of Russia appear willing to sacrifice some Marxist theory in order to maintain their position. The ultimate control remains with the few and there is no indication that this is being fundamentally altered.

Now Iceland Has Television

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

Iceland opens a national television broadcasting agency this month, leaving Greece as the only European nation without TV.

Perhaps more than an ideal climate, a friendly people and an ancient culture lures tourists to the Aegean. There are now so few places to hide from the invasion of home privacy by people from the Ponderosa, from ubiquitous UNCLE, the baggy - eyed sadnesses of groucho Martins and the eternal format of Ed Sullivans.

Iceland will bring the summer mastheid translated by television to 110. There are a few holdouts. One of them is South Africa where the prospect of a national network is considered dangerous to the state gospel called apartheid.

Most of the countries with television are too poor to be able to produce their own programs. This creates a market that the United States producer is delighted to fill. As a result people like Lorne Greene of Bonanza are better known around the globe than most of the world statesmen.

There are dangers as well. Some of the less informed may even believe that Americans behave like the TV characters they are watching. If they decide that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, the prospect of global chaos is terrifying.

Job Training Costs in U.S.

Manassa (N.Y.) Observer

That wry editorial comment comes from the Charleston, South Carolina, News and Courier. It has to do with some revealing facts concerning training projects in Virginia, as disclosed by Senator Robertson of that state. Examples: 36 unemployed kitchen helpers were being trained at a cost of $35,-601. Sixty unemployed persons were being trained as nurses' aides at a cost of $73,290. Eighteen unemployed waitresses were being trained as brickla yers at a cost of $70,579.

Senator Robertson did a little arithmetic and found that it cost $2,021 to train each brick layer and $5,497 to train each chamber's helper. Even in these days of inflation, you can get a good deal of college education for that kind of money.

You may be for or against the antipoverty and welfare programs, but one thing is crystal clear: The costs, largely because the fine and wasteful hand of politics is always present, run inordinately high in the light of the results obtained. And these costs are almost invariably greater than the optimistic preliminary estimates.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

April 27, 1966 . . .

A force of 1,800 American fans landed at York (now Toronto) 153 years ago today—in 1813—and the outnumbered British garrison withdrew. The town was ransacked and the Parliament buildings burned down. It was in reprisal for this that Washington was occupied four months later and the public buildings there put to the torch. Despite these events, wholesale destruction was not regarded as legitimate in those days. An American general who burned Newark (now Niagara) and left the inhabitants homeless in the December snow was cashiered by the American authorities.

1621—The Royal William, the first Canadian Atlantic steamer, was launched.

Strictly Personal

A Great American Myth

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

How can we blame the youth of America for taking themselves so importantly when we ourselves have made a national cult out of the idea of youth? No other country in history has worshipped it fervently at this shrine, or with more disastrous results.

Currently, the government cut and some of the ablest men engaged in a dispute about the proper age limits for retiring from withdrawal. Some of the airlines set age limits as low as 32 or 35 for their stewardesses.

If these limits are not because the physical condition and dexterity of the stewardess disable her from various duties after those ages, it is one thing. If, on the other hand, such limits are set because the attractiveness of youth itself is the determining factor, then the airlines are simply encouraging and perpetuating this great American myth.

The Paris Vogue understands such matters better than we do, quite sensibly value the more mature woman above the flighty ingenue. The French recognize that teachers her fullness of womanhood in the day, and in her absolute peak at 40. Most of the European nations have the same realistic attitude.

Our absurd adulation of female youthfulness has caused most of our women in an agonizing trap. Instead of learning to grow, and to take pride in the assets of maturity, they are engaged in a desperate race to keep young — and nothing makes a woman faster than trying to look younger than she should.

It is one thing to want to look sleek and attractive; it is quite another thing to become neurotic and discontented because the fact of growing older, and to remain "kind" as many writers hinted of an ally. What a woman loses in freshness, she should make up in other qualities equally as appealing — but if she is obsessed with freshness, she merely loses the charms of youth, without gaining the depth and serenity of middle age.

And even on the physical level, an older woman whose face has achieved character through living and suffering and expanding can be more attractive than the uniformed, unlined, trivial and narcissistic face of a young girl who (like most young people) wants only to be given and not to give. This, of course, is why so many young marriages utterly fail.

Being one's self, and becoming one's self, is the prime task in life to which we are all directed; but this is impossible if one is perpetually trying to be some one else, some false and even some stereotype based on the cosmetic ads. For self-rejection ends only in self-contempt, and the idolatry of youthfulness is a religion that devours its worshippers.

Getting Out Of the Rut

Ottawa Journal

One of the many good things about big education powwow in Toronto by the Ontario Education Association and other educational organizations is the number of educators who seem to have no sympathy with the existing current professional orthodoxy.

There was that vice-principal who said that schools were doing too much in keep in students who had no interest or capacity for academic studies and to encourage some students to be dropouts, saying with some justice: "It may be a year or so in the cold, cruel world is what they need." The trouble, however, is that it is often impossible to get back students who should be continuing their schooling.

It was refreshing to have a man from the Toronto Board of Education tell the meeting that to almost irresistable trend to "more" in classrooms. The impact of educational fads on many kinds of an ally. What a woman loses in freshness, she should make up in other qualities equally as appealing — but if she is obsessed with freshness, she merely loses the charms of youth, without gaining the depth and serenity of middle age.

And even on the physical level, an older woman whose face has achieved character through living and suffering and expanding can be more attractive than the uniformed, unlined, trivial and narcissistic face of a young girl who (like most young people) wants only to be given and not to give. To Your Good Health

Nut in Child's Lung Almost Caused Death

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I want to add my two cents worth to your column about not letting children eat popcorn or peanuts. You are so right.

At the age 23 months our Andy suddenly became very ill. In two weeks he lost six pounds and had a low grade fever. Only after his nap or bedtime was he free of it. He was of a wrecking type of fever treatment for "pneumonia." I told the doctor about his cough and suggested that Andy might have a nut in his lung. I remembered that he had ice cream with peanuts on it, and I said that maybe a nut "went down the wrong way." I didn't know then that one peanut could bring death so close.

The doctor, after further examination found that there was a nut in the lung. It finally was removed but not before we went through a great deal of worry. The doctor said afterward that it is my duty in life to tell other parents of our near tragedy. — Mrs. J. L.

• • •

I doubt anyone who hasn't worked in the emergency department of a hospital has any idea how often children come close to death — and many do die — because of something lodged in the trachea or trapped in the lung.

A child's trachea (windpipe) is very small. His automatic reflexes are not well developed. Peanuts, candies, nuts, popcorn, buttons, toys, all things that a child might put in his mouth, and which are small enough to enter the windpipe, are a hazard, potentially deadly.

If I had my way, no child would be allowed nuts, popcorn, hard candy or any object, toy, button or anything that is smaller than his thumb until he is old enough to join the Cubs.

I don't suppose parents can make such a rule stick, but at least they can be extremely careful until a child is old enough to start school.

And don't think that older children don't sometimes get in trouble that way, too. Even if they don't get something pertinent caught in the windpipe, they manage to swallow the most unbelievable assortment of coins, bottle caps, safety pins and other junk.

Dear Dr. Molner: My 3-year old daughter gets her teeth while asleep. Friends tell me she has worms and a few drops of turpentine and sugar will get rid of them. — M. L. H.

Pinworms are a com mon cause of such grinding and grinding of the teeth, although other irritations also can be at fault.

If it is a case of pinworms, the old-fashioned turpentine and sugar will not help at all, but in the last few years some very effective medications have been developed. To understand why pinworms keep returning, and how to prevent this, I suggest that you read my booklet, "The Commonest Pest — Pinworm." For a copy, send 20 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 14 and have been told that school-aged people shouldn't take physical education. Is this so or not, and why? — J. C.

It depends on what causes the heart condition. If there is something wrong with the heart or lungs, your doctor might order you to avoid exercise. If you are short-winded just because you haven't exercised enough to be in good condition, the physical education is just what you need.

His Output Was Constant

Saskatoon Star Phoenix

A worker in Cobourg, Ontario discovered recently that he could not be prodded by an incentive system for production, has been reinstated with compensation for lost time.

A setup employee of a production company was sacked when he could not increase his output on a par with other workers. Although willing to accept another job in the company in which his seniority entitled him, he found that the foreman preferred to risk hiring a new employee.

The Ontario arbitration board had other ideas and they were sound ones. If the employer's average production had remained constant over three years of dismissal, then it was entirely possible that he had been providing the company with an honest cay's work all along while the others had been keeping something in reserve. Even his employers conceded that the man had operated reasonably at his full capacity.

Businesses are operated for a profit, yes, but in the hunger for increased revenue they must not forget that human be ings are not like machines and are subject to individual variations. Incentive systems may work for some, but not for all.

It would be unthinkable that competent men, accustomed to doing their best and having their efforts accepted for years, should suddenly be tossed out on the sidewalk because some expert or computer decided that efficiency is a matter of imposing panic. Either frighten a man or appeal to his greed and the balance sheet becomes brighter. That would be an entirely untenable premise.

To dismiss a lazy worker is one thing. To sack a man who is doing all he can and was accepted that way, is quite another.

CLEANING FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 27th, 1946

With wartime sales restrictions gradually being eased or relinquished entirely and with consumer goods again appearing on the market, retail retailers throughout the country today are faced with the responsibility of training young men in salesmanship techniques. Such was the message heard Friday evening by members of the local Chamber of Commerce at their annual banquet held at the Quinte when they heard I. G. Needles, vice-president of the B.F. Goodrich Rubber Co. of Kitchener speak on "Salesmanship undrown." Contradicting the popular conception that salesmen are born, not made, Mr. Needles declared the only way towards becoming a successful salesman was the belief by a man that he could not be one.

Letter to the Editor

Auto Companies' Responsibility

Editor, The Intelligencer.

Although I am sure most motorists will agree with "Safety First" that better standards of driving will help to reduce the road accident toll, his absolving the automobile industry of any part if the blame for this toll should not be allowed to go unchallenged. His unsupported claim that "the major automobile manufacturers spend considerablemillions . . . to incorporate safety features" contrasts strangely with Ralph Nader's stinging indictment of the industry "Unsafe at Any Speed" and the unbiased test reports of American cars by various consumer organizations.

While European car makers and designers must conform to government-imposed safety standards in their products, the American manufacturers have been left free to offer safety equipment as "optional extras", and the amount spent on safety research has represented a pitifully small percentage of their business. Indeed the sad tale of overpowered cars, undersized tires, inadequate brakes and hostile styling that have represent some part of the cause of the high accident death rate.

To blame the automobile industry and piling all the blame on the driver is but an echo of one giant corporation's present tactics, and is not the most effective way to reduce accidents.

Fair Play,

Britain's Rare Achievements

Bruce Hutchinson in The Winnipeg Free Press

If I were a Briton I would wonder sometimes, as I am in Ottawa, what has gone wrong with Canada's head and heart. Like Canada I still wonder. But there is another question for wonderment.

How does people live on a small island almost barren of resources and with yet have managed to build one of the most successful societies in the world? I am not counting numbers, reckoning, not to mention the imponderables.

With all our lavish heritage it is surprising, or any particular credit to us, that we are rich or that Britain, with no heritage, is prosperous, efficient, skill and spirit, is comparatively poor? And have we done as good a job, given our opportunities, as the British would have done in our places when they do so well without them?

These questions will never be answered but are rather more important than most of the questions agitating Ottawa's better minds at the moment.

Hostesses on U.S. Railroad

Ottawa Journal

At least one U.S. railroad isn't fooling in the light for the passenger dollar with airlines and other forms of transport. The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad runs overnight to Florida has six young, attractive hostesses on board. They offer fashion shows, passenger bingo and parlor games, and generally make the guests comfortable. Also offered are television, movies, sing-songs, card games, free champagne for Pullman passengers and an after-dinner cigar for the men. The ultimate in "public relations" comes when the southbound train crosses the Mason-Dixon line and the hostesses appear in sun suits instead of Yankee blue.

Not all passengers care to travel in such style. But the future of champagne, cigars and pretty girls, not necessarily in that order, is considered especially at moderate extra cost. Of course, there's a limit to these things. Swimming pools and a high - stepping chorus line would have no place on a train, we think. And there should always be provision for the simple man who seeks "taken" entertainment: a comfortable seat and a window is what the trees go by.

TORONTO STOCK TODAY

TORONTO (CP) — Base metals, led by uranium, highlighted moderate morning trading today on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Analysts have attributed the recent upswing in the metal to expectations of increasing demand for it over the next few years. Denison gained ¾ to 48¾ and Rio Algoma ¼ to 23¾.

Copper stocks continued fractionally higher. Hudson Bay advanced ¾ to 86 and Noranda ¼ to 53. Inco and Falconbridge, trading more than 2,000 shares each, edged up ¼ to 105½ and 29¼.

Industrials were lower with Alberta Gas off ¼ to 34, Bell Telephone ¾ to 54¾ and Canadian Breweries ¼ to 7¼. Loblaw added ⅛ at 14⅝.

Canadian Superior and Husky pelred the western oil group lower, falling ¼ each to 22¼ and 13¼. Pacific Petroleum lost ¼ to 14 while Central Del Rio increased ⅛ to 12.

Texmont rose 8 cents to 1.03 in speculative mines.

On index, industrials were off .13 to 170.03, western oils .43 to 113.39 and the TSE .08 to 161.32. Base metals were up .48 to 95.29 and golds .27 to 187.26. Volume at 11 a.m. was 765,000 shares compared with 973,000 at the same time Tuesday.

Prices were mixed to slightly lower Tuesday as a total of 5,260,000 shares changed hands compared with 5,029,000 Monday.

Aluminum stocks showed good strength on continued speculation about the metal winning some markets away from copper as a result of higher world copper prices. Aluminium in climbed ¾ to 46 and Canadian British Aluminium ¼ to 20¾.

Among other industrials, Texaco gained 1¾ to 61, Toronto Iron Works A and MacMillan, Bloedel 1 each to 41¼ and 27½ and Loeb ¼ to 14¼. Union Gas dropped 1¼ to 32, Calgary Power 1 to 27 and CIL ¾ to 13½.

Copper issues were fractionally higher with Inco, Falconbridge and Hudson Bay up ¼ each to 105¼, 99 and 85¾ respectively.

On index, industrials were up .05 to 170.16. Golds fell 1.38 to 166.9, base metals .06 to 94.81, western oils .94 to 113.72 and the TSE .02 to 161.46.

Jacques Bélanger

Jacques Bélanger heads up one division of Expo 67. Read how he can triple his money with London Life—and why he bought a second profit-sharing policy:

A FEW YEARS AGO, when he was a carefree bachelor of 28, Jacques Bélanger purchased a $10,000 Jubilee profit-sharing policy from London Life. This particular policy gives him life-long protection but requires premiums for only twenty years.

Mr. Bélanger summed up his feelings in a recent interview:

"My first Jubilee policy is proving to be an excellent investment"

At age 48, he will have paid all his premiums—a total of $6,240. When he reaches age 65, his savings in this policy will total $18,701. Triple the money paid in.

(Note: This $18,701 is made up of $7,420 in guaranteed cash value and the balance in accumulated dividends. While dividends are not guaranteed, London Life has had an outstanding record of dividend payments. Dividends allotted to owners of London Life profit-sharing policies for 1966 exceed $30 million.)

"After I married, more insurance protection was needed immediately"

Shortly after his marriage, Mr. Bélanger bought a second Jubilee policy. This one is for $15,000 and has premiums to age 65.

He added one extra feature, called "income continuance." If he should die, his wife would receive the $15,000 plus $100 a month until 1985. Income until the children are grown. (These benefits are in addition to the other insurance he owns.)

While Mr. Bélanger knew he could not triple his investment with this second policy (because he was older when he bought it), it does build impressive savings. At age 65, this policy will give him $17,430 in guaranteed cash value and accumulated dividends (based on the current scale). And, of course, he has acquired the added protection he wanted for his family.

With the help of his two London Life policies, Mr. Bélanger is now on his way toward a comfortable retirement. Below are three of the choices he will have at age 65:

(b) The savings ($18,701 and $17,430) can be withdrawn as a lump sum.

(c) The savings can be used to purchase an annuity for life or for a set number of years.

Since Mr. Bélanger is a very active man who has spent many years in the hotel business, he may wish to take his money as a lump sum and invest in a hotel. His London Life investments give him freedom to choose.

"I suppose each person has different needs. But London Life seems able to tailor to the need."

All London Life representatives have received special training to custom-tailor insurance to individual needs. If you would like to receive a free copy of the handbook, PLAIN TALK ABOUT LIFE INSURANCE, write to the London Life Insurance Company, Department Y, 255 Dufferin Avenue, London, Ontario.

A word about LOGEXPO

LOGEXPO is the official housing bureau established by the Canadian Corporation for the 1967 World Exhibition. It is a non-profit organization designed to provide the best possible accommodation for all visitors to EXPO 67.

The management of this division, so vital to the success of Expo 67, is in the hands of Mr. Jacques Bélanger. BI

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN BERGER, MOTHER OF 5

Toward the end of the first year, your baby's manual dexterity will improve mightily. Watch, and one fine day you'll see him (or her) accomplish the pinch-hold- fest: picking up objects with thumb and forefinger. Great achievement, this. How else could we learn to write, sew, hold a fork?

Table talk. Most toddler feeding problems fall into two classes. One is that the child doesn't eat what mother thinks is enough. The other is a refusal, sometimes, to eat "good-for-you" foods mother thinks are necessary. Important things to remember: a child's appetite usually wanes at the year-old stage and his appetite is a good guide to how much he should eat. Also, no one food is a must. There are several alternates in every Gerber food category to choose from.

Means to all mothers. Do you know why we "custom-cook" your baby's foods? Because different foods require different treatment. Some foods need longer cooking time than others . . . some higher temperatures. Fruits, for example, are flash-cooked . . . sweet potatoes are slow-cooked (to break down starches into easily digested sugars). Egg yolks are processed differently from meat. But whatever the method, cooking times and temperatures are scientifically controlled to bring out the best in each product. It's true! When you buy Gerber, you're sure of your money's worth in nourishment.

Up-smacking and new, for you-know-who. That's Gerber Junior Vegetables and Meat with Bacon . . . a dinner that's bound to be gobbled down with delight. This happy combination of vegetables, cereal and meat is deftly blended and seasoned to please little palates. Like all Gerber Baby Foods, it's "custom-cooked"-to preserve a high degree of nutritive values. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

MADOC W.I.

MADOC — The annual meeting of the Madoc W.I. was held on Friday at the home of Mrs. Hugh Empey. The president, Mrs. Warren Hill opened the meeting with a poem.

Mrs. Albert Bailey gave a report of the district executive meeting. The district annual will be held at Queensboro on May 27th. The theme this year, "In youth we learn, in age we understand." The conveners of the standing committees gave their reports. The president, Mrs. Warren Hill gave a complete report of the past year's activities.

The nominating committee, Mrs. E. Moore, Mrs. Ken Gordon and Mrs. S. R. Beatty presented the slate of officers for the coming year. Mrs. S. R. Beatty installed the new officers as follows: president, Mrs. Ken Gordon; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Harold Brintnell; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Sam Bay; secretary, Mrs. George Allore; treasurer, Mrs. Albert Bailey; district director, Mrs. Warren Hill; alternate, Mrs. E. Conveners of the committees for the coming year; agriculture, Mrs. Willfred Forestall; Canadian industries, Mrs. Carl Wallace; citizenship, Mrs. Harold Brintnell; home economics, Mrs. Sam Bay; education, Mrs. W. Hill; health, Mrs. E. Gates; historical research and current events, Mrs. Albert Empey; flowers and cards, Mrs. Livingstone, Mrs. Tanner; C.A.C. pamphlets, Mrs. Wannamaker; pianists, Mrs. A. Empey and Mrs. C. Whytock.

Mrs. W. Forestall gave a full report on the eighth annual Ontario Farm Safety conference held in Guelph on February 7, 8, 9th.

Gifts were presented to the retiring president and secretary, also a card, signed by all the Institute members.

Lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Tanner, Mrs. E. Moore and Mrs. McCrimmon.

DAUGHTER LEADS WAY

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Dorothy Corrigan was elected deputy mayor, the first woman to hold the post, by city council. Wife of a dentist, Mrs. Corrigan has been a councillor, as was her father, for several years. She is the first woman elected to civic office in Charlottetown.

At this time of year Canadian apples, stored during the winter in controlled atmosphere, come to our rescue for making desserts. Today Mary Moore uses "Macs" in her recipe for Apple Pandowdy.

MODERN APPLE PANDOWDY

Last week I mentioned my apple cooking campaign and gave you two new economical recipes using canned applesauce.

This week I am using from a basket of Macs and my family is eating apple desserts.

APPLE PANDOWDY (serves 6):

Filling: 4 cups pared and sliced apples (I used 4 medium-large Macs), 5 tablespoons light brown sugar, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg.

Batter: ¼ cup butter or margarine, 6 tablespoons light brown sugar, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 6 tablespoons milk, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ¾ cup unsifted all-purpose flour.

Turn the sliced apples into a large buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with the 5 tablespoons brown sugar and the spices. Cover and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. while you make the batter.

Measure the butter or margarine and sugar into the beater bowl and beat until creamy. Add eggs and beat well. Do not remove beaters. Add the unsifted flour, baking powder, salt and give it a short beating. Now add milk and vanilla and beat well. Remove beaters.

Remove apples from oven, take off lid and cover evenly with batter. Return to oven and bake uncovered for 30 to 35 minutes or until it has an attractive dark gold crust. Serve warm with milk or cream.

Notes: If desired 1) use only 1 egg 2) dot top of raw apples with 1 or 2 tablespoons butter before first baking to make pudding richer. 3) It will be obvious to you that the prebaking of the apples accomplishes 2 things: it assures tenderness of apple and starts the batter baking at once since it is resting on a hot filling.

Ladies' Night Held by Moira Lodge

On Saturday evening the Masonic Temple was the scene of a well-attended annual ladies' night at Moira Lodge A. F. and A.M. The toastmaster for the occasion was Wor. Bro. Gordon Locklin. The invocation was given by Bro. Alfred Cooper.

Head table guests were: Wor. Bro. Gordon Locklin and Mrs. Locklin, Rt. Wor. Bro. A. M. Hewitt, D.D.G.M. and Mrs. Hewitt, Rt. Wor. Bro. M. M. Hackett and Mrs. Hackett, the Rev. Douglas A. Wilson and Mrs. Wilson, Bro. Ralph Swan and Mrs. Swan, Bro. Alfred Cooper and Mrs. Cooper, Bro. Clifford Brown and Mrs. Brown, Rt. Wor. Bro. Ray Grant and Mrs. Grant, Rt. Wor. Bro. Harold S. Robbins and Mrs. Robbins, Wor. Bro. Windsor Bushell and Mrs. Bushell, Wor. Bro. William Stewart of Belleville Lodge and Mrs. Stewart, Wor. Bro. L. A. Loucks of Victoria Lodge, Trenta Lodge and Mrs. Courtemanche and Wor. Bro. George Flower of Temple Lodge and Mrs. Flower.

Caterers for the banquet were the women of Victoria United Church. Following the banquet, guest speaker, the Rev. Douglas A. Wilson of Knox Presbyterian Church, Trenton, addressed the gathering on "The Temple of God and the Light of the World." In his address, the speaker admonished masons to be faithful to their obligation and master of themselves. The Rev. Wilson was introduced by Bro. Ralph Swan and thanked by Rt. Wor. Bro. M. M. Hackett. A lucky draw for the women present was conducted by Im. P.M. Clarence Faulkner and Bro. Clifford Brown.

Mrs. Gordon Locklin replied most appropriately to the toast to the ladies which was proposed by Bro. Clifford Brown. Following the Junior Warden's toast, the large group enjoyed bridge, euchre and dancing. Music was supplied by the Doug Anstaine Orchestra.

Recipients of prizes for bridge were: Mrs. Archie Graham, Rt. Wor. Bro. Harold Robbins and Mrs. Robbins while Mrs. Dale Ashbury, Rt. Wor. Bro. Jerald Anderson, Mrs. Roy Hobbs and Mrs. Jerald Anderson received awards for euchre.

Arrangements for this most enjoyable evening were under the direction of Bro. Harvey Young, chairman of the entertainment committee.

Church Groups

FRIENDSHIP GROUP

POINT ANNE — The Friendship Group of St. John's Anglican Church Point Anne, held its monthly meeting April 19th at the home of Mrs. Vina Ellis.

The meeting was opened with prayer, by Rev. Brown. The treasurer, Mrs. Vina Ellis read a report. The next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Paula Horwood.

There was some discussion on the coming Centennial; also on covering the church floor. It was decided that the annual picnic would be held at Crystal Beach again this year. A history of St. John's Church is being made and the president Mrs. Clara Green asked all members to forward any information to the secretary, Mrs. Dorothy Hart. Plans were also made for a euchre to be held in May.

Rev. Brown closed the meeting with prayer, and the hostess served refreshments assisted by Mrs. Paula Horwood.

Long, Strong and Straight Legs Are Fortune for Fashion Models This Year

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP)—A model's face isn't her fortune anymore. Her legs are.

If these are not long, strong, straight and well-shaped with nice knees, they can be her misfortune.

With heathless skyrocketing, that's a sorrowful fact that has driven many a bony beauty into reluctant retirement, several prominent modelling agencies here say.

One agency likens these otherwise lovely ladies to certain at least screen stars with unpleasant voices who were shrinking in silk before talking pictures shattered their careers.

The agencies won't tell on the girls who don't get work calls anymore. That would be cruel. But many are the haunt, hollow-eyed, flat-chested glamor girls with protruding shoulder blades and hip bones who only yesterday, as they slouched s-shaped in boosiness, waistless fashions covering their knobby knees, were the envy of fleshier sisters.

"If their legs were bad, we used to be able to crop the fashion pictures," sadly reminisced Muriel Durand, a publicist.

"Now the leggy look is a part of the whole style effect. If she doesn't have good legs, we just can't use the model."

That is the story Eileen Ford, director of one of New York's largest agencies, hears from clients regularly. At Mannequin, a spokesman, Myra Sachs, lamented that if hemlines continue their upward climb some of the girls might have to resort to plastic surgery to stay in the modelling business.

NO CURE SEEN

"A model with an imperfect face at least could hide the fact by the way she wore her hair or camouflage it with makeup," she said. "But when you have bad legs there is nothing you can do."

A girl who agrees that statuesque Erica Stack, a 24-year-old German who says she is doing "a lot of leg work."

"No matter what the beauty experts say, either you have good legs or you don't. Exercises won't help. You have to be born well formed."

When you have good legs, the client worries about your keeping them that way. Nancy Berg is five feet seven which she says, "is mostly leg." She owns the gorgeous gams shown in many hosiery commercials. Everytime she goes on a ski holiday the ad agency is a nervous wreck.

"Now and then they call me in to look at my legs," she says. "Sometimes they complain that I've been playing too much tennis, and threaten to look around town for prettier legs. But always they wind up calling me back in."

The short skirt season also seems to discriminate against nationalities. In greatest demand at the Ford modeling agency, for example, are the German and Scandinavian lasses.

Children Born in January Now Have School of Own

The boy is the son of a University of Toronto professor and his psychologist wife.

Because the lad was born in January, he couldn't gain admission to kindergarten in the public school system until the September after his fifth birthday.

Because Tadeusz and Patricia Grygier objected to the arbitrary age deadline and also felt that the school system was outmoded, they decided to found their own school.

That was five years ago and their son Jan became the January School's first student. The first term the student body rose to 11. Today it has 68 students in Grades 1 to 4.

The practice followed by the Toronto board of education is to admit a child to school in September if he turns five any time in that year. A youngster born Jan. 1 must wait a year longer than one born Dec. 31.

The January School, is an old converted house owned by the Grygiers, is mainly for the shore - average child who may be ready for school but is barred from the public school system because of age.

It's also for children whose parents want them to have an education in which, for example, they are taught French from the kindergarten level, learn handwriting in Grade 2 and are exposed to classical music and literature before they graduate after Grade 4.

CLASSES SMALL

The school is supported by fees ranging from $300 a year in kindergarten to $625 in the final grade. Classrooms are small but so are classes and there is emphasis on individual attention.

"The school's attitude is more permissive then that of the Ontario public school, but not as permissive as that of the Montessori system, a system which allows the student to determine how much of any subject he takes," says Mrs. Grygier.

"We feel the child should be taught self - discipline. Our methods, we believe, equip him this way. In most of our classes, teachers go through a lesson and then have one child or several children stand up in class and reconstruct the lesson. When the child matures and goes on to university he will find his lectures require this kind of individual thinking."

Parents who send their children to the school have one complaint—they'd like it extended to higher grades so that children can go directly to private schools rather than enter the public school system.

"We would like to extend the school's teaching program," Mrs. Grygier says. "We would like to hire a French teacher who could take the children for walks, supervise their meals and offer them more French than we can now. We would like to do a lot of things but all of them take money."

The school has applied to the provincial government for assistance but has been turned down on policy grounds. It has also made tentative efforts to get private help but without success.

Women's Institutes

WALLBRIDGE W.I.

WALLBRIDGE — The annual meeting of the Wallbridge Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. S. M. Nicolson with Mrs. D. Shorey in the chair. The secretary-treasurer, Mrs. B. Hinchcliffe read an appeal from the Mental Health Clinic and a donation of $25 was forwarded. A Spencer, Marie Garrison, Rita Chisholm and Norma Shorey were appointed delegates to the Hastings West district annual.

Mrs. C. Vanderveide reported for the nominating committee and Mrs. E. Phillips conducted the election of officers. They are: president, Mrs. D. Shorey; 1st. vice-president, Mrs. T. Evans; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. G. Evans; secretary treasurer, Mrs. B. Hinchcliffe; assistant, Mrs. r. Evans, pianist, Mrs. T. Evans; press reporter, Mrs. S. Nicolson; auditors, Mrs. G. Directors are: Mrs. Omar Chisholm Mrs. D. Shorey, Mrs. Garfield Evans, Mrs. B. Hinchcliffe, Mrs. E. Phillips, Mrs. G. Ketcheson, Mrs. C. Vanderveide, Mrs. L. DeBruin.

Chalmers of standing committees are: friendship pennies, Mrs. J. McNaught; agriculture and Canadian industries, Mrs. G. Garrison; citizenship and education Mrs. Frank Tucker; historical research and current events, Mrs. Garfield Evans; Tweedsmuir history Mrs. Allan Spencer; home economics and handicrafts and frothy hats at home and equip themselves with baseball hats, says Mrs. M. J. Sabia of St. Catharines, president of the Canadian Federation of University Women.

In a speech to the University women's club, she said women aren't properly represented on "planning boards, educational boards and legislative assemblies." Women continually sell themselves short for fear of hurting the male ego.

"If the male ego must be built on a foundation of women's stupidity then there is something radically wrong with the masculine concept of themselves."

Mrs. Sabia said resolutions passed by women's groups receive a cursory reading by the government and then are placed in the dead file.

"Until we are united and vocal in our unity and are ready to accept the hard work and responsibility at policy-making levels we will be relegated to the background and our voices ignored."

Mrs. Sabia said she opposed violence in principle but resolutions signed "respectfully yours" have no effect.

"Let's equip ourselves with baseball bats."

Leave Frothy Hats at Home Says Speaker

BAN YOUNG READING

JUIZ DE FORA, Brazil (AP) A juvenile court judge has forbidden the sale of comic books and trading cards to children under 16 in this city on grounds that they are demoralizing and card swapping fosters greed and jealousy among children. He prescribed a fine of eight cents a copy for contraband comics.

HOLY TRINITY LUTHERAN CHURCH WOMEN

The regular meeting of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church Women was held in the church on Wednesday with the president, Mrs. Audrey Skeer, presiding.

Mrs. Ted Yaeger was in charge of the program which consisted with women representing India, Korea, Japan and Tanzania. Bible passages were read in which Jesus showed the way of women in the world to be faithful, persistent, unselfish and responsive.

The women of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church will be visiting at the Hastings County Home the week of May 1-7, and since the pastor will be conducting the service there on May 1 at 2.15 p.m, as many women as possible were asked to go to help with the singing and visiting.

Mrs. Hedy Calbourn reported that the Christian Action Committee had completed one layette and delivered used nylons. Three women had shown films at the Maple Haven Nursing Home. A contribution of 25 was made to the centennial project of the church, which is the planting of shrubs on the grounds.

U.C.W. Meetings

SCOTT'S U.C.W.

SITH SIDNEY — Mrs. Edison Sine was hostess for the ladies of Scott's U.C.W. for their April meeting. The president, Mrs. Cameron Sine opened the meeting.

An invitation was read from Frankford U.C.W. to attend the art exhibit and tea in May.

A short report of the minutes of the annual meeting of the U.C.W. held in March was presented, especially the resolution that beer commercials on the N.H.L. hockey broadcasts be discontinued.

Mrs. E. Sine conducted the worship service and finished up with a contest question-naire on events in the last week of the life of Jesus.

Several ladies gave readings each having a bearing on Easter.

Mrs. Sine and her daughter served lunch.

Ann Landers
Teeth-Grinding Habit Makes Snoring a Relief

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I chuckled when I read the letter from the woman who said she loved to listen to her husband snore. You will be—but for another reason. When my husband is snoring he is not grinding his teeth.

ANN LANDERS

Teeth-grinding cannot be described in a person who has not heard it. The closest I can come is to compare it to the sound of a piece of chalk going the wrong way on a blackboard.

My husband went to see a doctor about it last year — at my insistence. The doctor gave him some tranquillizers. They didn't help. The doctor then suggested that I take the tranquillizers.

I have always hated to take medicine and I resent having to be on tranquillizers when it is my husband who has the problem. Please comment on this ridiculous situation and offer some advice. — MRS. COUNTDOWN.

DEAR MRS. COUNT: My dentist tells me your husband has a common affliction which is known by a fancy name — bruxism. He also says you won't be bothered much longer because soon your husband will have no teeth.

Until then, move into the extra bedroom if you have one. If not, flip a coin to see who gets the cot in the kitchen. It's stupid to take tranquillizers when you can get a natural night's sleep by putting some distance between you and the old grinder.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 19 and feel like 101. Here's my problem: I hold down a full-time job and pay room and board. I also do all the washing and ironing and housecleaning for this family of four. I prepare my dad's lunches and get his work clothes ready. He works nights. Mom and I work days.

I know Mom is tired when she comes home, but I'm tired, too. Am I wrong to feel that she should pitch in and help me? After all this is her house, not mine.

The problem is my leisure time. I am not a run-around type but I would like to accept a date on Saturday night. My mother feels I must stay home and baby-sit with my little brother because she and Dad like to go out Saturdays. I resent being denied a weekend date. After all, my brother is not my child.

I could move out, but the folks need the financial help. Please advise. — A.M.U.

DEAR A.M.U.: Even without modern math I can count three pay cheques in your family of four. It doesn't seem reasonable that you mother and Dad are so hard up that they can't afford to pay a sitter one night a week.

Tell your mother she can no longer count on you as Saturday night sitter. You have earned your free weekend evening and you insist on it.

Mink Looks Old-fashioned In Fur Show

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP) — Mink looks almost old - fashioned alongside the increasing variety of furs now being shown.

The latest treatments and dyes make many distinctions difficult.

For instance, a gold horizontally seamed and belted coat was introduced as mustrat, along with a similar wrap in red, at the annual fur fashion convention Tuesday.

The 1966-67 collection, representing 60 manufacturing furriers in Ontario and Quebec, exhibited youthful styling, with much of the look stemming from dyed furs.

Horizontal seaming was even more prevalent last season and use of leather to join the pelts has increased. Narrow pelts were sometimes diagonally seamed.

Leather also was used for detailing. A fleecy coat of white Mongolian lamb had armholes outlined in leather with leather belt and buttons. Most coats were double-breasted.

BEVERGES FOR WET DAYS

A zebra stencilled mouton coat reverses to navy fabric for wet days. One in white mink reversed to black broadtail with white mink muffs and collar to be lent.

The contrasting collar that narrowed into side bands and extended down the front of the coat, ending in a wide hem band, was popular.

Most unusual was a fur for lounging. It came in light, fluffy floor - length Mongolian lamb and was trimmed with brown satin ruffles.

The Canadian majestic mink is luxuriously fashioned, if along more traditional lines. But a violet mink coat came with a hood and a dart mink in a narrow set in shoulders and and was semi-fitted.

RABIES DECLINES

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario department of lands and forests Monday reported a decline of rabies cases in Ontario in the first two months of 1966. In January, 84 cases were reported compared with the 1965 high of 130 cases. In February, 64 cases were recorded.

MARMORA C.W.I.

MARMORA — At the annual meeting of the Catholic Women's League held in the Parish Hall Monday night, the following officers were elected for the coming year: president, Mrs. Breen O'Connor; past-president, Mrs. Tom Hanley, 1st vice - president, Miss Gertrude Mallory; 2nd vice - president, Mrs. Charles Brady; 3rd vice - president, Mrs. Hugh Brady; secretary, Mrs. Bill Monk; treasurer, Mrs. Morris Lynch; councillors, Mrs. C. Lajoie, Mrs. C. Crawford, Mrs. John Clairmont, Miss A. M. Jones, Mrs. Herb English, Mrs. Bill Meechan Jr.

Mrs. O'Connor welcomed the members and invited them to attend the Diocesan convention in Perth on May 8 - 9.

For the membership meeting in May, a potluck dinner will be held in the Parish Hall at 8 p.m.

A high mass will be said for members at 8 a.m. on Tuesday, April 26, to celebrate the Feast of Our Lady of Good Counsel, patron saint of the C.W.L.

MORE

Mission boxes will be packed on May 25 to be sent to Combermere. Groups 6 and 7 will cater to the Chamber of Commerce banquet on May 8. The Holy Name banquet will be held on May 30.

SUPPORT VANIER INSTITUTE

The president reported that a donation had been forwarded to the Diocesan treasurer in support of the Vanier Institute of the Family. Centennial brochures regarding the Vanier Institute will be distributed to members at the next meeting.

To replace the donation sent from Marmora, it was agreed to hold a bake sale on May 21 with the following women in charge: Mrs. Joe O'Neill, Mrs. Charles O'Connor, Mrs. Breen O'Connor, Mrs. Tom Hanley.

There was discussion on the C.W.L. participation in Marmora village centennial project, and it was felt an article could be donated to the Town Hall after completion of its renovation.

Spiritual director, Rev. Father F. J. Spence, addressed members on the subject entitled "Women at the Council." He said 19 women (ten sisters and nine lay women), all outstanding in their fields, were present at the Second Vatican Council. They worked on the documents concerning the lay apostolate.

WATER PILES HIGH

The world's highest fountain in Geneva, supports a column of water 426 feet tall and weighing seven tons.

Resident Marks 90th Birthday

MARMORA — To celebrate the 90th birthday of Mrs. John Crawford, Marmora, on Friday, April 22nd, a turkey dinner was held Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crawford, with whom she lives.

Present for the occasion were close friends and relatives including Mrs. Crawford's sister, (Eunice) Mrs. Tom Shanford, Belleville, another sister, Miss Marcella Goodwin, resides at St. Mary's of the Lake, Kingston, and was unable to be present. Mrs. Crawford has three sons, Charles of Marmora, Joseph of Peterborough, and Eugene of Perry, N.Y.

Born at Cherry Valley near Picton, Mrs. Crawford has lived in Marmora for 70 years. Her husband, John, died 34 years ago and since then she has lived with her son Charles and his wife.

Mrs. Crawford has had only one hospital experience when she suffered a broken leg eight years ago in a car accident. After some weeks in the hospital, this white-haired, grandmotherly little lady returned home, where she has been healthy and happy ever since with her family, friends, and neighbors.

Many cards and gifts were received by Mrs. Crawford over the weekend, congratulating her on reaching her 90th milestone.

Pre-centennial Exhibit Shown

DESERONTO — Fashions of yesteryear are now on display at the Deseronto public library another in a series of pre - centennial year exhibitions. The display does not give emphasis only to feminine foibles but also shows a few items from the gentleman's wardrobe.

The gentleman's blue velvet smoking hat; the curved seven point snuff box; metal match case and high collars are few of the masculine items on view.

The ladies of the age appreciated the dainty hand-worked touches on their clothes. The intricate bead work on a black satin bodice and the beautiful lace inserts on a black silk blouse; the delicate work on the dress collars point to a more leisured era.

The shoulder length tippet and the lacy parasol are items not included in the current wardrobe. Nor is a gorgeous black velvet hat with ostrich plumes. Handmade items include a knitted collar; hand-painted china brooch, crocheted camisole; crocheted purse.

There are also hair waving irons and crimpers, tortoise shell combs, hat pins, and shell shoe horn.

BEADED BAGS

A pair of beaded bags demonstrated the difference in art. One is a closely worked creation in tiny seed beads in an all over pattern while the other is made with boldly colored bugle beads arranged in geometric shapes on a taffeta background. A beautiful linen child's pinafore with a scrolled decoration and a child's shoe form are also shown.

The exhibit was arranged by Mrs. A. George Walkin, member of the library board, with the assistance of Mrs. M. K. Allin, who has lent the entire collection of fashions. Mrs. Maisie Pettie has loaned a lace covered tea cosy which is a family heirloom.

Mrs. L. E. Tunnicliffe, chief librarian, has announced that there has been no change in the library because of daylight saving time. The hours are: Mondays and Wednesdays, 7 to 9 p.m.; Tuesdays and Thursdays, 3 - 5 p.m.; Saturday, 2 - 4 p.m. and 7 - 9 p.m.

GAMMA MU CHAPTER

Following the ceremony and a short business meeting an interesting and entertaining program was given by Jane McNicol, who was introduced by Judy Mowat.

During the program slides were shown from the Brussels' World Fair. Following this the girls were distributed with "Play Doh" and the prizes for the best sculptor in the group was divided between Beverly Deacon and Marylea Burtt.

Refreshments were served by Marylea Burtt, Judy Mowat and Elizabeth Black.

Women's Institutes

MELROSE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

MELROSE — Thirty ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. Robin McFarlane for the March meeting of the Melrose Women's Institute. Mrs. Gerald Stratton conducted the opening exercises and Mrs. Arthur Long gave the financial report which showed that the euchre parties through the winter months had been most successful. She also stated that Centennial teaspoons are now available to members.

Sue Yoo Soon, the adopted Korean girl, sent a letter of thanks which she had written on Christmas Day.

Mrs. Leslie Graedinger gave an account of the Hastings Hospital Auxiliary and urged other ladies to attend these meetings as well as offer their services for voluntary work in the pediatric playroom or in the preparation of dressings.

Mrs. Malcolm Lester, the district director, brought members up to date on the plans for the district annual at Melrose Church on May 26. As hostess branch further committees were organized to complete the arrangements. A social committee was appointed to plan for the catering to a wedding banquet in April and a request to cater to a wedding in May was accepted.

Mrs. Raymond Clarke conducted a most interesting program on "Citizenship". Mrs. Donald McLaren told of the minor duties which members as individuals should practise in the proud citizens.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Clarke introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Constable Gordon Oliver of the Ontario Provincial Police, who told of the alarming number of accidents which occur annually. Most outstanding causes of these are: too much speed; the disregard of traffic laws; teenage drivers; inadequate roads for the number of automobiles; the drivers' emotional condition. He explained that driving a car is an act of faith because each individual wagers that drivers will obey the rules.

However, this does not always prove true and by way of a film entitled "A Day in Court" the group saw how various types of drivers can be hazards on the highways. The people behind the wheel of a car, who are nervous, impatient, under the influence of alcohol or just plain show-offs are a menace and often cause accidents which involve innocent drivers who are using the "Three C's—Care, Courtesy and Commonsense—to make highways safe.

A lively question period followed and Mrs. Jack McLaren thanked Constable Oliver for his educational and informative address.

Mrs. Sherry Domille conducted a contest and the hostess and her assistants served lunch.

Successful Living

Early Mistakes Haunt Girl's Present Plans

DEAR DORIS: My unmarried sister had a baby three years ago, and it was adopted. She felt this very deeply as she is a sensitive girl, and very sweet.

A few months ago she fell in love with a boy and they planned to marry. She had been wrongfully advised to keep her own counsel about telling this boy of the baby, because not too many people knew of it. But he found out from another person and, while insisting he still feels the same, he says he could not possibly marry her.

My heart aches for her; she has paid over and over. What chance is there? Will she ever meet a boy who won't repulse her for her mistake? Believe me, she is not flighty, has only been out with these two boys. She is heartbroken. — IN HOPE.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR IN HOPE: Rare indeed is the forgiving heart which can overlook this error. It takes a real grown-up human to love enough and to understand enough to keep right on loving.

Yet if she is the gentle, lovable soul you describe, he cheats himself, doesn't he? I'd say she is worth loving — and that the right man will find her! When he does, and she discovers that he is The One for her, make positive sure she doesn't keep the facts from him. She can explain it so much better than gossip.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I will be married seven years in June and I have never got pregnant. I have been to two doctors about it, each one saying that they find no reason why I should not get pregnant.

Finally I went to see a specialist and he advised that my husband should go for an examination. When I told my husband this he said he was busy at work and as soon as he had time he would go. Well Doris that was in April 1965 and he has not gone yet. Every time I bring the subject up he gets mad and goes out on a drunk.

Now he tells me he will never adopt or go to see a doctor and let him pew him over. To my husband, doctors are quacks and social workers are all head shrinkers.

I feel that my husband does not want children. I do. I also feel he knew this before we got married. I love children and would hate to think I would never have any. — CHILDLESS.

* * *

DEAR CHILDLESS: Some men foolishly link sterility with a lack of masculinity. He dreads to take a chance on knowing the truth. And since he loathes the idea of adoption, this would be a poor solution.

But with your desires so different, isn't your whole marriage threatened? Either he must come to see and honor your point of view, or you will need to accept the limitations of a childless marriage without bitterness.

One of those so-called "head shrinkers" might just be the key to a better understanding between you, even if you would hate to think I would never have any. — CHILDLESS.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I liked your story about aging people and I want to tell you about a nice lady of 84 years. She joined the choir of the old people's home in the village where she lives!

She is my mother-in-law from Holland. She wrote us that her voice is still good and she likes the singing. She live alone; does her own cooking and cleaning without help. Is interested in world news and about everything. Visits many times her friends in the old people's home.

Two years ago she boarded a plane and came to this country to visit her four children and many grandchildren. Went back after seven months and was fresh as a daisy on arriving in Amsterdam. The newspaper had an article about her homecoming that day. — NEW CANADIAN FRIEND.

* * *

DEAR FRIEND: Long may she warble! I'm betting we could repeat that story with variations if we were to take a census of over-eighties across the country. A fine example of adding life to years!

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am a 16-year-old girl, and not once has my mother told me anything at all about sex. I've asked her many times in the past few years about it but she has never answered any of my questions.

I have been wondering whether or not it has anything to do with my father. He left him when I was only six. Ever since then she has been telling me men are not any good, so do not have anything to do with them.

She has never remarried or gone out anywhere since my father left her. Has this made a scar or something? What can I do to help her? — K.B.

* * *

DEAR K.B.: Scar is right: She is browned off, and that's for sure. But it's going to be tough for you to try to go through life having nothing whatever to do with men.

Contrary to your mother's bitter conviction, men are really quite a lot of good. Most make excellent husbands, fathers, workers and companions. And you do need to know for sure just what their connection is with the life processes!

Send me a stamped envelope and I'll send your information about books on the subject of sex and how to get them.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I like this one guy who is 19 years old. I am 15. He has long hair. The front part covers his eyes which are brown and beautiful. Should I tell him to trim the front or someone else? He is the singer in my brother's band.

He does not live with his parents, but stays at different places. I feel sorry for him and would like to help if possible.

Would he ever be interested in girls? I heard him say to my mother not until he finds the right girl; e.g. one that is not loud, or goes wild over anything. He is not me. How should I get the nerve to talk to him? — TONGUE-TIED.

* * *

DEAR TONGUE-TIED: Could be he can't see the "right girl" for that long hair he peaks through. But he won't thank you, at 15, for telling him.

Mooning over a young man of 19 who doubtless thinks you are still in your cradle is no fun. Drag your eyes away from him and begin gazing in the direction of the dashing 18abel 16-year olde. There are plenty of them.

If you don't start looking now, you'll be doing it a few months from now — and look at all the time you're wasting!

* *

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if ugly double pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More slim, youthful appearing and active.

CLUB 4-H NOTES

QUEENSBORO GIRLS' CLUB

QUEENSBORO — The last meeting of the Queensboro Girls' Club, "The Dizzy Dusters and Model Maids" was held in the Sunday School room on Saturday afternoon.

The girls finished their posters and notebooks in preparation for achievement day to be held in Madoc on May 7th.

ASSURE SUPPORT

OTTAWA (CP)—A delegation from the Mennonite Central Committee (Canada) assured Prime Minister Pearson Tuesday of the support of the faith's 22,000 adult members in Canada for his efforts to promote peace in the world. The six-man delegation from the sect's Canadian head office at Winnipeg spent about 30 minutes with Mr. Pearson and left him a three-page brief.

Mother's Helper

SOAKED SHOES — that found every puddle between school and home—need special "first aid." Insert shoe trees immediately—or if you don't have the right size, wadded newspaper stuffed tightly into the wet shoes will serve. Place in a warm spot to dry, but NOT on top of a radiator or near a fire. Too much heat will dry out the leather and stiffen the sole beyond salvaging. (Thanks to Mrs. M. PLAINFIELD U.C.W.

PLAINFIELD — Mrs. Frank Hogden presided at the Easter meeting of the U.C.W. held in Plainfield United Church.

Mrs. Boo Lightfoot conducted the worship service with "Resurrection" as the theme. Mrs. Harry Harrison and Mrs. Arnold Dilts sang a duet.

Mrs. Frank Hogden introduced the special guests for the evening — Mrs. Kenneth Denyes and Mrs. Earle Denyes, of Belleville. They showed slides and commented on their overseas tour, sponsored by the Christian Observer. This tour covered Copenhagen, Greece, Cairo, the Holy Land and Rome.

The speakers were thanked and presented with a small token of appreciation by Mrs. Clarence Hall.

Susanna's Family Fare

WHERE ARE YOU, PARENTS?

Dear Susanna: Sometimes, at our house, I wonder who is taking care of whom! — Mrs. D. S. Wallace

Our four teenage students go to great pains to ensure that we know where they are each day after school.

If it gets to be 5:45 p.m. or so, and some of them aren't home yet, there is usually no need for panic. All I have to do is open my broom closet to find out where they are, and what they're doing.

Each has an individual timetable showing where they will be on which day at what time, for their various extra curricular activities such as swimming, choir practice, sports activities, library, art classes, etc.

I didn't ask for this, they just did it on their own. For one reason, I know they don't like us to go ahead with dinner without them, and in the second place they expect the same courtesy from us. When we go out, they want us to leave a number where we can be reached, and to give them some idea when they may expect us home.

All in all, it is a very happy and satisfactory arrangement for everyone concerned, but you can see what I mean about my wondering just who is taking care of whom! — Mrs. D. S. Wallace

DEEP CRUST PIE

Dear Susanna: To make nice deep crusts for cooked pie filling, grease upside down bottom of your pie tin and put crust on, prick with a fork.

Bake as usual and just sit it in another tin while it is still warm. It will drop off and leave a lovely smooth shell.

You know, Su, I'm surprised so few people know this simple trick. Baked the other way, you don't seem to have much shell to fill. — Mrs. Helen Hardy

NOVI SAD KEEPS THE PAST — Since ancient times wandering people, in war and peace, have passed through Novi Sad in northeastern Yugoslavia. The mingled population is a microcosm of Yugoslavia with all the problems and benefits of a mixed population. By law each nationality has the right to its own language and cultural institutions. (CP Photo)

Novi Sad on Banks of Danube City of Many Nationalities

The city of Novi Sad typifies Yugoslavia's diversity of nationality and culture. In this story Canadian Press reporter John Best, who visited Novi Sad in the course of a tour through Eastern Europe, describes its history and how it treats its minority groups.

By JOHN BEST

NOVI SAD, (CP) — For a sample of how to fit together a jigsaw of diversified and even antagonistic heritages, this is as good a place as any in Yugoslavia to look.

Down through the centuries this small northern city beside the Danube has been a crossroads of history. Marching armies, and the ebb and flow of war and peace, have left their varied imprint in blood and language and culture.

The result is that in a land of mingled peoples, Novi Sad and Vojvodina—the autonomous province of 1,854,000 of which it is the capital—are even more mixed than the national tendency. Vojvodina is a microcosm of both the problems and the cultural benefits that heterogeneous population confers on a country.

Special measures have been taken by the government to maintain harmony in the region and permit the various national groups to preserve their ethnic identities.

"People have also been passing through here on the way to war or migrating from one place to another in the aftermath of war," says Vladimir Popin secretary of a Vojvodina nationalities commission.

In ancient times, this region knew the migrations of restless peoples. The footloose Celts—who were to spread eventually to the British Isles —the Thracians and later Romans, Huns and Avars left traces of their civilizations.

ENTERS HISTORY

Novi Sad, meaning "new place," is first mentioned historically in 1780. Early in the 19th century the Empress Maria Theresa of Austria had a fort built on the river here to check the northward advance of the Ottoman Turks.

The fort, actually a reconstruction and extension of ramparts built at some more remote stage of Yugoslavia's tempestuous history, was designed to control shipping on the Danube as well as serve as an outport for spying on the Turks. It had 50 miles of underground tunnels, on four different levels.

Apart from the migrations of peoples provoked by wars, there has also been an unending succession of peaceful drifting to and through this region. The general trend has been from south to north and from east to west—away from poor farming areas toward good land.

One of these movements was after the First World War, during which this region was part of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenians. Settlers came north from Serbia and Croatia. After the Second World War, people moved in to take up better land vacated by Germans.

An ethnic cocktail including all of Yugoslavia's principal races is the result. Serbs lead with 55 per cent of the population, and there are lesser numbers of Croats, Montenegrins, Slovenians and Macedonians.

Foreign nationalities are led by the Hungarians with 23.8 per cent of the population and there are substantial groups of Slovakns Romanians and Ukrainians. There are also sizable "families"—not treated as nationalities—of Bulgarians, Italians, Czechs and Turks.

Under the special measures each nationality has the constitutional right to use its own language and to maintain its own separate cultural institutions such as schools, theatres and publishing houses.

For instance, Vojvodina has a Hungarian daily newspaper, a weekly, a monthly literary journal, two children's publications and three other specialized periodicals all printed in the same language.

The nationalities have proportional representation in Vojvodina's governing bodies. Programs in the different languages are carried out on Radio Novi Sad.

There are 260 centres in Vojvodina that have schools for minorities. Serbians the predominant language in Yugoslavia, is taught In addition to the particular minority language, from the first grade.

According to Popin, no effort is made to encourage individual members of minority groups to move away from communities where they are concentrated in order to make the population more homogeneous.

One gets the idea that the authorities prefer to let well enough alone—not to tamper with the wishes of nationalistic groups that want to preserve not only their idealities but also in some cases, their separateness."

Such tolerance helps to ensure good treatment of Yugoslavs living in other countries. There are many thousands of Serbs, Croats and Slovenians living in Hungary, for instance, and Austria has significant numbers of Slovenians and Croats.

Uganda Could Not Beat Bootleggers So It Joined Them, To Delight of All

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The Uganda government finally has come around to accepting what Sir Samuel Baker discovered in 1864.

The British explorer, looking for the source of the Nile, set up his own still to produce a raw spirit from native beer and sweet potatoes.

By 1963 the brewing of bootleg liquor had become Uganda's third biggest industry, after cotton and coffee.

A committee set up to look into it made a conservative estimate that nearly 9,000,000 Africans drank at least a bottle a week and some three bottles a day.

In lush, fertile Uganda raw materials grow wild. Pineapples, bananas, potatoes, cassava, millet, corn and molasses all go to make waragal.

Methylated spirit sometimes is added to give an extra kick and soap is tossed in to reduce acidity.

"This tends to give an unpleasant taste to the product," the waragal committee reported.

Illegal waragal went by several names to preserve secrecy. It was known as kill-me-quick, the fixer, injection, the tear jerker and the minister.

Mothers doused their babies in it. Drinking competitions often ended in death. In the kingdom of Toro, a region of Uganda, an estimated 41 per cent of all cash income went for waragal. Waragal was at the root of rape, murder, bribery, and corruption and absenteeism, the committee was told.

The government built a $700,000 distillery, bought the crude bootleg spirit from licensed suppliers, refined it, added banana essence and put Uganda's national drink in the bars and within the law.

More than 70,000 bottles were sold in the first week at $1.40 a bottle.

The government sat back and watched the profits pour in.

And barflies got drunk at half the old price.

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — Miss Donna Preston who underwent surgery in Belleville Hospital, recently, has now returned home.

Several ladies from here attended the "Dutch Tea" and sale of home baking and sewing, in the Parish Hall, Roslin, on Friday afternoon, sponsored by St. Paul's Anglican W.A. Among those pouring tea was Mrs. A. P. Smith of Thomasburg.

The annual district meeting of Madoc District No. 45, of the Odd Fellows' Lodge, took place in the I.O.O.F. Hall, Thomasburg. Representatives of the various lodges in the district were present.

EMO Tested and Proven By Flood Waters of Red

WINNIPEG (CP) — Seven years of planning by the Emergency Measures Organization was tested and proven this spring by the flood waters of the Red River.

For more than a month, thousands of civil servants and volunteers worked under the coordination of the federal agency to mitigate the effects of a river latent on damage.

Its disaster plans were dusted off in early March when forecasters sounded the alarm that the Red River valley was in danger of flooding In the next six weeks, it organized, advised and assisted in measures to cope with the crisis.

"There's no question about it," says I. H. Deyman, regional director for Canada Emo, "the existence of emergency plans—particularly provincial and municipal — contributed materially to the general efficiency of the entire program."

Canada Emo, too, played an integral role.

When the initial alarm was sounded, its officers took their place in the main flood control headquarters to work with provincial and municipal authorities.

Before the threat was passed, 17 federal agencies and departments were drawn into the fight.

HELPED MOVE INDIANS

The Indians affairs branch helped the Roseau Indian band move from their threatened reserve to safety near Portage la Prairie. Veterans' affairs made its Deer Lodge Hospital available for iron lung patients moved from low-lying Winnipeg hospitals.

When it appeared a shortage of water pumps would develop, it was EMO that canvassed federal departments for reserve equipment.

Other federal help included Canadian National Railways' boxcars for storage of homeowners' belongings where homes were threatened; national health and welfare assistance to establish evacuee reception areas and early payment of allowances to residents of the valley; National Employment Service recruitment of civilians for dike work.

"It was the best exercise in peace-time disaster since the inception of EMO in 1950, for no other reason, because it extended over a six-week period," says Mr. Deyman. "Important lessons were learned."

The provincial EMO set up and manned the flood control headquarters in Winnipeg and set up co-ordinating offices in each of the affected communities throughout the valley.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING

NAPANEE — The Girl Guide leader's training warrant course was held in Trinity United Church last Saturday was attended by 18 young women from Belleville, Picton, Deseronto, Newburgh, and Napanee. It was a preliminary course, and will be followed by a second in Picton May 7. This course gives basic training in leadership for Girl Guide and Brownie leaders.

The trainers were Mrs. Mildred Neelands of Hastings, who instructed the Browns, or Brownie leaders and Mrs. Jean Boggs of Trenton who instructed the Blues, or Guide leaders.

Arrangements for the courses are made by Mrs. Bill Hooper, the division training representative.

SAFETY LANES

Safety lanes have been set up in the market square and Mrs. Inned by a representative of the Department of Transport. Old cars are given the preference. Chief of Police Harry Bean explained, as they are more apt to be defective. Some boys noticing the matter with them, he said but others were found to have defects. Brakes, lights, and the steering wheel are the parts which are most carefully checked.

Bowling League Ends Season With Banquet

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — The Tyendinaga Bowling League ended the season with a banquet in the Guild Hall in the Council House last Friday evening with about 80 members and guests who enjoyed a turkey dinner prepared and served by members of the Guild. Awards for the season were presented and officers elected for next season.

Each team received a token award, and special awards went for special achievements. Ernie Luck of the Lucky Strike Lanes in Deseronto was master of ceremonies. Sally Brant won the award for women's high average of the year, with a score of 208, and Bennett Brant a similar award for men. His score was 215. High triple ladies' award went to Mrs. John Green for 709 points, and men's to Vernon Green with 790. Ladies' high single was awarded to Audrey Maracle for 298 and men's high single to Laverne Maracle, with 326. Herb Maracle had the doubtful honor of bowling the lowest game during the season, scoring 97 points, and Wayne Green representing the ladies, came up with 97.

Billy Brant and Norman Maracle were granted special recognition as the bowlers who had begun the year as rookies, and had shown greater improvement than the other newcomers.

ELECT OFFICERS

M. W. McCracken, superintendent of the Reserve, presided for the nomination and election of the officers, and for their installation. He spoke briefly before taking over his duties. Nominations were made from the floor. George Maracle will be the president for next season; Gerald Maracle vice-president; Billy Brant, the treasurer, and Beatrice Maracle will continue as secretary. A special honor was given her during the evening when she was presented with a pin as the most valuable member of the league. Mrs. Maracle has been the efficient secretary for two years.

Speaker for the evening was Brad Warwick, chairman of the Inter-Reserve Bowling League. He outlined the progress that had been made in bolding an across-Canada All-Indian Bowling tournament in the Centennial year. He appealed for greater support for the project from this and all other Reserves. A bowling team is presented for another tournament soon.

House of Concord Described At Rotary Club Meeting

NAPANEE—Concord House in Thornhill, just out of Toronto, is the only correctional institution in Canada to which a youth between the ages of 16 and 20 can be sent when he runs foul of the law, the Rotarians were told at their weekly luncheon Tuesday. Boys up to 16 can be sent to the training school in Bowmanville, but once they reach that age, a magistrate now has the alternative of sending them to a reformatory, such as Guelph, or to the House of Concord. In Guelph they rub elbows with hardened criminals. In the House of Concord they are in contact with those like themselves who have been guilty of petty crimes.

The speaker was Capt. Reginald Sharpies, an officer in the House of Concord, the Salvation Army House of correction. His address was taken only eight years ago, he told his audience, but in that time a great deal of progress has been made. The Salvation Army had nothing to go by, and has had to blaze a trail from experience. Some methods were found to be failures and were abandoned, and a new approach was tried.

100 ACRE FARM

"There is no bars on the windows, no high fences around the 100 acre farm on which the house is situated. The boys are taught a trade of their choice. Farming is now taught by a government representative. The B.A. Oil Co. established a gas pump and service station where two qualified attendants can teach the boys to be service station attendants or mechanics. They can learn to be chefs or short-order cooks. Or, if they wish, they may continue their education through grade 12," the speaker said.

"Since the school was opened, it has been discovered in several cases that the abnormal conduct of the boy was caused by a physical defect, hitherto undetected. Three boys were found to have brain tumors, and several cases of epilepsy had been diagnosed. One was of an extremely rare type. Two government psychiatrists are now available.

Some government support is now given, but there was none at first. The House was built and maintained by the Army. So successful has it been that a second institution, based on parallel lines, has been erected in British Columbia with a great deal of government support. It is almost ready for occupants. Also, three other provincial government are considering building similar institutions."

WORTHWHILE PROJECT

"Not all the boys who had been at the House of Concord had made good after going back to life outside, Captain Sharple regretted. But enough of them have become good citizens to prove that this is an eminently worthwhile project."

The speaker was introduced by Envoy Frank Phelps of the local Salvation Army Corps, and was thanked by the Rev. E. Irvine Johnstone of Trinity United Church.

Mrs. McGuire sent a welcome message to the Rotarians. The White Elephant store which opened Monday morning for the summer, had brought in $83, the first day. She anticipates another good season. She has operated the store for three years, as a volunteer, the first year for the O.S.T.O.C.'s, and the past two summers for the Rotarians, with the proceeds awelling their hospital donation. Last year the store cleared over $4,000.

President Robert Wartman was put in charge of arrangements for the Rotarians from Napanee, to attend the inaugural meeting of the second Rotary Club in Kingston, at Portsmouth.

Napanee Personals

NAPANEE — Mr. and Mrs. Harry Caldwell and Susan of Perth were in town last week to attend the celebration connected with the 50th wedding anniversary of Mrs. Caldwell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Wartman of John St.

Rapido Results Impressive And Lucrative for Company

By DAVE BUTLER

MONTREAL (CP)—Even before the Rapido hit the rails, it had repeated test runs—through a computer. Now the Canadian National Railways' crack Montreal - Toronto train uses high speed, comfort and snob appeal to woo back rail business from the airlines.

The ew service, started last October between Canada's two largest cities, is billed as North America's fastest passenger train. It covers the 336-mile run in four hours and 30 minutes, hitting up to 90 miles an hour. It is designed to offer the best features of European trains and North American airlines. Overhead luggage racks have been eliminated, ceilings lowered and equipped with indirect lighting, old - style seats replaced with airplane - type seating. Meals and drinks are served where the passenger 'sits. Each car has a "valet."

The Rapido, which operates once a day in each direction as a non-stop basis except for a couple of low changes, replaced a "pool" service run for many years by the CNR and Canadian Pacific Railway. The old trains took up to seven hours with several stops.

RESULTS IMPRESSIVE

A CNR spokesman says the early results are impressive—and lucrative. By the end of February, the Rapido was averaging about 2,400 passengers a week and acceptance was still growing.

Originally, a six - car train, it has expanded to between nine and 12 cars on various days—it does not run Saturdays. Parker cars are 96-per-cent filled and coaches run at about 81 per cent of capacity.

"If all our trains had this record, we would n't have to worry," said the CNR spokesman, whose company has been fighting for several years to bolster slumping passenger business.

The Rapido service costs the passenger no more than the other three—slower—trains on the Montreal-Toronto run. Running costs to the company are about the same, though there were heavy initial expenses including high-speed banking for curves and switch changes.

MATCH PLANE TIME

Most of the new passengers up to now are believed to be former automobile travellers—it's about a seven-hour car run from here to Toronto—but the railroad hopes to cash in also on its claim that it can take passengers from downtown to downtown in the two cities as fast as they can make it by plane.

Success of the Rapido also could bring changes in some other CNR rail services, but nothing definite is being planned at present.

There has been a 30-per-cent increase in passenger traffic between Montreal and Toronto since the CN-CP pool system was dropped but the spokesman declined to give all the credit to the Rapido. He said other factors such as continued acceptance of fares oriented to passenger demands, a vigorous advertising campaign and aggressive salesmanship must also be considered.

CN carried more than 17,000,000 passengers in 1965, an increase of 12% per cent over 1964. The spokesman said an even larger increase is expected this year.

RAIL BUSINESS BOOMS FOR RAPIDO — The Canadian National Railways crack Montreal - Toronto train, the Rapido, appears to be a hit with the travelling public. Hitting up to 90 miles an hour it has cut about two hours off the old train time and claims it can take passengers downtown to downtown about as fast as plane travel. Passengers get airplane-type seating with meals and drinks served at their seats. (CP Photo)

CHILDREN PLANT TREES ON SANDBANKS — A large number of area schoolchildren, under the supervision of the Department of Lands and Forests, are engaged in a three-day tree-planting project on the Sandbanks. The students are working in pairs to plant about 15,000 Carolina Poplar trees. The conservation project is intended to prevent erosion and excess shifting of sand on the dunes.

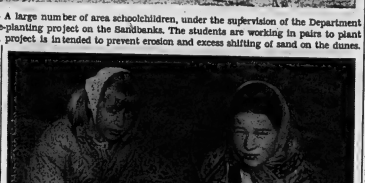
Happy School Children Plant Trees at Sandbanks To Stop Inflow of Sand

PICTON (Staff) — The Sandbanks, a familiar and popular summer playground in Prince Edward County resounded yesterday with the sounds of happy school children. They were not rushing the season but rather were engaged in a gigantic tree planting program sponsored by the Department of Lands and Forests.

Some 15,000 trees will be planted by school children of the Hastings and Prince Edward area. To date 400 Belleville school children of grade 7 have been to the sand dunes and engaged in this project. The trees supplied by Department of Lands and Forests were brought to the Sandbanks from St. Williams, Ontario, and are of the Carolina Poplar variety. Later this spring it is expected students from King ston and Napanee areas will participate. The program allowed each child to plant five trees and students were paired up for the planting session. In charge of the project were Lands and Forest personnel and teachers who accompanied the classes.

Bob Davidson, Lands and Forests Superintendent at Orifot Park and Ed Edson, forester from Napanee, supervised the groups of children. Also in attendance were two Lands and Forests officials from Tweed, Bill Hiscock and Jack McMurray.

"Officials explained to students that mulch (straw) was placed on the sand in October last year and after winter snows had fall this held the moisture for the trees and when they were planted and allowed them to take root. Of the trees that were planted about 80 percent manage to survive, stated Mr. Davison, providing that it's a good year and there is lots of rain.



About 200 school children from Belleville attended the project on Tuesday, another 800 will be there on Wednesday and Thursday Picton and other public schools in Prince Edward County will attend. About 630 students will be involved in the whole program. This is the second year of a three-year Centennial Planting Program which was organized from the Tweed office of the Department of Lands and Forests.

Mr. Davidson explained some of the history of the Sandbanks to the students. "Originally," he said, "there were a lot of trees in this shore area however early settlers cut off many of the trees and this allowed sand to wash in to great banks." With the absence of the trees sands drifted with the winds off Lake Ontario sending the sand back inland until it reached valuable agricultural land. It was also filling in along the banks of West Lake. A reforestation program was begun in an attempt to hold back these sands and through the years it has been continued in an attempt to halt the drifting dunes. Now there is very little, if any sand moving past these planted areas and in years to come it will be completely controlled. About four years ago Lands and Forests planted Carolina poplars in the sandbanks area and today these are about height is about 10 feet. A few are taller than this.

The students, who arrived from Belleville by charter bus, had a wonderful experience on the sand dunes and many of them visited the famous banks for the first time. They were taken on nature hikes between planting sessions by Lands and Forests officers and shown the many attractions of the area.

New facilities had been added to the park last fall and are continuing this year. An impressive entrance way has been constructed, roads are all paved and large paved parking areas are available. This section of the park is reserved as a picnic area and no camping as yet has been allowed. The Sandbanks boasts five miles of beautiful sand beach and is well-serviced by way handily accessible. It is expected that with the new roads and facilities that it may become even more popular than the outlet beach as a swimming area. Entry is gained through the Southeast end of the park.

The park at North Bay (near Consecon) has also been taken over by Lands and Forests and will be under their control this summer. Privies, toilet, facilities and changing houses, picnic benches, will be erected there.

The Rural Scene

PICTON — Farm boys and girls, are reminded that there still time to join a 4-H Agricultural Club this year. The clubs that will be carried on are as follows: It & A Milford, Picton and Sophiasburg 4-H Calf Clubs, Prince Edward 4-H Corn, Barley and Tomato Clubs. Picton Kiwanis 4-H Potato Club and Prince Edward 4-H Engineering Club. The Engineering Club is for senior members only and is open to farm boys who were 16 years of age by January 1st, 1966 and who will not reach their 21st birthday by December 31st, 1966. All other clubs are open to boys and girls who were 12 years of age by January 1st. More members will be welcome in any of these clubs.

MAIL ENTRIES EARLY

We would like to remind corn growers in Prince Edward County that entries in the High Yield Corn Competition should be forwarded to the Department of Agriculture Office in Picton by May 1st. The date for accepting entries is considerably earlier than former years. This is necessary to comply with regulations in the Ontario Grain Corn Competition which are uniform across the Province. As soon as the corn field has been selected the entries can be made.

WEED CONTROL

How do we take the bue out of growing raspberries? Some Raspberry growers are making use of chemicals to keep weeds under control either alone or in combination with cultivation. If you are thinking about chemical weed control well now is the time to make plans. If bramboid weeds are your problem, 2, 4-D amine when applied properly can do an effective job. When using this material keep it off of the new shoots for as much as possible. Hemnual weeds and grasses are your main concern a directed spray of paraquat (Gramoxone) applied to the base of the canes about this time of year can give you control of these weeds. For control of grasses including quackgrass a spray or two of Dalapon applied on actively growing grass as in the next few weeks should be applied. Simazine is a chemical which is effective in controlling germinating weeds when applied as a directed ground spray. One should avoid wetting the raspberry plants with this material. For details on rates and precautions consult publication 75 "Guide to Chemical Weed Control" available at the Ontario Department of Agriculture Office. Never use a chemical without reading the label on the container.

264 BOARDS APPROVED

A total of 264 boards were approved for premium under the Boar Premium Policy during March. This number included 185 Yorkshire; 34 Landrace, 45 Lacombe. The boars listed qualify for premiums ranging from $20 to $35 depending on the type of the individual and the records of the sire and dam. Anyone interested in purchasing an approved boar can obtain the names of breeders at their local Department of Agriculture Office.

4-H Homemaking Clubs Complete Year's Project

PICTON — 126 4-H Homemaking Club members in Prince Edward County successfully completed "The Supper Club" project, on Saturday, last. Twelve clubs from various parts of the county attended the Achievement Day held at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Picton.

In recognition of the fine leadership given during the club project, 19 voluntary leaders were presented with a ribbon and a sterling silver spoon from the Home Economics Service, Ontario Department of Agriculture.

During the morning session of Achievement Day, members judged a class of tea biscuits and scones, gave reasons on the latter, and planned suitable suppers to complete four daily menus for different seasons.

About 40 interested visitors attended the afternoon program to enjoy the skits, demonstrations and exhibits planned and presented by each club. They also had an opportunity to see the members' record books and tea biscuits - both requirements for successful completion of the project.

Mrs. Sam Tripp, District President of Prince Edward County Women's Institutes, assisted with the presentation of County and Provincial Honor Certificates.

12 girls received County Honor Certificates and pins for successful completion of six projects: Judy Wetherall, Albury Club; Brenda Bigg, Bloomfield Club; Barbara Stavely and Linda Pulver, Cressy-Victoria Club; Ruth Tracey, Lorraine Adams, Donna Broomfield, Cathy Goudron, Consecon Club; Pat Munro, Susan Goodmorphy and Anita McLeod, Hillier Club; Judy Ellis, Jo-Ann Bond, Milford Club; Betty Boame, Mountain View Club I; Debbie Motley, Mountain View Club II.

Eight girls received Provincial Honor Certificates and pins for successful completion of twelve projects: Nancy Wesse, Albury Club; Sandra Yeder and Marie Yader, Bloomfield Club; Nancy Carnrike, Consecon Club; Marion Munro and Susan Allen, Hillier Club; Elaine Snider and Tena Boame, Mountain View Club I.

Leadership awards from the Canadian Council on 4-H Clubs were presented to Mrs. Keith Wallace, Milford, Mrs. Holdret Gorsline, Demorestville and Mrs. Winston Pulver, Ameliasburg, for their years of leadership in 4-H Club work.

Assisting County Home Economists, Mrs. Ingrid Wood, were Home Economists, Miss Mary Lou Black, Picton and Miss Janet Munsie, Napanee.

The fall 1966 project is "Being Well - Dressed and Well-Groomed" while the spring, 1967, projects' Gardens - Home Beautification".

AMBASSADOR RETIRES

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Johnson announced Tuesday the retirement of Ambassador Charles W. Yost, 58, as U.S. deputy permanent representative at the United Nations. Yost, a veteran of 32 years in the U.S. foreign service, will be succeeded by Dr. James M. Nabrit Jr., Negro educationist who is on leave as president of Howard University to serve with the U.S. mission at the UN.

—Extended for three years the Export and Import Permits Act, under which the government controls export of strategic materials to the Sino-Soviet block.

—Provided for establishment of a 35-man Science Council of Canada to advise the government on scientific research.

Activity in the House was matched by meetings throughout the day outside the chamber to organize the debate on redistribution. After a flareup in the Commons Monday over an alleged government threat to use the "guillotine" rule for allocation of time, the parties reported agreement on a way to squeeze in all appeals.

Many of the complaints today were expected to concern name changes only. Quebec stands to lose one seat in the next Parliament.

Fewseats will be beard from all provinces except Newfoundland, whose seven Liberal members are setting for their new lines.

The sharpest objections are expected to concern Alberta, where 17 MPs are fighting a giant new riding extending from the U.S. border north for 435 miles through the Rocky Mountains.

The opponents say that the riding doesn't make sense in a province of east-west communications and Alberta's 15 Conservatives want an extra seat each for Calgary and Edmonton to be the only major changes from the existing map.

Redistribution will cut Commons membership to 264 from 263.

As now set out, the reports leave only six ridings unchanged from existing boundaries, which were laid out in 1952 on the basis of the 1951 census.

The new redistribution is based on the 1961 census and sets a quota of about 70,000 persons per riding for most provinces. A leeway of 25 per cent above or below the quota is allowed.

morning applauded when Gromyko drove into the Vatican through the Arch of Bells.

The foreign minister was accompanied in his discussions by Semen Kozyrev, Soviet ambassador to Italy, and preceded by four motorcycle outriders.

Among Italians, the view was widespread that Gromyko hoped to strengthen the Italian Communist party, which already gained nearly 8,000,000 votes at the last election, by making Communism appear respectable to the church.

Many Roman Catholics also were waiting to see whether any mention would be made in the audience about what they regard as anti-Catholic persecution in Communist countries.

While there could be no concrete discussion in a private audience, Pope Paul was expected to refer to the need for world peace in his talks with Gromyko.

The pontiff waged an unprecedented Viet Nam peace offensive last winter, and made peace the theme of his historic visit to the United Nations in New York last autumn.

During the visit, he met Gromyko briefly at the UN General Assembly.

Although Gromyko was the first Soviet government member to be received by a Roman Catholic pontiff, Pope John gave a private audience to Nikita Khrushchev's son - in - law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alexei Adzhubei, when they visited Rome in 1963. Adzhubei then was editor of the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia.

classes catch up. This was refused."

Negotiations for the teachers' first labor contract began more than seven months ago and during that time two strikes have been called.

The first, in March, ended almost immediately when the government obtained an interim injunction declaring it illegal.

When the injunction expired, the teachers declared another strike and, although a second interim injunction was obtained the next day, the teachers ignored it.

Union negotiators said before Mr. Lesage's announcement that agreement had been reached on salary increases of between $200 and $275, depending on the teachers' experience and qualification.

Small Chinese Children Taught to Hate Americans Report of British Author

Ottawa at A Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, April 26, 1966

The Commons was informed that the government has decided to refer the Seven Truscott case to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Industry Minister Drury said General Motors Corp. will fix sticking accelerators in its Canadian-made 1964 Chevrolets and Chevelles.

CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet rejected the request of the executive of the Toronto Producers' Association that the Wayne-La Pierre case be reopened.

Conservatives in the Commons attacked the government's use of economic legislation for the political purpose of applying sanctions against Rhodesia.

The Commons, during good progress, passed bills extending the life of the Export and Import Permits Act, increasing the borrowing capacity of the Farm Credit Act and establishing the Science Council of Canada.

Notre Dame To Graduate Secretaries

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Notre Dame University here is looking to the day when it won't be unusual for a girl to ride a bicycle to learn to be a secretary.

Pioneers are six girls who graduate this year after a two-year course in medical secretaryship.

Sister Mary Ellen, head of the secretary science school, says that eventually the Roman Catholic university will offer a degree course applicable to all phases of secretarial training.

Students will also be offered training in such specialized fields as legal, financial, executive and accounting secretaryship.

The degree courses will have advantages over business school courses because graduates will take an academic background to their jobs, she says.

Apart from her proficiency in the secretarial fields the graduate will bring with her a background of "philosophy, history, philosophy and psychology."

The medical secretary grads this year — all from British Columbia — are Sharon Hunter, West Westminster; Fayo Latta, Kitsalard; Margaret Malo, Campbell River; Mavis Rumbaugh, Iswoua; Nadine Runkatuhi, Trail, and Wendy Webb, Nelson.

They have received a knowledge of medical terminology, pathology, anatomy, physiology and medical procedures and have served periods of "internship" in doctors' offices.

The course's philosophy is to "educate the whole person, physically, spiritually, socially and economically," says Sister Mary Ellen.

Guam-Based Bombers Pound Supply Route

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP)—U.S. Air Force B-52s pounded North Viet Nam for the second time in the north today, again attacking Mu Gia Pass on the supply route to the south.

In their first raid on the north 15 planes in the planes dropped 700 tons of bombs which set off landslides that closed the pass. But a week later 124 bombers men said North Vietnamese workers had reopened the roadway and the supplies poured to the Viet Cong were again able to get through.

While the long-range American bombers from Guam struck the north, Viet Cong terrorists mingled out a new target in a month-long wave of violence in Saigon. A powerful mine exploded in the midst of civilian construction workers, killing eleven Saigon Koreans and two South Vietnamese and injuring more than 40 persons, including some children.

Frank Tuohy, a British author, is just back from China, the world's most populous country. This article on "the children of Pape Mao" is one of a number of reports Tuohy brought out of China.

By FRANK TUOHY

PEKING (AP)—Small Chinese children are being taught to hate Americans. When I protested that American children were not taught to hate Chinese I was told: "Our system of education is different from theirs, for the U.S. is not a socialist country."

During my first week in China, I will say it myself and over again: "It's wonderful what they've done for the children." In the big cities and the surrounding countryside I saw no signs of hunger; though clothes are somewhat ragged, the children are bright-eyed, their skins clear.

There are few shaven scalps, no scabs or skin ailments. I visited schools and kindergartens where the windows were open to a light snow falling outside. But no child was coughing. There were very few running noses. It is the Chinese children and their mothers who have benefited most from preventive medicine, the pre-natal care, the clinics in the countryside and the new hospitals in the cities.

The doctors I met in these places nearly always turned out to be hefty young girls with braids and flat cheekbones. You find the same type of girl everywhere, in charge of creches, kindergartens and primary schools, where precocious three-year-olds play organized games and perform folk dances with complete confidence and wide smiles of engagement.

LIKE SHAKING HANDS

A burst of clapping, "Hullo, hullo, hullo," and "smith" are the greetings for all strangers, whatever their nationality. With the youngsters, they proceed towards you taking your hand, they steer you from room to room; and when you leave, they start shaking hands three or four times.

But even with the children, things in China are not quite what they seem. Every visitor to Shanghai admitted to me that "children always clap when they see you for the whole foreign friends'."

In the same city I visited my own former district school. These places are open to all children of the district. Shanghai after school and on Sundays, for spartime activities.

Eight hundred children applauded as I arrived at the children's palace, a former villa in the garden my two small guides led me to a sort of obstacle race, crawling under wire, over walls and up ladders, down tunnels. Each obstacle represented some feature of the Viet Cong and revolutionary spirit of Mao Tse-tung, the Communist leader.

LEARN-PARTY LINE

Inside the large converted house, in other rooms, children were going on. Upstairs, little boys and girls charmingly sang songs about the Vietnamese war, set to the "We must study hard for the future" tune. Two seven-year-olds did a folk dance, "embroidering the portrait of Chairman Mao." And in the workshops as "We must defend our country, in accordance with Chairman Mao's teachings." "The people's commune is like a golden bridge" and "When I become grown, I'll be a soldier and mined to be a peasant."

In another room, boys were making model planes—not Chinese planes, but American ones, the "Flying Tiger" P-40 Kittyhawk shot down by Chinese or Vietnamese.

Next door the art class was copying cartoons of bayoneted American soldiers. Earlier I had seen a film, "Heroic Port," which showed U.S. President Johnson, bandaged and on crutches, hobbling on a beach in Viet Nam, under a Chinese slogan "resolutely help the Vietnamese patriots." Knock-kneed American soldiers collapsed in front of muscular Vietnamese who were being unstrutioned; helicopters exploded in dozens above the title "The Paper Tiger Imperialists."

Quite apart from the subject matter of these efforts, I noticed no sign of originality. Everything was copied by the children from clippings from party publications which were pinned on the walls. I concluded that creative originality is effectively banished from the new China.

ROOM FOR ONE MORE? — A horde of Tokyo commuters surround a lone street car in front of Tokyo's Ikebukuro station, a terminal station, as national railway and private railway workers went on strike demanding higher wags. Metropolitan-operated street cars and buses did not join the strike.

Plan to Resolve Inter-union Warfare Adopted by Congress

WINNIPEG (CP)—The first ship raids in which the raiding union can prove that the workers involved had legitimate beefs against the service provided by their former organization.

Worked out behind closed doors and confessed in advance by the CLC's 31-member executive council, it is primarily designed to prevent the takeover of work CLC unions by those by the militant Confederation of National Trade Unions, bitter rival of the 1,200,000-member congress.

Earlier in the day railway union delegates charged that the federal cabinet is liable to give in to CNTU pressure and allow takeover of CLC unions from national bargaining units.

Several speakers urged that the CLC threaten a national strike if the CNTU demands are accepted by the government.

William D. Mahon, head of the United Steelworkers of America said the cabinet may decide to allow the CNTU as a way to win extra seats in Quebec. This could take the form of any sort of national bargaining strength.

ADOPT RESOLUTION

Still on the convention agenda, which runs until Friday afternoon, are controversial resolutions dealing with the Quebec Federation of Labor's demands for increased autonomy and the application of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada for readmission to the central labor body.

On the raiding procedure, Charles Brooks of the United Auto Workers, Windsor, Ont., said raiding should be discouraged by the CLC.

Bill Stewart of the Vancouver and District Workers' local urged the convention to go on record opposing raiding in any form.

"We have many workers engaged that there must be an improved method of raiding on a democratic basis."

Eamon Park of the Steelworkers' Toronto office called for legislation to be drawn towards increased mergers.

"You can't say to workers that they are the property of a union organization simply because they are members of the congress," he said.

Larry Sefton of the Steelworkers, a member of the executive council, said the new procedure serves notice to all unions in the country that they had better "pull up their socks" and service members properly.

UPHOLDS PRINCIPLE

Jack Phillips of Sydney, N.S. a Transport Union worker, said the raiding plan upholds the principle that workers belong to the worker and not the worker to the union.

The two-day convention stretches a constitutional amendment adopted at the last CLC convention said in only three minor cases.

Now the procedure will pass on to a decision which takes 25 days.

The CLC's impartial umpire, Carl Goldenberg of Montreal, must be given raiding complaints immediately upon their receipt. He has 10 days to file a decision with the executive council which then has 15 days to make a final decision.

It requires a two-thirds vote of the council to declare a raid justified.

New Turn in Air War Over North Viet Nam With U.S in Command

WASHINGTON (CP) — The new turn in the air war over North Viet Nam continued Tuesday as two American Phantom jets tangled with two Communist MIG-21s and one kill was claimed.

Since Saturday—when carefully - boarded enemy fighters struck back for the first time in months—no other Communist planes have been claimed.

All the action materialized in a zone north of the North Vietnamese capital of Hanoi and south of the Chinese border. That may have some significance, particularly if the planes prove to have come from China.

The state department Tuesday stressed that in the Vietnam war no sanctuary exists and planes attacking from China would invite retaliatory attack.

However, the appearance of the aircraft north of Hanoi may simply mean that is where the bases are.

DIFFICULTY FOR U.S.

Indeed, it also means is more difficulty for American operations where losses are rising sharply.

American bombing now is at about the same level as before the Christmas bombing lull of 27 days. The pattern is broadly unchanged with continuing limits of restraint.

Heavier American losses are believed due to ground fire, a Soviet - supplied surface - to - air missiles have been largely ineffective since the American pilots can spot them coming and duck.

But admitted American plane losses to April 20 from February, 1965, total 215 and another 10 have been reported in the last week.

American officials in Saigon have stopped identifying the cause of the losses. The North Vietnamese have radar-directed anti-aircraft guns and these and other weapons can throw up a lethal wall of fire through which American planes must dive to hit "military imperialists' bases, barracks and other targets."

HAS 100 PLANES

U.S. intelligence says it believes North Viet Nam has fewer than 100 jet fighters and only about 15 of the MIG-21s raised as equal to the American F-105 Thunderchief but inferior to the Phantom, boiled item the U.S. has in combat.

Why they are being used now may result from a desire to inflict heavier losses on the U.S., protect certain targets or simply reflect the fact that crews now are trained and techniques worked out to meet them with the missile defences.

One domestic repercussion could be intensification of calls for heavier air strikes in the north to get the war over sooner.

In an election year, with Congress striving to gauge the public mood about a dirty and expensive war, such sentiments may find company.

Italian Win In World Bridge Seems Assured

ST. VINCENT, Italy (AP)—Italy faced North Americ for the first time today in the 16th world contract bridge championship, with the evidence clear from the first-day results that only the United States stands in the way of an eighth consecutive Italian victory.

But admitted American plane losses to April 20 from February, 1965, total 215 and another 10 have been reported in the last week.

'Ray of Light in Dark Room' As Researchers Fight Cancer

The scientific assault on cancer has been long, tiresome and frustrating. A final breakthrough is not yet in sight. But several new research leads are taking a similar tack, are stirring lively interest. This is the first of two articles on the latest developments and their implications.

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The effort to enlist the body's own defences against an invading disease is perhaps the most startling front today in the battle against cancer. A scattering of research reports has focused fresh interest on this approach.

If there is some hope that research may be working on some promising leads, it must be set against the background of a thousand disappointments of the past.

In the last months there have been some interesting variations on the theme that in the immune processes of living creatures there is a way to defeat cancer, just as viruses and bacteria are defeated.

SOME DISAGREEMENT

There are a number of current reports. Researchers disagree on their ultimate value:

In Detroit, researchers claim to have created an experimental method linking human tumor cells to a small protein to prod a cancer patient's body into fighting his own cancer. But they say their work is strictly preliminary and needs more laboratory confirmation and refinement.

In Buffalo, N.Y., researchers have transplanted small transplants of tumor between cancer patients in hopes that each might develop some defense against the tumor of the other. However, they have maintained silence about the final outcome of the experiment.

One patient, Harry T. Griffith of Derby, Conn., survived in an experimental transplant died Monday. A spokesman in Buffalo said the transplant was futilitic or no value in Mr. Griffith's case.

His partner in the experiment, Robert F. Allen of Tucson, Ariz., died of a tumor after he took part in a similar experiment were reported to be progressing well. The hospital said it would be some time before their condition would be evaluated.

HAVE USED RABBITS

In Los Angeles some researchers have produced rabbits they believe may be tolerant of all human tissue—and have talked about using the rabbits' blood serum in cancer serums for human patients. But other scientists have questions to ask about the method.

Although these reports have ridden the crest of the news wave, there have been countless small advances in well-manned laboratories in which have accumulated the evidence that suggests much of the hope.

About 1,000 research researchers converge on the same mechanism that helps you eventually get over a cold or why a vaccination against a virus, or prevents a patient from borrowing a kidney from other tissue when his own goes bad.

Indeed, that area of cancer research is largely tied to the barrier that prevents individuals from rejecting organs in transplant operations. The body is able to recognize the strangeness of foreign substances introduced into it and to mobilize defences against the intruder—except for, usually, cancer cell.

HARD TO PROVE

It has not been shown, in the eyes of most researchers, that cancer cells possess any truly foreign characteristics that will enable the body to recognize them as strangers. Most believe the tumor cell is strange—but proving it is another matter.

Once a cancer cell gets into the body's defence mechanisms, it often acquires a potent disguise—pneumonias or other infection—his body's resistance so lowered that he can't fight back.

Still, there are a few cases where cancers in humans suddenly and spontaneously shrink and disappear.

And there are cases, when the main or primary tumor is removed by surgery or destroyed by radiation, in which cancer cells present from the main tumor unaccountably.

There are situations where the seed cancers suddenly appear at other places in the body, long after the primary tumor has been removed. That, in itself, might suggest that the body's defence mechanisms had killed the seed cancers in check for some time.

HAS PLAYED SOME ROLE

In all these cases, researchers believe, the body's immune mechanism has played a role, recognizing and fighting the cancer as an intruder.

Using immunity against disease is hardly new. By the time most Canadian a nd United States children are 5 years old, they have been immunized against smallpox, polio and diphtheria.

The procedures are many.

Off-Year Census to Be Taken

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Census workers will begin counting population, farm assets and merchandising establishments June 1 in what has become known as an off-year census of Canada.

Normally the federal government conducts a detailed census every 10 years. The last was in 1961.

But for many years it has conducted a mid-term census of agriculture and this now has been expanded to include a complete population count. This year, a census of merchandising also is being conducted.

Preparations have been under way for the forms and returns and instructions now are being sent to census workers. The questionnaires filled in are as penetrating—or as controversial—as were included in the 1961 census, the results of which are still being compiled.

The population count this year will be limited to basic household locations, size of landholding, and type of dwelling. Housekeepers will be asked whether they own or rent the premises.

The population count of individuals will ask for names, relationship to the head of house-hold, sex, age, and marital status. No questions are being asked about race, religion, religion, language, or income.

STUDY LAND VALUES

The agricultural census will be more detailed about values of land, areas sown to various crops, market value of machinery, numbers of livestock and livestock, sales of milk, part-time work and employment of hired hands, value of farm products sold and expenditures on wages, taxes and rent.

The cost of mechandising establishments is simply to provide a basis for the annual revenue of this branch of industry to be conducted by mail later in the year. Enumerators conducting the population count will list the names of stores and other establishments, their addresses, head offices, and whether there are more than 10 employees.

Officials of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said that while the 1966 census is costing being asked this year is far fewer than five years ago, the information gathered will be vital to its job of keeping tab on the economy and varying aspects of the Canadian economy.

Many of the bureau's reports on population, production, employment and other subjects are estimates made month - by - month on the basis of a sample surveys and other statistical data.

To ensure accuracy of the estimates the bureau must occasionally establish what the statistical data is actually counted, actual counts against which the estimates can be measured.

ONE REGIONAL OFFICE

DBS has established regional census headquarters in St. John's, Nfld., Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver, and there will be a branch in regional office representatives, hired for about a year's work, and 1,000 census commissioners appointed this month.

Some 30,000 census takers will be hired in the last week of May, During the week starting June 1 they will collect about 800 names each, visiting about 150 households. More than half will be women, although in the north most of the census takers will be men.

For the farm census, forms will be delivered directly to farmers in advance of the census date. Farmers then can work them over, gather together the detailed information requested, and have it ready when the census takers when they arrive.

DBS officials, emphasized that the census is confidential. information given by an individual, farm or business to census takers with anyone else, and individual reports cannot be released to any other government department, other than in summary reports which disclose no one person's affairs.

Because the number of questions being asked most individual is only five, results should be available more quickly than from past census surveys. The results will be tabulated by electronic scanners and punched cards.

Italian Army Medical Unit Handled Exercise Emergencies

By BOB MacKENZIE

BARDUFOSS, Norway (CP) — As 8,000-man military exercise north of the Arctic Circle presents a number of problems, especially in bad weather when air communications are spotty at best.

But worries about medical care all but vanished during the Winter Express NATO exercise in Norway in mid-March when an Italian Army field hospital proved it could handle everything from chicken-pox to surgery.

"We were not sure just how everything would work out," Lt.-Col. Giordano Saverio said in an interview during one of his morning rounds. "This was an experiment and it has been a great success."

Col. Saverio, a surgeon, was in charge of the 50-bed tent hospital which was completely self - sufficient with its own power supply, kitchen and pharmacy. The only thing lacking was a dental unit, and that was supplied by the Canadian Army Medical Corps.

Maj. R. A. Headley, a native of Sydney, N.S., had his own tent, generator, chair and instruments to handle emergency cases.

"It was not too busy, though," he said in the closing hours of the one-week ground exercise.

"I had only 31 patients — mostly for extractions or replacing fillings."

HIT BY CHICKEN POX

Maj. Headley had some trouble with a generator for his power supply, but another problem that caused advance concern—freezing of drugs—didn't materialize.

"Some may have frozen slightly but it didn't have any effect on their use."

Col. Saverio had more serious problems, and his hospital was filled to capacity several days with a combination of frostbite cases—all suffering British troops—and an outbreak of chicken - pox among 30 Italian soldiers.

He also had some surgery cases, including two appendectomies.

The operations in his plastic tent operating room took "a little longer than it would have in a regular hospital" "but both appendectomy patients came through without complications."

There was a slight language problem at times, but all forces participating in the ground exercise — Canada, Britain, Norway and the United States — had liaison army doctors stationed at the hospital.

CASES HANDLED FAST

"Most officers spoke some English," Maj. Headley said, "but it didn't take long to find an interpreter when you needed one."

Each national group had its own medical facilities for minor treatment and the hospital was reserved for serious cases, many of which were brought in by helicopter.

Three Canadian soldiers burned when a pressure stove exploded in their tent were in hospital 14 minutes after their accident was reported, although they had several miles and a couple of mountains to cross.

A Canadian Army helicopter with a doctor picked them up nine minutes after the call and landed at the hospital five minutes later.

"Ambulance service in a large city would have taken longer than that," an Am can colonel said.

"But then you don't bearded nurses in re hospitals."

Tomorrow: Snowshoes beat skis for mountaineering soldiers.

New Antibiotic May Be Used Against Cancer

OTTAWA (CP)—Three Canadian microbiologists have discovered and partly tested a new antibiotic which attacks a wider variety of disease-causing organisms than any other known antibiotic, the federal agriculture department announced Tuesday.

Named Myxin, the antibiotic now undergoing is being investigated by the cancer research institute at the University of Saskatchewan for its killing effect in test tubes on cancer cells.

It is expected the cancer research at Saskatoon will take another year before Myxin's cancer - killing effect in test tubes is known.

Agriculture Minister Greene, hailing the work of the three scientists, said the new antibiotic promises to be a major weapon against disease.

While not yet tested on humans, Myxin was found in laboratory tests to prevent the growth of 36 species of bacteria, including 12 species of actinomycetes and 12 species of yeast.

Mr. Greene said the discovery raises great hopes not only for medical uses but also for veterinary medicines and control of plant diseases.

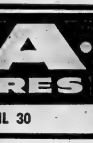
Exports Rose In March to $789,300,000

OTTAWA (CP)—Exports rose in March to $789,300,000, nearly 12 per cent higher than the same month last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Tuesday.

The increase occurred despite a strike affecting some 50 trucking firms in Ontario, slowing shipments from many parts of the province.

Exports in the first three months of this year were up more than 20 per cent from the first quarter of 1965, at $2,227,000,000.



Exports to the United States in March were valued at $516,400,000, 26 per cent higher than in March last year. These brought exports for the first quarter to $1,358,100,000, more than 28 per cent higher.

March exports to the United Kingdom were down 18 per cent in March to $79,800,000, but were 1.5 per cent higher in the first quarter at $270,100,000.

Pinch Hitting

The word "new" should carry real meaning for Belleville and District Softball League teams and fans this season.

A new five-team grouping, with three of last year's seven clubs out and one new one in, was established Sunday night.

New rule changes, with the idea of improving the game for the fans, came from the annual OASA convention.

Belleville's three entries, The Bobcats, Trudeaus Motors and Ellis Juniors, will play home games in the newly-reserved and floodlighted Alemite Field.

And last but not least, the league will be using the new Quinte District Umpires' Association for all games.

Joining the three Belleville clubs are entries from Madoc and Bloomfield, both back from last year along with Ellis Juniors and Trudeau Motors.

Missing from the 1965 season are Stirling, Tweed and Trenton.

The absence of a Trenton club in the league is a sorry case. It has been something like 10 or 11 years since Trenton has not been represented.

For several years Charlie Drake's Juniors carried the colors. The club switched to intermediate, staying pretty well together, and continued to provide a top brand of competition.

Air farce players came into the picture and for a while there were two teams, one from Trenton Town and another from the RCAF. More recently they merged again and it was a single squad.

At any rate there certainly was enough talent to provide at least the basis for a good team — and we think there still is. We expect to see at least four or five of Trenton's best playing with Belleville teams in 1966.

Tweed Lumbanks' stay in the loop was a much shorter one but none-the-less colorful and most welcome. Lack of players, especially pitchers, was the reason given for Tweed's withdrawal this year.

Most league supporters hope to see both Trenton and Tweed represented again by next season.

As for the other clubs this year, Bobcats, Madoc and Bloomfield are expected to have little difficulty in fielding good clubs while Trudeaus and Ellis Juniors may have some holes to fill.

Ellis' are said to be losing six players because of the age limit and rumor has it that several key men from Trudeaus are working out with the Bobcats.

As always, we feel that balance is the key to success for the league. With six lineups going everywhere and other players available from Tweed and Trenton, Bobcats and Trudeaus should be able to come up with strong lineups.

It is hoped Harold Reid will be able to find some good up and coming youngsters to replace his Junior losses, plus giving Ellis' another contender.

Madoc's experience in the league last year, and more gained on the way to the OASA Juvenile "C" championship, plus the five average players allowed the club for B. and D. play, should make for a more successful season for Charlie Hamilton's boys.

In the field department, the Alemite Field speaks for itself, or will when the new, lighted field for softball has long been needed here and this should be it. We are told it will be ready for the league opener around May 24.

The rule changes continue to puzzle some people, especially concerning the size of the ball. There is no change in the ball itself.

The bases are now 60 feet apart, rather than 55; the pitching distance is 43 feet, rather than 46 feet, 6½ inches; and baserunners can go now when the pitcher releases the ball. That's it.

The general feeling is that it will open up the game and make it more interesting to watch. The emphasis will be on speed afoot — and a strong-armed catcher.

So, with all this "newness" in the league, it should be an interesting season.

Flying Wings Scuttle Canadiens 5-2

By GARY McCARTHY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Bruce MacGregor, a native of Edmonton, celebrated his 25th birthday Tuesday by scoring a goal that led Detroit to a 5-2 victory over Montreal Canadiens and gave the Red Wings a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final series.

The other Detroit marksmen were Andy Bathgate, Ab McDonald, Floyd Smith and Dean Prentice.

Montreal picked up its two markers from defenceman Jean - Claude Tremblay and Yvan Cournoyer.

The series now shifts to Detroit for the third and fourth games Thursday night and Sunday afternoon.

The Detroit forwards checked the Canadiens in Montreal territory most of the game and the defencemen blocked shots and checked the Canadiens at every opportunity.

CROZIER HANDLED 25

And when Montreal did manage to get into Detroit territory, Roger Crozier was there to stop them as he turned in his second consecutive standout performance in the Red Wings' nest. The Canadiens fired only 25 shots at Crozier.

The Red Wings got 34 shots at Montreal netminder Lorne (Gump) Worsley and held an advantage in every period. They outfired the Montrealers 16-9 in the opening frame, 7-6 in the middle stanza and 13-12 in the last period.

In addition to their goals, Bathgate, Prentice and Smith each drew an assist. Norm Ullman, who came up with a sound forechecking display, picked up two assists for his night's work.

Alex Delvecchio, Detroit's veteran centre and captain, drew an assist on Prentice's goal for his 100th playoff point of his National Hockey League career.

Montreal opened the scoring at 8:35 of the first period when J. C. Tremblay scored with Bathgate in the penalty box for elbowing. It was the Montreal defencemen's second goal of the playoffs.

Bathgate evened the score with less than two minutes remaining in the opening frame. His goal came while Montreal's John Ferguson was serving an elbowing penalty and the goal was his sixth playoff marker this season. All have come on the power play.

The rout fell in on the Canadiens in the third period after both teams failed to break the 1-1 deadlock in the second period.

Crozier broke the Canadiens' backs early in the final 20 minutes as he made dazzling stops on left winger Gilles Tremblay and centre Jean Beliveau.

MacGregor scored his goal at 1:35 of the final frame and that started the Red Wings on the road to victory. It was his first playoff goal this season.

"I went into the corner, saw a hole between the post and the goalie and let it go," MacGregor said after the game.

Fifty seconds after MacGregor's goal, Ab McDonald made it 3-1 for the Red Wings with his first playoff goal of the year. McDonald scored after Smith hit the side of the net with a hard shot and the puck rebounded onto McDonald's stick.

He sent Henri Richard out between Gilles Tremblay and Claude Provost and sent wingers Dave Balon and Cournoyer out with Beliveau.

However, that goal and the appearance of Noel Price on the ice for the first time in the final series was just about all the 14,550 hometown fans had to cheer about in the third period.

Just 28 seconds after Cournoyer's goal—at 12:28 — Smith made it 4-2 when he beat Worsley with a 30-foot backhander from directly in front of the net.

Five Hits, Two Homers

Alou Helps Crush Former Giant Mates

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Felipe Alou felt at home Tuesday night.

The former San Francisco player lashed five hits, including two homers and two doubles, as Atlanta Braves crushed the Giants 11-3.

The 30-year-old Brave then triggered a three-run third inning with a double, led off the fourth with another homer—his fourth in the last three games—singled in the five-run sixth and doubled in the seventh.

"I still like this park. When I come back here, it's like playing for the home club," said Alou, who had nine straight hits for the Giants in 1962 but never before had collected five in one game.

The busy performance rocketed his batting average 56 points to .393 and gave him hits in 50 of the Braves' 14 games.

METS GO WILD

In other National League games, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 and New York Mets outslugged Chicago Cubs 14-11.

While Alou was on his rampage, Willie Mays failed to get his record 512th home run. Before retiring after the sixth inning, Mays walked, grounded out and doubled.

Helping Alou in the Braves' 16-hit attack were Hank Aaron and Joe Torre with homers and Rico Carty with a three-run double.

Sandy Koufax allowed 13 hits —tying the most hits he's ever given in a game—but a four-run Dodger first inning brought the lefthander his third victory of the season, the last two on complete games.

After giving up six hits in the first inning—one of them John Roseboro's two-run single — St. Louis' Bob Gibson held the Dodgers to one hit the rest of the way, retiring the final 18 batters he faced.

Chief Asks Buffey To Reconsider

MONTREAL (CP) — Ian (Scotty) Morrison, referee-in-chief of the National Hockey League, said Tuesday he would be "very pleased" if Buffey reconsiders (his) plans and returns to refereeing NHL games next season.

Buffey said Monday he will retire, but after a joint meeting with league president Clarence Campbell and Morrison, said he will delay his final decision until mid-summer.

Morrison said Buffey's decision was not a direct result of a visit he said to the officials' room between the second and third periods of the Detroit Red Wings-Montreal Canadiens Stanley Cup opener here last Sunday.

"I went in to talk to Buffey as part of my job," Morrison said. "There wasn't any dressing down or bawling out involved.

"I told him I was not satisfied with certain aspects of his skating in the first two periods and I assumed he would accept my remarks as constructive criticism."

Morrison said personalities never entered the discussion and he did not question Buffey's assessment of penalties.

"The things I pointed out to him so that time he denied, but we concurred with my comments at our Monday meeting and I told him then I still want him back next year."

Morrison said he had told Buffey, a seven-year veteran of NHL officiating, that he didn't seem his usual sharp self and that he was getting caught out of position on some plays.

Blake Says Little

Abel Lauds 'Real Team Effort'

By BOB BELL

MONTREAL (CP) — Detroit coach Sid Abel praised his club for a real team effort, while Montreal coach Toe Blake had little to say in his dressing room Tuesday night.

"The whole team played well, but the difference in the game was our skating", Abel said after the Red Wings' 5-2 victory over the Canadiens in the second game of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Blake said: "We had 15 guys out there who couldn't do anything. But I have nothing to say when I lose 5-2. You guys have your story."

"I came into Montreal looking for one victory, which is a real advantage when you play on the road in the finals. Now we go home two games ahead," Abel said.

Several of the players agreed with Abel that it was the combined effort of the whole club that made the difference, but many believed that goaltender Roger Crozier's big saves early in the early minutes of the third period held the team together.

The title goalie made 22 saves gloved the hard-driven puck shot from just in front of the net by Canadiens' forward Gilles Tremblay and seconds later did the same to his jean of Beliveau's shot when the Montreal captain appeared to have him beaten.

"All the shots were tough," Crozier said.

"But I have to pick one in Beliveau's. He had the whole right side to shoot at."

Crozier said he thought the turning point came when Bruce MacGregor netted his goal at 1:35 of the third period followed 50 seconds later by Ab McDonald's winning goal which gave the Wings a 3-1 edge.

"I went into the Montreal corner and started to skate in front of the net when I saw an opening between the goalie and the defence and let it go", MacGregor said.

Andy Bathgate combined with Dean Prentice on a power play for the first goal and later assisted on Floyd Smith's marker in the third.

Prentice said he was standing behind the Montreal net when the puck bounced off his arm and over the net to Bathgate's stick.

"Andy swatted at it while the puck was still in the air and in it went. If we keep playing like this we're on."

Detroit centre Norm Ullman, who put on a sound display of forechecking was confident of the team taking the cup. "The Canadiens are tough, but I'm sure we can do it now."

When Abel was asked if he thought Jean Beliveau is in good the Canadiens, he said: "No, it wasn't strategy, Bryan is part of my fourth line and if the Canadiens want to run at him, let them go ahead. They are the ones to suffer."

Watson stepped onto the ice in the first period and was soon hcckling Canadien speedster Henri Richard. John Ferguson went into action as he forced Watson on the boards, freeing himself in the penalty box for elbowing Watson, and watched the Wings score their first goal.

"Mental errors" were the words of Montreal's speedy left winger Gilles Tremblay as he summed up his team's loss.

Olympics In Canada Only A Dream

To Munich, Sapporo

By HAROLD MORRISON

ROME (CP)—Canadian delegates flew home today, their hopes for staging the 1972 Olympics shattered in a double blow that sent the winter Olympics to Sapporo, Japan, and the summer Games to Munich, West Germany.

Banff and Montreal had sought the winter and summer Games respectively.

Tuesday's selection of the 1972 sites by the International Olympic Committee was particularly disappointing to Banff, which had tried twice before to get the winter Games and was rated the favorite this time.

Banff delegates said they had been thwarted and outmanoeuvred by Avery Brundage of Chicago, 78-year-old president of the IOC.

"We have been hit on the head," said Peter Lougheed of Calgary, vice-president of the long and strenuous Banff campaign.

BRUNDAGE VILLAIN

"We lost because of Brundage," said Hans Macki, another Canadian, who managed the Banff team.

"I've been coaching kids at tennis and track and field as an amateur for years. I've always told the kids that I coach not to sign a pro contract because there's always the Olympic Games.

"After this experience of being slapped in the face and hit below the belt at the same time I'm going to tell the kids to sign a contract sometime if they want to and not wait for the Games to come to Canada."

The Montreal group, led by Mayor Jean Drapeau, also was disappointed. But Drapeau maintained the IOC drive to bring the summer Games back to Europe, last held here in 1960, broke his own hopes, but he did not harbor the bitterness of the Banff team.

Most outspoken was Macki, who charged that Brundage skillfully used protests of conservationists just before the IOC voted Tuesday on the summer Games site. These wilderness enthusiasts maintained the Games would damage Banff's national park concept.

Macki maintained Brundage read the letters "to have the greatest possible impact on IOC members."

DENIES CHARGE

Brundage, in an interview with The Canadian Press, denied the charge that he deliberately sought to kill Banff's chances.

"You must remember Japan was given the winter Games in 1940 and these could not be held because of the war," Brundage said. "That was a factor."

"I wonder who started the war?" commented Lougheed acidly.

Brundage agreed, however, that the conservationists' opposition also was a factor.

"These are very important people and I was duty-bound to acquaint the committee with their views. I also read to the members the letter by Prime Minister Lester Pearson saying the Games would not impair park values.

"We are very sorry, but these are the facts of life. The criterion was not only from Canadian conservationists but from those in the United States and other parts of the world. If you desire to stage Games in a national park, you are bound to raise the opposition of these people all over the world."

While Brundage gave his explanation, there seemed to be some aspects not fully explained.

MacEACHEN WAITED

Tuesday morning, when the Banff delegation made its formal presentation, Health Minister Allan MacEachen waited in the corridors in case he would be called by the IOC to provide Canadian government reassurances on the conservation situation.

MacEachen later flew home, after members of the Banff delegation said that the conservation issue had been put to rest. But at a noon press briefing, Brundage told reporters that the issue was still serious and that he had suggested the Banff delegation have someone available to explain Canada's position before the IOC vote was taken.

Macki later charged that Brundage had read the letters to the IOC just before the vote but did not give the Banff delegation a chance to defend themselves.

When Brundage was asked by The Canadian Press why he did not have someone from Canada called in before the vote, he said the committee did not want further representation.

"They had heard it (the Banff argument) once."

Drapeau said Montreal's defeat was hard but Banff's was harder. This was Montreal's first try. It was Banff's third.

"We can explain our defeat by saying this is our first try and the IOC sentiment towards bringing the summer Games back to Europe was strong," said Drapeau, who will probably fly home Friday.

TRY AGAINT

Both he and Ed Davis of Calgary, president of the Banff campaign, expressed hopes that the two communities will make new attempts for the 1976 Olympic Games.

Salt Lake City, Utah, and Lahti, Finland, also bid for the winter Games. Detroit and Madrid also sought the summer Games.

Awarding the Games to Munich, the Bavarian capital famous for art, music and beer, gave Germany its first Olympics since 1936, when Hitler was in power.

Japan was awarded the Olympics for the second time in eight years. Sapporo is also famous for its beer. By coincidence the town lies on the same latitude as Munich and Milwaukee, Wis., another city famous for its beer.

Sapporo won on the first ballot. The vote was not even close.

It was reported unofficially that Sapporo got 32 votes and Banff 16.

MONTREAL THIRD

Munich was reported to have won on the second ballot with 54 votes, followed by Madrid with 15 votes and Montreal with 14. Detroit, it was reported, was knocked out on the first ballot for the summer site.

Brundage refused to announce the official votes.

Sydney Dawes of Montreal, Canadian member on the IOC, declined to say how he had voted.

"I don't think the vote's of any consequence. We know the chances of the people who try to get these things," he said. "I don't think how I voted is of interest to Canadian newspapers."

Dawes also said he will retire soon as Canada's IOC member.

The IOC was meeting again today to discuss more questions on its agenda—one of which concerns the 1968 summer Games in Mexico City. The 1968 winter Games will be held at Grenoble, France.

The IOC session is due to end Friday or Saturday.

ASK AID

MONTREAL (CP)—A Montreal Jewish group had decided to ask Paul Martin, external affairs minister, to ask the West German government to put up $20,000,000 to restore Jewish cemeteries in Europe allegedly desecrated by the Nazis. A statement Tuesday said the decision was made at a meeting of 40 rabbis, who say they represent 80 per cent of the city's Jewish population, estimated by them at 110,000.

Montreal Philosophical

Banff 'Kicked Below Belt'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal was philosophical and Banff was angry today at the rejection of their bids to play host to the 1972 Olympic Games.

The International Olympic Committee, meeting in Rome Tuesday, passed over both Canadian bids as it awarded the summer Games to Munich and the winter Games to Sapporo, Japan.

Montreal, a first-time bidder, was expected to try again. But Banff, which has lost out in three consecutive tries for the Winter Olympics, is expected to receive stiff competition from Garibaldi Park in British Columbia as Canada's prospective site for the 1976 Games.

John Fraser, president of the Garibaldi Olympic Development Association which failed to win the Canadian nomination for the 1972 Games, said he is confident that the park, 70 miles north of Vancouver, will be chosen for the 1976 competition.

There was bitterness from supporters of Banff, who were hampered by protests from Canadian wildlife and conservation groups as well as the counter - offers of prospective hosts in other countries.

"It's hard getting slapped in the face and kicked below the belt at the same time," said Hans Macki, manager of the Alberta group in a transatlantic telephone call to Calgary after the results of the voting were announced.

The wildlife officials were unrepentant.

NO PLACE FOR GAMES

"The Olympics have no place in national parks in Canada," said Dr. William Fuller of Edmonton, co-chairman of the parks committee of the 3,000-member Canadian Audubon Society.

Richard C. Passmore, executive director of the 160,000-member Canadian Wildlife Federation, said he hoped there would not be another bid to have any international sporting event held in a national park.

"Seldom has so much benefit for so many been frustrated by so few," was the rejoinder of Jack McDowell, president of the Banff-Lake Louise Chamber of Commerce.

Forestry Minister Sauve said the federal government was shocked at the Vienna rejection of Banff.

"We thought [illegible] would get it this time," he said. "We did everything we could."

There was disappointment, but less shock, in Montreal, where Lucien Saulnier, president of the city's executive committee, said Montreal has emerged from its experience with enhanced prestige.

"Our city is still young," said Mr. Saulnier. "It certainly can put in an application for the Olympic Games again."

Dart League Names Champs

The Belleville City Dart League named its champions for the season following the completion of playoffs this week.

Temple's Bobcats captured the first series, the Legion copped second series honors and Allen's Furniture won the third series.

Playoffs were conducted in two weeks of play with total points deciding the winners.

Date of the annual presentation banquet will be announced later.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Since taking over Don Stanton's Men's Shop a few days ago we have found it necessary to replenish our stock with new merchandise of the same high quality as before. We have selected about 100 garments for immediate replacement and are sacrificing these at cost price and less. We think this is the biggest clothing value ever offered in Belleville.

'The Brat' Tops New Managers

NEW YORK (AP)—Chalk one up for The Brat, Eddie Stanky. He has the best record among the six new major league baseball managers after the first two weeks of the 1966 season.

Stanky's Chicago White Sox have won seven games and lost three, and are in third place in the American League.

The other five teams with new pilots each are under .500.

Chicago's brisk pace under Stanky is no surprise. Chicago's 2-8 last-place mark in the National League under new manager Don Heffner is an eye-opener, though. The Reds finished fourth last season and were voted No. 1 for 1966 in a pre-season poll conducted by The Associated Press.

Things look dark again in Kansas City were Al Dark and the Athletics have won only two of nine games. Leo Durocher has his Chicago Cubs in ninth place in the NL with 3-6.

Grady Hatton is doing better than expected at Houston where the Astros are 6-8 and Wes Westrum and his New York Mets are two places higher than is being predicted for them. The Mets are eighth with 3-6.

Stanky must be doing something right because the White Sox have a team batting average of only .232 and have lost all three of their games by one run. They've won four by a similar tally.

Rochester Ends Suns' Win String

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jacksonville Suns finally lost a game in the International League, but it took a 400-foot double in the 10th inning by Mike Epstein of Rochester Red Wings to turn the trick.

Epstein's hit, his third among the five that Rochester got against two Jacksonville pitchers, earned the Wings a 5-4 victory. The loss was Jacksonville's first in six outings.

In other action, Columbus Jets moved into first place with a 4-3 victory over Buffalo Bisons, Syracuse Chiefs handed Richmond Braves their fifth consecutive loss with an 8-2 decision. The Toronto Maple Leafs game at Toledo was postponed due to cold weather.

Buddy Harrelson, who singled in a Jacksonville run and stole home for another in the fifth inning, committed two errors in the sixth that led to a three-run uprising by the Wings.

The Jets were paced by rookie Mike Derrick, who drove in three runs, and George Springs, who homered, singled, walked twice, stole two bases and scored three runs. Veteran pitcher Sam Jones saved the game for Columbus with a sixth-out and infield tap to retire Buffalo in the ninth after the Bisons loaded the bases with one out. Tim Harkness homered for the losers.

A wild throw on a grounder by Richmond pitcher Arnold Earley triggered a six - run eighth inning in which the Chiefs sent 13 men to bat. Winning hurler Billy Graham mudfied the Braves on four hits.

Packers Trade Moore

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP)—Green Bay Packers, champions of the National Football League, have gone to work on the future by making their first major trade of the season.

Looking for quarterbacking depth, coach Vince Lombardi Tuesday sent Tom Moore, a proven half - back who has played on three Packer championship teams, to Los Angeles Rams for a pair of unknown but promising players and a draft choice.

In return for Moore, the Packers acquired Ron Smith, a quarterback who spent most of last season on the Rams' taxi squad, and Dick Arndt, a six-foot - four, 250 - pound Idaho tackle who has a year of college eligibility left.

The Packers had been seeking a third quarterback to replace Dennis Claridge, who was selected by the new Atlantic Falcons in the expansion draft.

Moore gained 2,044 yards and scored 21 touchdowns in his six seasons at Green Bay.

The streaking Cleveland Indians have earned a spot in baseball's book besides the extinct St. Louis Browns. Now if they would just follow suit and go away, Baltimore Orioles would be setting pretty.

The Indians' ninth straight victory, a 4-0 shutout against Kansas City Athletics by Luis Tiant Tuesday night, equalled the American League mark for consecutive victories at the start of the season set by the Browns in 1944. St. Louis won the pennant that year.

Meanwhile, second-place Baltimore kept pace with a power display that defeated California Angels 7-3. It was the Orioles' ninth victory in 10 starts.

Dave Johnson, Brooks Robinson, Curt Blefary and Andy Etchebarren provided the muscle for the Orioles with home runs that accounted for six runs.

Elsewhere in the American League, New York Yankees snapped a seven-game losing streak with a five-run ninth inning rally that caught Boston Red Sox 7-6, and Chicago White Sox downed Washington Senators 4-1.

It was Tiant's second straight shutout. He blanked Boston in his first start 10 days ago.

Against Kansas City, he allowed just three hits and struck out 12. He got all the runs he needed in innings by Larry Brown and Duke Sims.

The Indians go for their 10th straight victory and a tie for the major league record held by the 1935 Brooklyn Dodgers and 1962 Pittsburgh Pirates when they meet the Angels in Cleveland tonight.

The patient Orioles stayed right with the Indians by hammering four home runs. Johnson and Brooks Robinson each had two shots while Blefary and Etchebarren added solo clouts.

Jose Cardenal and Bobby Knoop homered for California.

The Yankees, who had lost 10 of their first 11 games, took a 6-2 lead into the ninth inning against the Red Sox. Boston rallied for four runs on Carl Whitey Ford and Hal Reniff.

But New York came back with a walk, three singles, a sacrifice and an infield out before Pat Dobson's single brought in the winning run.

Floyd Robinson rapped a two-run homer in the first inning and then Joel Horlen and Eddie Fisher combined on a seven-hitter that beat the Senators.

WEDNESDAY

- The Hallmark Hall of Fame presents an hour and a half long dramatization of the conflict between the scientist Galileo and the Church entitled "Lamp At Midnight." The Italian astronomer Galileo Galilei was condemned by the Church as a heretic for daring to defy the theory that the earth was the centre of the universe. Starring the distinguished actor Melvyn Douglas, the drama will be carried by channels 2 and 8 at 7:30.
- From 9:30 (!) to 10:30, the CBC presents a documentary on what happens during buying and selling operations involving thousands of dollars in a stock exchange. "Buy Low — Sell High" follows the normal process of a market transaction, capturing the excitement at the exchange floors on film. George Hees, former president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges comments on the 1929 Wall Street crash, its causes, and the possibility of such a disaster ever occurring — channels 11 and 12.
- "A Remnant of Harry" — is a half-hour drama about a poet whose talents are not appreciated while he is alive — so he returns to earth after dying to see how posterity feels about them — channels 11 and 12, at 10:35.

De Vicenzo Wins Dallas Open

AT THE PARK — Terrified, Susannah York looks on as co-stars Stanley Baker and Stuart Whitman fight to the death in this scene from Joseph E. Levine's "Sands of the Kalahari", a Paramount Pictures release which opens Thursday at the Park Theatre in Technicolor and Panavision for its first Belleville showing and for three days only. Complete shows are at 7.00 and 9.10 p.m.

He won his fifth tournament in the United States—in a 19-year period—Tuesday when he came from four strokes back, shot a four-under-par 67 and picked up the $15,000 first money in the Dallas Open with a 72-hole score of 276.

It was, he revealed, the 120th tournament victory in an international golfing career that began in 1945 when he won the Argentine Open.

He has won the National Open in 13 countries—Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Spain, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Chile, Peru, Colombia, Panama, Jamaica and Mexico.

De Vicenzo won the Colonial National Invitation at Fort Worth in 1957 and that was his biggest purse until Tuesday when he won the Dallas Open by one stroke over Ray Floyd, Joe Campbell and Harold Henning.

HE'S THE GREATEST

De Vicenzo may be the greatest winner in golf history. His 120 victories surpass even the 116 credited to Snead. The latter, however, won practically all of his championships in the United States.

He is 43 years old, has been a pro since 1938. He started the final round of the Dallas Open tied for ninth place, four strokes off the lead being set by John Lotz and Harold Henning, who had 36s for 54 holes. Only De Vicenzo made progress in the final 18. Henning was one-over-par Lotz two-over.

Doug Sanders and Gay Brewer, who were supposed to fight for the championship, finished with 72 and 73 respectively, and wound up down the list. Sanders had 279 and tied for eighth place. Brewer had 280 and tied for 13th.

Sanders, however, at leading money winner of the year, now $51, He now has won $51,$55.84.

Petite Petula Clark Never Considered Rock 'n' Roll

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Petite Petula Clark has exploded her singing talent on the Hollywood scene, a trailing those who thought of her as a rock 'n' roll singer.

The British singer told a stellar audience at the Cocoanut Grove as varied entertainment of something old and much that is new. Her performance was a revelation to those who came expecting a teen-type rocker.

The reason for that reputation was her first American record, Downtown, which was such a favorite with the youthful crowd at every concert she appeared at. Downtown, then I noticed the inscription. I comment, 'I didn't know I was a rock 'n' roll singer.'

"I was glad to see that when I was this year for I Know A Place, the category had been changed."

BROUGHT CHANGES

Downtown brought many changes to her life.

"Actually, this was the time when I expected to be slowing down my career," she remarked. "I had enjoyed a career as the most successful female performer in England and on the continent. Having had the best of it, I thought would be settling down to the exacts tree-lined streets porcelain—and we also have places in Paris and on the Cote d'Azur—as my daughters would soon be starting school.

"And then Downtown was released in this country. Now we have doubled our travel time, and who knows when it will end?"

Petula, who is married to and managed by Frenchman Claud Wolff, is a veteran of British show business despite her gamin appearance. She began by performing before soldiers in the war, along with another noted star.

"Julie Andrews and I were actually very good friends in those days," she remarked. "We both had the same problems—we were both very slim with show-business parents. We knew a lot of each other then, but not in recent years. I would like to see her again."

Petula appeared in 25 English films, most of say vast importance, and then returned to her beginnings as a singer. She made the first record in the vivacious vocalist music. The new beat; it contributes to the current generation, she says.

Sapporo Wild With Delight

TOKYO (Reuters) — The mountain-ringed city of Sapporo went wild with delight today when the International Olympic Committee in Rome chose it as the site of the 1972 winter Games.

Olympic and Japanese flags were broken out at 3:30 a.m. when the news reached Sapporo that the beer and tourist centre on Japan's Hokkaido island had been picked over Banff, Alta.

Buses and trains will be decked with flags, and loudspeaker cars moved along the streets tree-lined streets proclaiming the news to Sapporo's 850,000 people.

In Tokyo, the Japanese government pledged all possible aid to ensure the 1972 winter Games would be as momentous as the 1964 Tokyo Olympics. Sapporo officials estimate it will cost about $10,000,000 to stage the Games.

Marksmen Set Team Record

The Quinte Marksmen, preparing for their final indoor shoot of the season, came up with the highest five-man score ever recorded by the club at their two weekly competition last night.

The total score for five shooters was 1,390.

Don Wilson had the high individual mark, 270, followed by Frank Allis with 262, Reg Sprackett with 262, Don Parks with 255 and Cliff Smith with 249.

The final indoor shoot will be held Monday, May 2, at 7.30 in the Belleville Armouries. The Labatt Trophy winners and high scorer last year scores in masters, expert, sharpshooters and marksmen classes.

RACES RETURN

MONTREAL (CP) — Six-day bicycle racing returns to Montreal Sunday, May 8, with 10 two-man teams will swing into action at the Paul Sauve Arena.

Lakers Stun Celtics To Tie Finals

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles carried the National Basketball Association championship series back to Boston for the final game when the Lakers stunned the Celtics 125-115 Tuesday night to deadlock the best-of-seven final at 3-3.

Baylor was contributed heavily to the Lakers' victory. Four players hit 20 points or more, led by Jerry West with 32. Rookie Gail Goodrich played the best game of his professional career, scoring 28. Elgin Baylor added 25 and Rudy LaRusso 20.

John Havlicek paced the Celtics with 27, while Tom Sanders and Sam Jones each had 23. The final game will be played in Boston Thursday night.

The Tracks

PORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Whistling Sea, winner of last season's Queen's Plate, made it over the first hurdle on the comeback trail last week with little difficulty, but his next obstacle will be a little tougher.

The black colt, owned by Paul Olivier of Calgary, has been entered in Thursday's featured Fillmore Purse and his opposition couldn't be tougher.

Whistling Sea, trained by Paul Cooper, injured his ankle in a workout April 15 and was retired for the remainder of last season. Last Thursday, Whistling Sea tested his ankle thoroughly and it carried him to an easy victory over Queen's Birthday and Leader Lane at Fort Erie Racetrack.

OPERATE ON BUSTELLO

NEW YORK (AP)—Jess Bustello, New York Rangers' young centre, underwent spinal surgery Tuesday and is not likely to start the 1966-67 National Hockey League season. The operation involved fusion of the lower lumbar vertebrae and the grafting of the hip bone. The normal recuperative period is at least six months.

Portland Victoria For Title

THE CANADIAN PRESS

The top two teams in the Western Hockey League finally run true to form—and then it rounded most — in the final games of the WHL semi-finals.

Portland Buckaroos, who finished first in the regular season play, dumped Vancouver Canucks 7-3 and Victoria Maple Leafs pounded Los Angeles Seals 6-1 in Tuesday night's semi-final games. It was the seventh playoff game in each series.

Victoria and Portland will meet on Maple Leaf Ice Saturday for the opener of the best-of-seven final series.

The Leafs, who finished second in regular league play, got two — goal performances from Fred Hucal and Dick Lamon'reaux, and singles from Milan Marcetta and Gordie Labbe. Seals' playing coach Charlie Burns got his club's only goal in the game at Victoria.

Art Jones and Len Ronson each scored twice for the Bucks, who also got goals from Orest Van Impe, Arnie Schmautz and Cliff Schmautz.

Final series games are scheduled April 30, May 6 and 7 in Victoria; May 2, 3, 9 and 10 in Portland.

AT THE BELLEVILLE DRIVE-IN — The hand of terror stalks its prey! Christopher Lee is haunted by a terrifying hand in the new thriller from Paramount, "Dr. Terror's House of Horrors," which opens tonight at the Belleville Drive-In Theatre. Filmed in blood curdling Technicolor, "Dr. Terror's House of Horrors" also stars Peter Cushing, and co-stars Roy Castle, Donald Sutherland, Michael McCallum and Alan Freeman. 2nd feature attraction, also in color, "She" features Ursula Andress, Peter Cushing and Christopher Lee.

Cowan Only Surviving Canadian

Cowan of Kitchener defeated Roger McManus of Hartville, Ohio, one up.

Cowan and Blair were the only two Canadians to survive the first-round Monday.

CONSIDERS BOUTS

NEW YORK (AP) — Emile Griffith's co-manager said Tuesday the newly crowned middleweight champion will make his first defence against either Joey Archer of New York, Italy's Nino Benvenuti or ex-champion Dick Tiger. The 28-year-old Virgin Island native dethroned Tiger in a close 15-rounder at Madison Square Garden Monday night.

AT THE PARK — Tough and handsome looking Stuart Whitman embraces beautiful Susannah York in Joseph E. Princess Anne Breaks Nose While Hunting

LONDON (Reuters) — Princess Anne, 15, daughter of the Queen, broke her nose when she fell from her horse while hunting near here, it was disclosed today.

The princess tumbled from her horse at a fence at Shotover Park near Oxford Tuesday while with an Oxford University hunt.

The princess is at Sandringham with the Queen but will enter a nursing home for treatment at some convenient time, a Buckingham Palace spokesman said.

She is due to go back to school for the start of the summer term next week.

About 16 months ago Princess Anne cracked a finger bone in a riding accident.

Makes Restoring Old House Private Centennial Project

BRIGHTON — The private centennial project adopted by a well-known provincial official serves a two-fold purpose. The undertaking by the time it is completed will cost upwards of $8,000.

Canada's 100th birthday in 1967 means more than some thing special for Justice of the Peace Sam Netley, planning for a wedding in the family next year.

But let Mr. Netley tell the story.

"Our youngest son Richard is getting married next year," he began. "The date has been set for July 1 corresponding with the day back in 1867 when Canada was joined together. Naturally, Rick and his bride need a place to settle in the village.

"Earlier I had been considering the W. N. Davidson house at 28 Sandford Street as an appropriate centennial undertaking. A friend told me it had been built about the time of Confederation. A check at the Colborne registry office verified his belief. It was erected, according to the original deed, in 1867. The idea took on a whole new concept, however, when the announcement of the wedding came along."

MANY REPAIRS

Examination revealed the old house was structurally sound but in a poor state of repair. When it is finally restored it will be a combination of 19th and 20th century construction.

Mr. Netley, one of the first JP's to receive his Ontario appointment on authority from Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth following her coronation, decided the exterior decor would be in traditional British colors. The new roof is red shingles, the house itself will be painted white and trimmed with blue.

Tradesmen restoring the stately residence have transformed the spacious music room on the first floor into a modern kitchen. A bathroom, installed upstairs in later years, will be appointed with the newest colored fixtures.

The frame of the house is solid 8 by 8 pine timbers while the studs are 3 by 6's nine on 16-inch centres. The sheeting is 12-inch pine lumber, 1¼ inches thick, secured by hand-made square nails known as cut nails in those days.

A daughter of the original owner, Miss Isabel Davidson, is living at a local rest home. She was the village music teacher for years. Her class records, found by workmen in the old house, contain the names of the children of prominent village families, many of them moved to other parts and died in the meantime.

BEEN BITTEN BY THE TRAVEL BUGYET?

This summer it's harder than ever to put off that trip to Europe. You have a choice of a record number of 29 transatlantic jet flights from Toronto every week. Jet direct to London by magnificent BOAC Rolls-Royce 707 or Air Canada giant DC-8 jet. And it's cheaper, too! There are new low transatlantic fares in effect right now. (Example: A 21-day Economy Excursion Toronto-Zurich will cost you only $412 return — a saving of nearly $22.00). Let the Travel Bug bite you. See Europe this summer. But first . . . see your Travel Agent.

Rylstone

RYLSTONE — Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Duncan, a newly married couple from Hamilton, paid a short visit to their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Keown and Paul, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brown of Marmora, have purchased the farm home of the late Albert Reid and Mrs. Reid, on the tenth concession. They are their family are busy getting settled in their new home.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas [illegible] man and family, of Ames were recent guests of his sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. John Spencer. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harper Bateman of Springbrook were also guests of the Spencer family.

Fred Spencer, Toronto, Marilyn and Glen Stewart and Jimmie Gray, all of Peterborough spent the weekend at the home here. Marilyn drove to Kingston, Sunday evening where her friend, Margaret Mulherin, to visit Margaret's mother, Mrs. John Muldowney, in Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Hubbard, of Napanee, were recent guests of their niece and nephew, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Spencer and family, and called on other relatives here.

Mrs. Essie Reid and her brother, William Moorton, visited their sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Anderson at Burnbrae.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Spencer and Sherry were guests of their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Lounsbury, in Peterborough on Sunday, and attended the christening of their granddaughter Vicki-Ann Lounsbury.

Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson and Cherene of Toronto were recent guests of her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spencer and family.

Kathy, Karen and Stephen Thomson were guests of their cousins, Beth, Scott and Jeffrey Anderson, for Beth's tenth birthday on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hyde and Carol attended the Mr. and Mrs. Jones wedding in St. Mary's on the Hill Anglican Church in Belleville on Saturday. Carol was a bridesmaid.

Reed Morton spent a few days of his Easter vacation with his cousins, Helen-Ann and Larry Thompson at Springbrook.

Scoharie

SCOHARIE — Mr. and Mrs. Carl Payne and Mr. and Mrs. David White and Robin of Elmira spent the Easter weekend with Mrs. Bea Payne. Mrs. Payne was able to be home from Rest Haven for Easter Sunday.

Mrs. Payne is a patient in Prince Edward County Memorial.

Mrs. Blaine Foster, Darlene and Carol spent several days last week with Dr. and Mrs. Charles McWilliams of Prescott.

Larry Ruff of Toronto spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Ruff.

Mrs. J. Lovelace, Mrs. Ila Foster and Mrs. Perry Bateman attended the Auxiliary of Prince Edward County Hospital on Tuesday afternoon.

AUDITORS DEMAND 18,000 REDUCTION IN DAVID'S INVENTORY By No Later Than APRIL 30th

At last week's meeting of the board of directors the company auditors submitted a report revealing a $18,000 surplus inventory. Any other time in the year this $18,000 surplus would be overlooked BUT with David's fiscal business year ending April 30th. the situation is serious. The auditors have demanded we clear off this $18,000. surplus by the 30th. at any cost in order to balance inventory records and to keep current with obligations.

North American Bridge Team Includes Two Toronto Men

By JIM ANDERSON

TORONTO (CP) — An oddly matched pair of Toronto bridge players goes to St. Vincent, Italy, shortly to play for a share of the bridge world's top trophy.

Sammy Kehela, 31, and Eric Murray, 37, admit it was an upset if the six - man North American team manages to wrest the Bermuda Bowl from the Italian team that has won it seven times in a row.

But both feel this year's team is the strongest North America has ever sent to the world championship.

"We've played the Italians before and we're not intimidated," says Kehela.

Murray says the American team is better on defence and expects to win.

Five six-man teams—the defending champions from Italy plus a team from each of the World Bridge Federation's four zones—will play in the tournament April 26 to May 8.

Murray and Kehela have been playing together since 1959 and their Toronto team has won the North American championship two years running. They make an unnerving combination at the bridge table.

Kehela, short, dark, slightly pudgy and a bit lazy, gives an impression of sleepy contentment with his bridge accuracy.

Murray is fair, built like a football player, puffs enormous cigars and admits he doesn't mind at all if his clouds of smoke bother his opponents. A lawyer by trade, he says he has many hobbies," he brings the tools of a courtroom tactician to the bridge table.

"Eric has a bustling kind of game," says Kehela. "He makes more mistakes than I do, but tends to gum up the works and induce opponents to make errors "

Murray says Kehela is the "intuit" player of the partnership and works out most of their theory.

"I like to stir things up a bit, produce a bit of action and play a bit of poker in the middle of the bridge game.

"I play the table. Sammy plays the percentages."

Murray, with another partner, was the first Canadian to play in the Bermuda Bowl—in 1962 when the American team finished second. Kehela has been in the Bowl three times as a non-playing coach to advise the American team on the intricacies of the Italian bidding system.

FRED HOMELAND

Homeland, a barrister, was born in Baghdad. His Jewish family fled to India in 1941 after a narrow escape from a pogrom during a German-inspired anti-Semitic revolution.

He first played bridge at the University of California, Berkeley, and started playing seriously in London after dropping out of university because of poor health.

He found he could make a living teaching and playing and after two years in London came to Toronto.

He now teaches only a bit, conducts tournaments and writes for bridge magazines. He once played every day but now only a couple of times a week. He spends two or three months a year outside Canada at tournaments.

Bridge for Kehela is a "fascinating game, something he does quite well and which provides him with "quite an easy way of life."

Murray became a bridge player at McMaster University in his home town, Hamilton. He says bridge is "the best game ever devised" but is also an enthusiast for a flock of other sports and hobbies. He is a hockey and football fan, plays tennis, squash and badminton, fishes, skindives, collects stamps and breeds tropical fish.

He was laid up recently with a slipped disc and it may bother him during the tournament.

His wife is also a lawyer and they have two young sons.

The pair bids what they call Colonial Acol, meaning a compromise between the flexible English system named after London's famous Acol bridge club and the North American insistence which they consider "too hidebound" and rigid.

They don't believe there is any one "right" way to bid a hand. Murray says he might bid the same hand five different ways, depending on his opponents and the mood of the table.

The North American team was selected in San Francisco last November when 18 of the continent's top pairs played off for six days. Kehela and Murray finished third.

Philip Feldesman of New York and Ira Rubin of New Jersey were first. Lew Mathe and Robert Hamman of California were second. Venezuela will represent South America,

The Netherlands Europe and Thailand the Far East.

A non-playing captain, Julius Rosenblum of New Orleans, will decide in St. Vincent how much action each pair sees. Each team has a 140 - hand match against every other team and one pair sits out each match. It can mean up to nine hours a day of bridge for 13 playing days.

GODALMING, England (CP) Norman Lee, former army bomb disposal experts when he found what looked like a few live mortar bombs in his Surrey garden. The crew found more than 800 shells had lain behind the house since the end of World War.

Water Struck Back

SOUTHPORT, England (CP) John Riding sailed across the Atlantic last year in a 12-foot yacht, the Sea Egg, without mishap. But he tipped in five inches of water in his bathtub at home and broke an arm.

Let's Get It Straight

MANCHESTER, England (CP)—A British officer never lies to his commander, not even on television. Defence ministry officials asked the producers of a play to emphasize that the lying incident in the plot was fictitious.

Birds Are Theft-Proof

BRAUNSTONE, England (CP)—Someone stole a flock of 28 racing pigeons from George Penn's Leicestershire pigeon loft, but he's not worried. "I'm known to the police as owner of them, and they'll return home," he said.

Cycles In Church

LONDON (CP)—The roar of high - powered motorcycles echoed through Westminster Cathedral, Britain's premier Roman Catholic church, as two leather - clad "rockers" performed in a modern passion play. Cardinal John Heenan will close the play This Is For Now for performance before 2,000 guests, including the Anglican bishops of London and Southwark.

Children Explore Wood

SHERRINGHAM, England (CP)—The Queen has leased part of her Norfolk estate, Dersingham primary school, to use as an "adventure playground." The rent is one shilling (13 cents) a year.

Convicts Attend Abbey

LONDON (CP)—There was no sign that history was being made in Westminster Abbey, except for four prison trucks and extra police on patrol outside. Inside, 30 convicts from London prisons were attending a special service with the judges, lawyers and policemen who put them in prison.

Improve Church Music

Winds Turn Erie Flow, Flooding Lakeside Area

WHEATLEY, Ont. (CP)—Residents of southwestern Ontario breathed a sigh of relief today as winds died down after reversing the flow of Lake Erie Wednesday and threatening hundreds of homes and cottages along both the Canadian and United States shores.

This area was the hardest hit, with 75 persons forced to evacuate their houses. One summer cottage and a boathouse collapsed before the force of 60-mile-an-hour winds.

Police began to evacuate the area about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday as 10-foot waves swept over the shoreline and threatened homes.

About 20 boats were battered about in Wheatley harbor where waves were four feet high. The Erieau Packers office was flooded.

One of the last residents to leave the lakeside area was Mrs. Pearl Henry, 61, who spent the day mopping four inches of water from her cottage floor. The Detroit woman finally left at 6 p.m. to spend the night with friends.

Lakes and river levels began to recede early today in the Windsor area, where 24 hours of rain and high winds had flooded basements, cut communications and played havoc with summer homes.

In the Detroit River, where U.S. Coast Guard stations reported the water level was 60 inches above normal, an international appeal was broadcast to all vessels to travel slowly in an effort to reduce waves.

At LaSalle, near Windsor, river water rose to within inches of the town's main approach bridge, but traffic was not impeded.

The storm across Lake Erie forced a dozen freighters to seek shelter at Point Pelee National Park, near Leamington. Damage was estimated as high as $20,000 along the east beach of Mersea Township outside Leamington.

Henry van Damme, a resident of the Leamington area who saw a workboy and the 37 - foot cabin cruiser it contained destroyed, said he plans to sue the government for damages.

Freezing rain and snow struck the Toronto - Hamilton area. Salting crews were called out and police motorcycle patrols were taken off highways.

Hamilton, hardest hit by the freezing rain, reported one-quarter inch of sleet on streets.

The rain and snow moved northward today and winds were gradually decreasing.

There were no injuries reported as a direct result of the House Hears Appeals

By DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP)—Quebec and Maritimes MPs put their best logic forward Wednesday for the Commons record that will be sent to nine of Canada's 10 independent commissions on electoral redistribution.

The House heard 14 appeals against changes proposed for the names and boundaries of ridings in Quebec, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia.

It was a quiet start on a matter vital to almost all MPs—scores of whom are challenging the riding changes.

The record of their arguments will be sent back to the commissions after the close of the redistribution debate next Wednesday.

If the arguments convince the commissioners — who include magistrates, judges, provincial electoral officers and university presidents and professors—they may make some final revisions. But they are under no obligation to do so.

At the next federal election, their redistribution will determine the 264 ridings up for grabs—one seat less than the present

It is expected to clean up [illegible] times quickly [illegible] New Brunswick [illegible] Newfoundland MPs are [illegible] making any objections.

ATLANTA NEXT

Vigorous protests from Alberta MPs come next, with the promise of a first-class scrap. Ontario is expected to follow Friday.

The 10 Quebec objections Wednesday related to individual constituencies and dwelt mainly on name changes The whole redistribution is based on the province's 75 constituencies drawn up later, when MPs can tackle the new boundaries.

Gerard Duquet (L — Quebec East), in a 30 - minute speech, said a proposed conversion of Quebec East into the riding of Rimouski would create a name dating back to 1830 and carried into the House by Quebec premiers ministers Wilfrid Laurier and Louis St. Laurent.

Mr. Duquet read a letter from Mr. St. Laurent, now 84, expressing hope that the original name will be retained.

Prince Edward Island's four Conservative MPs deplored the changes proposed in boundary lines almost unaltered in this century.

J. Angus MacLean, former fisheries minister, opposed division of the two-seat riding of Queens and replacement of the present names—Kings, Prince and Queens—by the suggested new names of Egmont, Millsborough and Malpeque.

Both Island and Nova Scotia MPs said the commission had given little thought to "community of interest" factors in slicing up existing ridings.

PROTEST BAN

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Teachers Federation has protested in a letter to Education Minister Davis a provision in a Metropolitan Toronto bill that would bar teachers and board of education employees for serving as trustees in the same municipality.

Lived in Same House Suspected as Soviet Spy Centre by RCMP

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Montreal apartment building where Gerda Munsinger lived also housed premises suspected by the RCMP as a Soviet spy centre and visited by known Russian agents, a royal commission was told Wednesday.

Former RCMP commissioner C. W. Harvison testified the building was kept under surveillance for purposes other than the RCMP's surveillance of Mrs. Munsinger during her final months in Canada.

He said there is no evidence she engaged in espionage operations while in Canada from 1955 until 1961. And there was no evidence of any breach of national security as a result of her relationship with Pierre Sevigny or any other member of the government.

Mr. Sevigny was Conservative associate defence minister from 1959 until 1963. An RCMP report placed before the royal commission inquiry said Mrs. Munsinger was Mr. Sevigny's mistress.

The commission also has been told other reports described her as a petty thief, prostitute and self-admitted Soviet Agent before coming to this country.

HOUSED RED MISSION

Sources outside the commission have said that a Russian trade mission occupied space in the building where Mrs. Munsinger lived.

Mr. Harvison said the RCMP had no evidence that Mrs. Munsinger lived to get any security information from anyone while in Canada.

The commission resumes hearings today with RCMP Commissioner George B. McClellan scheduled as the witness.

Conservative counsel C. F. H. Carson questioned Mr. Harvison about surveillance reports in the RCMP's Monsinger file. The witness said he hadn't acknowledged they showed Mrs. Munsinger was kept under close surveillance from Nov. 9, 1960, until at least Jan. 18, 1961.

He agreed that they also included statements made Jan. 18, 1961, by the officer in charge, identified only as Milligan, that it was apparent Mrs. Munsinger was not engaged in intelligence operations and therefore was of no further interest to RCMP intelligence.

And on Jan. 24 the same officer had suggested the Munsinger case be transferred to the criminal investigation branch in connection with smuggling. There was no elaboration on this point.

Mr. Carson said a "yellow sheet" dated Nov. 22, 1965, apparently is the assistant director of RCMP security and intelligence, suggested "less embarrassment" would be caused if the case was taken up verbally with the "hierarchy of government."

Mr. Harvison said his view

Wilson's Envoy Off to Rhodesia

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson's special envoy, Oliver Wright, flew home from Africa today with the groundwork laid for talks aimed at ending the Rhodesian crisis.

Meanwhile, another British troubleshooter, Malcolm Macdonald, prepared to leave on a mission to persuade the political leaders of black Africa that the coming talks with the rebel regime of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith will not constitute a British sellout to Rhodesian white supremacists.

Wright arranged the Angola-Ilone in secret contacts with Smith and with Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd of South Africa.

It was the first breakthrough toward a Rhodesian settlement since Smith's white - minority government declared independence from Britain last Nov. 11.

In his talks with Smith, Wright produced agreement on the time, place and level of informal bargainings designed to achieve a basis for constitutional settlement.

The British demand that a settlement provide unimpeded progress toward eventual majority rule by Rhodesia's 4,000,000 Negroes.

In return, Britain is prepared to underwrite and defend the rights of Rhodesia's 220,000 whites and pay for a crash program ot Negro education.

British sanctions against Rhodesia will continue until a constitutional settlement is reached.

Demands by Que. Labor Leaders Appear Subsided

WINNIPEG (CP) — Demands by Quebec labor leaders for "associate state" status within the Canadian Labor Congress appeared to be put aside Wednesday after the CLC convention voted to establish a special inquiry into its own structure.

Labor leaders fearful of a blowup over bilingualism and biculturalism said they were confident the crisis had passed.

A host of constitutional proposals were swept off the convention floor by unanimous agreement and referred to the inquiry commission which is to report to the 1968 convention in Montreal.

One resolution that might have sparked a French-English feud was voted down without a single speaker. It called for automatic guarantees of a French-speaking member of the executive council.

That left only one potentially explosive topic on the agenda, the application of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada to rejoin the 1,236,000-member labor body.

The SIU issue was due to hit the floor today, most likely with a compromise resolution indirectly empowering the 31-member executive council to make the final decision.

During the week four separate pamphlets attacking the SIU as unfit for congress membership have been distributed at the convention by members of the rival Canadian Maritime Union. Anti - SIU forces have vowed to fight any proposal that does not involve a flat rejection of the Seafarers.

SIU President Leonard (Red) McLaughlin has been in the city since Saturday and says he is confident his 8,500 members will be taken back into the labor body. He has not attended the convention itself.

Further decisions reached at Wednesday's session was to hold future conventions in May. An Irish snowstorm struck Winnipeg in the morning, snarling traffic and delaying the opening of the day's proceedings.

Girl Wanted to Visit England And Chose Submarine for Ship

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — The British submarine Walrus continued its journey home today after dropping off a stowaway who said she wanted to visit England because she liked English boys.

And the girl, Barbara McVay, 17, of Baltimore, is back with her mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Evans.

The Walrus and two more British subs were docked in Baltimore since last Thursday, following NATO manoeuvres.

When the Walrus left for home Wednesday, Barbara was hiding in the conning tower.

But after for hours, exhaust fumes from the sub's engine sickened her and she turned herself in.

"It's a good thing she got sick," a police detective said later. He said the compartment where she hid would have filled with water if the sub had submerged.

When she did come out of hiding, the sub radioed the British embassy and was ordered to get the girl back to land immediately.

An army patrol boat met the sub in the Delaware Canal. Barbara was placed in the Wilmington detention home until her parents arrived several hours later.

"I wanted to go to England," she said, "I like English boys."

She also said she wanted to visit her father, later identified as Tech. Sgt. V. E. McVay, stationed in the British Isles with the U.S. Air Force.

Capt. Douglas M. H. Stobie, a member of the naval attache's staff at the British embassy, told a reporter a full investigation would be made to determine if any crew member had helped her.

Income Tax Money Pouring In

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Cheques and money orders amounting to $20,000,000 a day or more are pouring into the revenue department here as next March's personal income tax deadline approaches, but an individual taxpayer's return is in the final analysis an invitation spot on a roll of computer tape.

The revenue department's taxation data centre has hired 2,000 part-time workers to handle the spring rush of tax returns from some 6,800,000 Canadians. About 3,100,000 had been received by Monday with just of arbitration," Mr. Lieberman a week to go before the deadline.

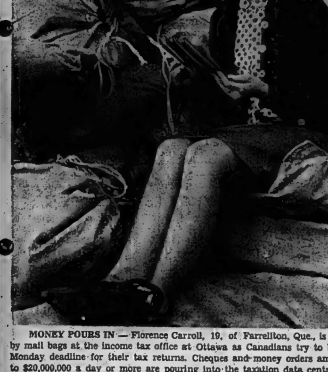
Leiterman Urges Producers Accept Pearson's Offer

TORONTO (CP) — Douglas Leiterman, executive producer of This Hour Has Seven Days, urged the Toronto Producers' Association Wednesday night to accept an offer from Prime Minister Pearson to avert a threatened strike Sunday against the CBC.

The producers issued an ultimatum Tuesday, threatening to strike at 10 p.m. EDT Sunday unless CBC President Alphonse Ouimet accepts a three-point proposal seeking arbitration in disputes and consultation in production decisions.

"A necessary condition will be acceptance by management said Wednesday night. "And the association can only accept if it includes the removal of the case of Watson and LaPierre."



Mr. Ouimet Tuesday rejected a request from the producers' association to re-open the case of Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre, dismissed co-hosts of Seven Days.

OTTAWA (CP)—The threatened strike of CBC producers brought reaction Wednesday from the Commons and CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet.

The Commons broadcasting committee suggested the House take up Prime Minister Pearson's offer to use federal officers in an attempt to avert the threatened Sunday night walkout. Mr. Pearson made the offer earlier in the Commons.

Meanwhile, Mr. Ouimet told broadcast on closed-circuit radio line to CBC employees across Canada, giving management's side in the controversial firing of the co-hosts of the program This Hour Has Seven Days.

Mr. Ouimet told employees the decisions regarding Seven Days were final. The program would be back next year, but with new hosts. The present staff on the program operated under different concepts of ethics and managerial responsibility, he added.

Complete Plans to Observe Mental Health Week Here

"Final plans have now been completed for Mental Health Week, May 1 to 7," stated Rev. Norman Anderson addressing the regular board meeting of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association. Each morning from May 2 to 6 a board member will be the featured guest in Lee Jonard on the CJBQ program "Conversation". On Wednesday, May 4, Mr. Gale and Shooter, psychologist from St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, will spend the day in Belleville speaking in turn to students at Moira Secondary School, the student nurses at Belleville General Hospital, an afternoon seminar of the Community Services Association and an evening open meeting at Education Hall.

On Thursday afternoon and evening May 5 an open house will be held at Ontario Hospital, Kingston, and selected students from the local high schools will be taken on this tour. On Saturday afternoon a tea entertained by the local interested citizens for a "spring tea" at the Ontario Hospital. That evening's program of movies and discussion will be held at the Public Library auditorium.

Mrs. Swan Sino brought to the board the thanks of the Primary Teachers' Association for bringing Miss Elinor Gullette, a general consultant with the Toronto school system, to address its April meeting.

Mrs. Sino also reported that she and Mrs. Leslie Hurst had travelled to Toronto recently and met with Mrs. E. G. Hustlip and Mrs. D. Taylor regarding the possibility of providing a volunteer visiting service to former Ontario Hospital patients now in Prince Edward County and the surrounding homes. The idea was well received and there is hope that a Picton group may form a sub-committee of the "homes for special care committee".

REMEMBERING CROWN

Mr. Charles Lendy, treasurer, reported that memberships continue to come in through solicitation and the bulletin announcements. He also noted that a number district groups, including service clubs, labor councils and women's organizations, had responded to the branch's appeal for financial assistance in meeting its obligation to pay the rental of the Mental Health Clinic premises at 150 Albert Street.

Mrs. Mary Fletcher noted that the hospital visiting committee was continuing to provide monthly programs for the patients at Mowat division of the Ontario Hospital. The Christmas tea which goes to Kingston each month also makes it possible for friends to remember the patients at the hospital. Mrs. Fletcher was selected as the board representative to attend a May 9 luncheon at the Ontario Hospital being held in honor of the hospital volunteers.

The education committee has organized a workshop for district police officers to be held on May 5 at the Belleville police station. Dr. E. R. Coon, director of the Mental Health Clinic, will be conducting the workshop and leading discussion for the police whose work frequently brings them in contact with people suffering from mental and emotional disorders. It is hoped the workshop will engender a greater degree of understanding as well as giving the officers some practical help in coping with these problems.

Sunday 28th — Completed the Return of Survey. River Moira. 28th. April 1816. (signed) Sam G. Wilmot, Dy Surveyor.

Note: (By Tom Ransom O.L.S., president, Hastings County Historical Society) Beneath his signature Wilmot executed a careful flourish, very likely with a sigh of relief, for his work had been plagued with frost, flood, storms, and the angry protests of disturbed settlers.

This entry concludes the Diary of the Survey of Belleville in 1816, and thanks are due to the Intelligencer for continuing interest in Belleville's history.

The following sources should be consulted for further details: City of Belleville History by W. C. Mickel, 1942; Moira Valley Conservation Report first edition, mimeographed, which contains much valuable information not included in the later printed edition; abstract books, deeds and early plans in the Hastings County Registry Office, County Court House; plans, field notes, letters and reports in the Department of Lands and Forests, Survey Branch, and the Public Records and Archives of Ontario; Toronto; Crown Grants in the Department of the Provincial Secretary, Toronto; Land Petitions for Belleville in the Public Archives of Canada, Ottawa.

Belleville Man Gets 15 Years For Robbery

L'ORIGNAL, Ont. (CP) — George Watson, 36, formerly of Toronto, and Richard Frank Latin, 31, of Belleville, were sentenced to 15 years each in jail years each in Kingston penitentiary following convictions on charges of armed robbery.

The pair were tried for the $13,213 armed robbery of the Royal Bank of Canada at Hawkestone, Ont., last November. A third man in the holdup died of bullet wounds following a gun battle with police at the scene.

The money was recovered a few miles from the bank.

Red Shield Appeal Opens Next Monday

Salvation Army workers are described as "Servants of All". Much of their work is done in slum areas, back alleys, on battlefields, on street corners, in homes. They meet the need, all point of need, at the time of need.

The Army helps the alcoholic and, said now, the unwed mother, the prisoner on parole, the old and the aged, the transient and the unwanted.

Some of the work is done through summer camps for youth, club rooms and canteens for personnel of the armed forces, missing persons bureaus, hospitals, disaster relief, food and fire victims, Christmas remembrances for shut-ins and in many other ways.

Monday, May 2, the Salvation Army's annual Red Shield Appeal opens. The objective for Belleville is $10,800. The same objective was reached last year. A ready response to the appeal is expected again this year. Col. Angus Duffy is the campaign chairman.

Fire Rages Through Marsh East of City

Reports of strange lights in the sky have been in the news lately. Last night Belleville residents observed a glow in the sky in the city's east end.

The glow was caused by a fire that raged through the marsh area near Front Road. Belleville Fire Department, responding to the call at 10:15 p.m., stayed with scene of the blaze for about 90 minutes. The fire was allowed to burn itself out but Fire Chief T. E. Poote explained that firemen stood by "to be on the safe side." Cause of the fire has not been determined.

At 9:47 last night, the department answered a call to 59 Coleman Road where [illegible] Sprinkler was giving [illegible] alarm.

Ireland's Co-operate in Open House

One of the leading builders in the area — Don Keilar Construction is holding "open house" at a model home this Saturday, Sunday, Wednesday and also the following weekend. Keilar's house is in Ponton Park — west on Dundas Street near Selma Avenue.

In cooperation with this builder, Jack Ireland is displaying in this house modern, 1966 general electric appliances. Also, the most up-to-date furniture available has been specially ordered for this showing.

The big news is that all of this brand new equipment may be purchased right at the display on a "cost-plus" basis. During this showing you can buy any of the items at prices never before even considered possible — and which will go back to normal after the open house.

Don't miss seeing this outstanding home and take advantage of the outstanding specials on top of the line appliances, television, stereo and furniture.

Schools Should Be Used As Recreation Centres Says Ont. Family Court Judge

TRENTON — An Ontario family court, Judge W. T. Little of Toronto, told a well attended public meeting at the community gardens last night that community schools "owned by the public" should be used as recreation centres after school and on weekends.

Judge Little, who is also a member of the Select Committee on Youth for Ontario, defended today's youth, which, he said, "is good in a magnificent sense) as youth in their parents' day, if not better. The incidence of delinquency is low, when the entire youth body is considered. Judge Little said, but adults tend to judge all youth on the indiscretions of the few.

"I doubt if we adults would come out too well if our entire adult population was judged on the basis of isolated cases."

Judge Little said youth was often bored because "there was nothing to do" and added parents often lead lonely lives for the same reason.

If schools were made the hub of the community, youth and oldsters alike would benefit, he said. Such classes as parent education held in the schools would also lead to better understanding between the generations.

Judge Little was one of four persons versed in social services who spoke at the Trenton and Community Assistance Association and interested members of the public at last night's meeting.

H. H. Dymond, executive secretary of Ontario Children's Aid Societies, said there was a great need for personnel to carry out CAS programs and child welfare services in the province. He said there is also an preventive measures to deal with problems on the family level, instead of neglect or maltreatment of children occur.

Dr. M. D. Mulligan, assistant medical officer of health from Kingston, outlined public health services which would be needed in the new the size of Trenton. She said the present units were being recognized in the means of providing adequate staff over the widest possible areas.

Father Gaughan of the Family Counselling Service, Peterborough, told how workers trained in dealing with family problems on all age levels could help husbands and wives to carry on in the face of odds. Economic problems, budgeting and alcoholism were high on the list of family problems, he said.

At last night's meeting, prepared questionnaire was handed out to those attending in preparation for next month's Better Living Survey to be conducted by the canvassers from the community assistance association. Trenton's 4,000 homes will be covered in the survey.

Mrs. R. H. Smitharin, chairman of the Better Living Survey Committee, said that leaders of the association had had exploring needs of large segments of Trenton's population because of their attention while they were operating a used clothing depot. Ontario Child Welfare Council would assist in analyzing the results of the survey.

Trevor Peirce, executive director of the Children's Welfare Council commended the association members for their interest in community welfare and promised assistance in every way possible.

(The used clothing depot will be moved from Quinte Street to a house on Front Street, one block north of the new post office, May 10.)

CYCLIST BRUISED

TRENTON — A 16-year-old Trenton youth, James Hood, was treated in Trenton Memorial Hospital shortly after 8 a.m. today for bruises suffered when his motor bike collided with the back of a car driven by Wilfred Mennings of 172 Queen Street. The road-hour accident occurred on Gilmour Hill in east Trenton.

FIGHT GRASS FIRE

TRENTON — Trenton firemen were called out yesterday afternoon to a large grass fire in Cronk's field at the north end of Flindall Street. Men with pump packs on their backs and brooms combined the fire, which threatened houses in the area owing to a high wind.

Rotary Club's Careers Night Attracts Many

TRENTON — Judging from the response to last night's boys' careers counselling night at the high school, Rotarian Howard Hallick said today, youth is seriously concerned about the future. Mr. Hallick said that some of the 200 youth men who sought advice regarding a career were long hair and high heeled boots, but that they were just as interested in the various fields of employment covered by expert-advisors as any of the others.

High on the list of interest was a booth set up by the Dept. of Labor where a man from the apprentice branch was on hand from the industrial trades' branch gave advice.

The evening was sponsored by the Trenton Rotary Club and Rotarians were among those advising the young men. Some of whom were high school students in the area and others who were just interested.

Director of Chamber Donates Fish Trophy

TRENTON — The Trenton Chamber of Commerce will donate a trophy for first prize in the pickerel class for the Quinte Lodge's fishing contest to be held May 7 and May 8. Proceeds are to go to the United Service Clubs' swimming pool project.

The trophy has been donated by Donald McPherson, a chamber director. The winner will be given a replica of the cup, to donated by Mrs. Garfield and a prize from Trenton Legion Branch 110.

Second and third prizes will be given for pickerel and first, second and third prizes for pike, as well as consolation prizes.

The contest will be held from 12 midnight on May 7 to 8 p.m. Sunday, May 8, and fishing may be done in any area. Prizes will be given out at the Legion Hall, Monday, May 9, at 8 p.m.

Registration fee is $1.

Says School Place For Swimming Pool

TRENTON — The United Service Clubs' swimming pool project got an unexpected (and unsolicited) "shot in the arm" from a family court judge, Judge W. T. Little of Toronto, last night, when the judge told those attending the Better Living Survey public meeting that the school was the place for recreational facilities, such as a swimming pool.

NOMINATE LESAGE

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage was nominated Wednesday night to contest the new riding of Louis Hebert for the Liberals in the June 5 provincial election. Mr. Lesage told the meeting in the suburb of Ste. Foy he would concentrate on villages a new highway across the St. Lawrence River between Lauzon, Que., 13 miles east of here, and Lauzon, Que., on the south shore of the river. The $48,000,000 project would include a four-lane causeway from Villeneuve to Ile d'Orleans and a tunnel under the river from the island to Lauzon.

Clinton Gray Of Marmora Dies in Fire

MARMORA — A 30-year-old bachelor died this morning in his smoke filled trailer on North Main Street. Dead is Clinton Gray, who had lived in the trailer for the past year.

The victim is believed to have suffocated as the result of a smoky blaze that smouldered in the bed and bedding. It is thought the fire has been caused by careless smoking.

Fire damage was confined to the bed and bedding. It is thought the fire smothered itself.

Marmora Volunteer Fire Department was alerted by neighbors who saw smoke curling out of the trailer about 7 o'clock this morning. Chief Neal and firemen Maurice Lynch recovered the body from the trailer. Coroner Dr. H. G. Parkin pronounced the man dead at the scene.

Third Train Wreck Within Week Reported

CALCUTTA, India (CP) — The third train wreck within a week in Naga tribal territory of Assam State and a new report by Miss tribesmen against Indian government forces in northern Assam were reported Wednesday night.

A freight train in the Tinsukia-Margherita area went off the rails Wednesday. No casualties were reported. There was no information on the cause.

Three trains have been blown up in the area within two months, with a death toll of 130.

A leader of the Naga independence movement denied Wednesday that his people are involved in train sabotage, as suspected by Indian officials.

To the south, Mizo rebels exchanged rifle fire for two hours with Indian troops near the town of Aijal Monday night, official Assam sources reported. There were no reported casualties and the rebels finally fled.

Moira Student to Attend Seminar on Mathematics

The Bay of Quinte District High School Board will pay out of pocket expenses for a 18-year-old Moira Secondary School student while he attends a mathematics seminar at the University of Waterloo next month.

James Maybee Grade 11 student at the Belleville school, placed well in a province-wide mathematics contest sponsored by the university and has been invited to attend a one week's seminar in Waterloo during the latter part of June.

Last night at their April meeting, members of the school board voted to pay the student's cost of pocket expenses while attending the seminar.

The monthly board meeting was held a week late owing to the time a week ago being taken up by the report of high school inspectors.

Last night, board member Gordon Lee was named finance committe chairman to take the place of Norman Moore who has retired from the board.

NEED TWO TEACHERS

All but two of the complement of 180 high school teachers required by the board for the opening of the September school term have now been hired. The now - building Centennial Secondary School is expected to be ready for opening it and 10 students by next September, but when the school is fully completed a total of just under 200 teachers will be required for the four secondary schools.

Salaries for school janitors and school office assistants have been revised by the board.

The new schedule for caretakers will range from a minimum of $3,000 to $4,200 (up $450 and $200 respectively) and for head caretakers from $4,500 to $5,200.

The new schedule for office assistants calls for a $60 annual increase, while extra operators pay will range between $1,900 and $2,600.

Milton Robson, now chief caretaker at Moira Secondary School, will become the chief caretaker at Centennial Secondary School when it is opened in September, while at the same time Francis Trumble will become chief caretaker at the Moira school.

The board agreed to increased group insurance for all male employees of the board, the amount of the increase being on a sliding scale but roughly 50 per cent. The board pays half of the cost of the term insurance.

Also approved was a system of sabbatical leave to allow teachers time off for approved related studies. Approval in each specific case must be given by the board.

Mayor Speaks On Manager Form of Govt.

The operation of Belleville's city manager form of municipal government was explained to CKWS-TV viewers last night by Mayor J. R. Ellis.

The Belleville mayor was being interviewed on the 7.45 p.m. Comment program by station news director Floyd Patterson.

Mayor Ellis described the local city manager form of government which operates without many of the usual standing committees as being a fine success. Quarterly reports by the city manager, kept council informed of all city operations and also how expenditures compared with budget estimates.

was that the affair should be brought to the government's attention verbally and then confirmed in writing.

He said that as far as could be ascertained there was no further association between Mr. Sevigny and Mrs. Munsinger after he first reported the affair Dec. 7, 1960, to then Justice minister Fulton.

He had reported to Mr. Fulton verbally, showing him parts of the Munsinger file which he carried with him. He wouldn't challenge the statement that Mr. Fulton had asked for a written brief about the file but couldn't recall whether the one made had been ordered by Mr. Fulton or him.

When he called again Dec. 12 or 13 to get back to this written report, he had the distinct impression Mr. Fulton had seen then prime minister Diefenbaker about the case.

He said he could not recall any conversation that day in which Mr. Fulton told him the Sevigny - Munsinger liaison would stop and Mrs. Munsinger would leave the country. Mr. Carson had suggested Mr. Harrison was so advised.

DIDN'T CLOSE FILE

The former commissioner said at another point that he had no instructions from Mr. Diefenbaker, Mr. Fulton or any member of the Conservative government to close the Munsinger file and stop the investigation.

Investigation continued right up to the time he left Canada. Steps were taken at London, where her plane stopped, to stamp her passport so she could never return to Canada.

He was asked whether he could explain how Mrs. Munsinger could come to Canada in 1955 after her application for a visa was refused in 1952.

"I can't tell you that," he replied. Her 1952 application was made under her maiden name Hessler.

Mr. Harrison said it is primarily the responsibility of the immigration department to see that rejected persons don't get into the country under another name. An inquiry had shown thousands had arrived in Canada illegally in those years.

He said that after Mrs. Munsinger left he reported this to Mr. Fulton and considered "this rather wrapped up the matter."

Believe 49 Killed in Plane Crash

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Search planes today sighted the wreckage of an airliner that disappeared Wednesday with 43 passengers and a crew of six in the rugged Andes mountains.

It was not known immediately whether there were any survivors.

Search planes located the smashed four-engine Constellation near Huampara, about 60 miles southeast of Lima.

Rescue parties went to the scene.

The passengers included a Canadian woman, Raya Pearlman, 27, of Ottawa, five Americans, three Germans, two Swiss and one Spaniard, LANSA Airlines said.

The four - engined Lineas Aereas Nacionales (LANSA) Constellation disappeared on a 375-mile flight from Lima to Cuzco.

The Lima airport said the plane radioed a distress call 10 minutes after taking off, and police at Cuzco said they had a report it crashed at Cocloconcha, 170 miles south of Lima.

The airline said the plane carried 43 passengers and a crew of six.

OPENS LIGHT COMEDY

LONDON (Reuters) — William Douglas-Home, playwright brother of Britain's former prime minister, Sir Alec Douglas - Home, Wednesday night opened a new light comedy about an adulterous past surfacing in high diplomatic circles. A Friend Indeed met a friendly reception. Douglas-Home wrote The Reluctant Debutante, a hit on both sides of the Atlantic about 10 years ago.

Senior Life Saver Course At 'Y' Nears Completion

When the Belleville YMCA wraps up its winter program of Senior Life Saver courses later this month, more than 50 candidates will have qualified since the classes were started last September. According to H. A. (Bert) Hall, YMCA general secretary, that record is one of many marks in Canada.

Seven members of the Belleville Fire Department were in the class of city residents who yesterday completed the eight-week course at the YMCA pool. Firemen George Woodhouse, Bob Andrus, Elmer Helm, Fred Ellis, Al Lott, Ron Lloyd and Grant Parks were candidates along with Mike Stalker, Jack McCabe, Terry McCabe, Mrs. Kay Hall and Mrs. Caroline Moynes. Mr. Messner and Mrs. Nancy Jackson were the instructors.

An examination period, lasting about four and one-half hours yesterday signalled the end of the course for the participants. Also taking advantage of the opportunity to take the tests were Albery College students Paul Crittenden and Clark Anderson. Mr. Messacar and George Woodhouse — both qualified senior life savers, were also qualifying. It is necessary for those who successfully complete the course to requalify every five years.

YMCA program secretaries Mildred Gray and Graham Geldart, qualified examiners, put the candidates through their tests, yesterday.

Former Resident Is Seeking Brother

A former resident of Belleville now living in Clacton, Essex, England, is anxious to learn the whereabouts of her brother.

Mrs. C. B. Warner, 17 Trafalgar Road, Clacton hasn't heard from her brother, Gerald McComb, for some time. Mr. McComb lived at 179 Foster Ave. in Belleville at one time and later moved to Kingston.

Mrs. Warner's son, Gerald, is coming to Canada soon. He was three-years-old when the Warners left Belleville and he is looking forward to looking up friends of the family when he arrives here.

CNR Pensioners Enjoy Day of 5-Pin Bowling

The regularly scheduled monthly luncheon of the Canadian National's Rideau Area's Pensioners Association was held yesterday at the Canoe Club's Area, Toronto District. Following the excellent luncheon prepared and served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the club, an abbreviated business session under the chairmanship of President Joe Hunter was conducted.

Following adjournment some 24 Belleville pensioners and an equal number of Toronto-district guests moved to the Belleville Bowl for an afternoon of five-pin bowling, the Toronto district veterans hoping to avenge their defeat upon their Belleville contemporaries as happened a month ago at Karry's Bowling Lanes in Toronto.

They didn't quite make it. The Belleville bowlers, who practise assiduously each Tuesday and Friday afternoon, successfully defended their title, rallying from behind to emerged victorious by a scant margin. The Toronto teams were under the direction of their Recreation Director, Len Palmer, with the president of the Toronto Pensioners, Bob Ralph, assisting. The Belleville Club's recreation director, Bert Marshall Petty, and his assistant, George Clapper, who incidentally arranged this and the previous event in Toronto, directed the efforts of the Belleville district bowlers.

While the aggregate pin fall was in favor of the victory over three games, the high single and high triple went to Toronto. Ted Murphy, a youngster of 73 years — about the average age of all participants, by the way — scored a high single of 331 and a high triple of 893. All together a very good day for Ted, for enroute to Belleville by train Wednesday morning, he caught the ultimate in cribbages, a perfect 29 — five, five, five, jack with the other five turned up. Ted is a charter member of the Toronto Cribbage Club and after 60 years of play this was his first!

Keith Helm, of the C.N. Communications Department, and editor of the C.N. Reporter, the Rideau Area's monthly publication, was on hand with notebook and camera. Of particular interest was the bowling prowess of 93-year-old Bill Means of this city. Bill is an ardent bowler of both five and ten pins, his mastery of the corner pins something to witness.

Art. Pilcherie, manager of the Belleville Bowl, very kindly provided refreshments in the way of coffee and cake for all, and he concluded that the happy afternoon presented Ted Murphy, high single and high triple winner, with a handsome trophy to take back to his Toronto home.

Charles Palmer, Secretary-treasurer of the Toronto Club, expressed the thanks of his group for this afternoon so enjoyably spent under the auspices of the Belleville pensioners and the Belleville Bowl. "May we meet again" he said, "under this good atmosphere of brotherhood and friendship as often as opportunity allows. This has been a wonderful day."

School Centralization

The increasing centralization of the school system — the swallowing up of small township schools, for example, by larger establishments — is the logical outcome of population and community growth and the final death-knell of the era of the "Little Red Schoolhouse."

Progress is progress, and it is an axiom that you cannot stop it. If much that is good, and eloquent of finer things of yore (when to be young meant there was time for all sorts of enchanting activities) and you were not just an embryo cog in the economic machine) have gone by the board, that is one of the prices that have had to be paid.

Centralization certainly has its dangers. The Rev. R. H. James of Oshawa, in a letter published on this page today, deplores the threat it represents to community life — and particularly to the small communities where life may be more meaningful and people cast in nobler mold than they are amid the noise and artificiality of big cities.

In the broader sense, Mr. James views centralization as a negation of the democratic rights of the townships, as one by one their schools face extinction, and the students absorption into the urban authorities.

He fears the impersonality of the "system," and the extinction perhaps of a way of life in which young people were brought up on such theses as Kipling's "Teach us delight in simple things . . . in which that has no bitter springs."

But surely in this march of progress there are also many hopeful and promising trends and developments. Consider the new teaching aids which today are not only speeding up the learning process but rendering it vastly more interesting too.

The delight registered on the faces of some small Ohio tots pictured recently in the course of a Project Discovery session is an example. At Mercer Elementary school in Shaker Heights, Ohio, fourth graders are learning French with the aid of slides and tapes, fifth graders study geography with a color film on Eskimos, and sixth graders see history in a documentary on the American revolution.

Similar teaching aids are now in use everywhere on this continent, but in this Ohio centre it is perhaps more highly developed than in other places. The school uses film strips and books and talking," says a sixth grader. "It's fun for learning now. I come early in the morning just to look at films." And the youngsters may take the films and tapes home with them too.

Would such educational development be possible without centralization and without the concentration of population and tax dollars it affords? This is the crux of the matter, and while it is not the only one engaging it is also true that still greater benefits accrue from continuing along the path of progress.

Baltic Lands

Before the last war Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania were three independent countries situated on the Baltic coast at the northwest extremity of the Soviet Union.

Then the war came and the Nazis invaded. This was the beginning of the end of separate national identity for these three lands. The Nazis were driven out by the Russians and today the Baltic countries are part of the Soviet Union.

True, they preserve a measure of independence so far as their own customs and culture are concerned, but all are now part and parcel of the Communist world whereas before they were independent democratic states.

Today little is heard of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. They are not even on the route of modern jet airliners like Hungary, Czechoslovakia and even Russia.

Thousands fled the Nazi and Soviet occupations, first to other parts of Europe and subsequently to North America. Canada has been among the many former citizens of these interesting countries.

Others went to Australia which has often been the scene of Communist intrigue in the years following the last war. There was the Petrov affair, involving a Soviet diplomat who sought asylum, and his wife who was snatched from the custody of Soviet security men when the plane carrying her back to Russia landed at Darwin.

Now comes word from Sydney that the leader of a Russian parliamentary delegation has been made an unwilling signatory to a petition calling for the abolition of the Communist party in Lithuania. U. I. Paleckis, himself a Lithuanian and leader of the delegation, signed the petition handed him by a 16-year-old girl on the pretext she wanted his autograph.

Paleckis, on discovering the real nature of the document, said former Nazi war criminals living in Sydney were responsible for "this outrage."

He had to say something, but we are more inclined to accept the explanation of the girl who got the signature. She said the document was a petition calling for "Lithuania free from Russians," and it would be circulated around the world and presented to the United Nations in July.

Mr. Speaker Has Commons In the Palm of His Hand

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Star of the Parliamentary show, as almost everybody knows and agrees by now, is a new member of the cast.

Front and very much centre, of attraction, it's the Honorable Lucien Lamoureux, Speaker of the Commons.

Young (40), personable, handsome, diplomatically disarming, but cossting more than anything else, immensely able.

He has Prime Minister Pearson bowing pleasantly to him at every ruling, especially when it goes — as it sometimes must — against the Government.

He has Conservative Leader Diefenbaker completely tamed, the former tiger of the House purring like a pussy cat when called to order.

"Yes sir, yes sir," the Tory Terror has been heard to murmur, nodding his head in amiable agreement, "thank you, Mr. Speaker, thank you."

And this from the Warhorse-of-the-House who, only a couple of sessions ago, was heard to snap at another Mr. Speaker who has presumed to call him to order: "Sit down will you; and let me finish!"

But the Prime Minister's and the Conservative Leader's are not the only Parliamentary members this talented Mr. Speaker has.

TOO TOO GOOD

For he has also the fortunate combination of being able to call on Thompson before he gains too much latitude in his high flying and melodious flights of oratory.

But best of all, Mr. Speaker can control — and tightly — Donald Grant Creditor Leader Gillis Gregoire, the MP who spits out words faster than a machine gun sews lead.

He can stop Mile-a-Minute Gregoire dead in mid-sentence while the speed-sweat artist is gearing up from high to overdrive.

"Wait, wait," cried Gilles Gregoire the other day when Mr. Speaker flagged him down. "It is, wait, if you please, for the translation."

With a grin and a shrug, Mr. Speaker reminded him that "we don't have to wait for the translation — I speak English and French with, I hope, equal fluency."

Facility is scarcely the word for it. Mellifluous fluency might better express it. His French is beautiful! His vocabulary extensive. His choice of the meaning word, precise.

And his French is equally excellent.

From his earliest Ottawa days, he spoke French, and educated French, in the home, and English on the playground and in the classroom.

"Mr. Speaker knows," Gilles Gregoire shrugs in uncharacteristic resignation, "what I'm going to say you understand well started to say it. He's too too good."

But a real talent for languages isn't the whole story, and by many a chapter, of Mr. Speaker's effortless control of the Commons, which hasn't been all such a steel-and-velvet rein since the days of Mackenzie King.

Secret of his ring-mastery is his know-how.

Not just the know-how of the rules, the practices and procedures of Parliament.

But the know-how of the very mechanics, the complicated and the multi-wheels-within-wheels of the power apparatus that makes government go.

He learned what switches to pull, what buttons to push, what and what not to say to whom, who can and who can't do it for or to whom, where, when and why.

And he learned it all in his years as one of the Members in that special Capital power elite of the "E.As," the Executive Assistants to the Cabinet Ministers.

He was E. A. to former transport Minister Lionel Chevrier, known in his pre-diplomatic London days of power-wheeling undressing here on The Hill as "The Silver Fox."

People coming to see old Chev," to ask favors, enlist his influence, seek his intervention or otherwise request his support would get a visit from "but of course" from "The Silver Fox."

It was Lucien Lamoureux' job later to break the news to them that while "Chev" had agreed to say "yes," it really was "no."

But if it turned out, actually, to be "yes" after all, it was Lucien Lamoureux' job also to confirm it and then to translate that "yes" into effective action. And this he could do, knowing what backing and how here, would open what door there.

In short, except, perhaps for Paul Martin, no man on Parliament Hill knows more about who's really who and what's actually what in these political parts — so few are disposed to confide, much less argue when he promulgates the day-to-day law and order in the Commons.

Mr. George Long, historian of the Bell Telephone Co. of Montreal, has returned to that city after "covering" Belleville with a series of addresses illustrated with equipment on the "Scientific World of the Future". During his stay here, Mr. Long addressed the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, personnel of the Trenton Air Station, the teaching staff and pupils of School for the Deaf and district employees of the Bell Telephone Co. Mr. Long was accompanied on his itinerary by Mr. Grant Proctor, district manager of the Bell Telephone Co. who introduced him to the various audiences. Startling discoveries and improvements in scientific equipment, as demonstrated and narrated by Mr. Long, proved of intense interest to the various city groups who were in attendance at the luncheon.

Strictly Personal

Escapism or Just a Retreat

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large: I have decided to dispense with the familiar subtitle, "Purely Personal," with which Chet had opened each type of column, because to many people the word "personal" has the connotation of "gossipy" and I am not one who is seeking "reverse"; the former wants to lose himself, while the latter wants to find himself.

Gossips are usually oblivious to the point of Richie's observation that: "A person never shows his own character so plainly as by the way he portrays another's."

Why do so many people who "love to travel" feel comfortable only when they can immediately transform their foreign environment into one as closely as possible resembling their native environment?

An intellectual is one who customarily has much compassion and sensibility does, so that the public can enjoy the luxury of three-day weekends.

We need to recognize that there is a profound difference between the person who is looking for "escape," and the one who is seeking "retreat": the former wants to lose himself, while the latter wants to find himself.

Escape is usually oblivious to the point of Richie's observation that: "A person never shows his own character so plainly as by the way he portrays another's."

Why do so many people who "love to travel" feel comfortable only when they can immediately transform their foreign environment into one as closely as possible resembling their native environment?

Osteoporosis Results As Bones Lose Calcium

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Doctor: My mother's severe back pains have been diagnosed as osteoporosis and the doctor has started her on hormones. She is 74.

What is the outlook? Will she likely become bedfast? Is it safe for her to continue her normal activities? Are daily long trips in a car safe? Is any special diet helpful? — Mrs. A. B.

Osteoporosis is a problem of aging bones. Calcium is gradually lost by the bones and they become somewhat brittle and porous, and hence weak.

This condition is from three to six times as frequent in women as in men, and is often associated with the hormone changes which accompany menopause.

However, that is not the only possible cause. Disorders of the pituitary, thyroid and adrenal glands can lead to similar upsets in hormone balance. So osteoporosis may be related to digestive disorders or to overvast proper absorption of calcium.

And one other cause: Disuse of bones (as a paralyzed arm or leg) leads to a loss of calcium.

The outlook is not unfavorable with proper treatment, and there is small likelihood of becoming bedfast unless some other problem develops.

Since activity encourages strengthening of the bones, a patient should remain active — but should avoid hazardous pursuits because of the risk of a fall and fracture of a brittle bone. Your mother should watch her step on the stairs and slippery floors. And avoid laddersstanding on chairs and that sort of thing which throw rugs are also a menace.

Administration of hormones is a major medical measure, estrogen alone, or estrogen mixed with the male hormone in proper proportions. Some physicians believe that women past menopause should have hormones to prevent osteoporosis.

Diet is extremely important, and it must be high in protein. Too many older folks, sometimes because of defective teeth or finicky appetites, skimp on meat and other protein foods. Finely ground meat may be easier to eat. Eggs, fish and dairy products also contain protein.

Attention should be paid to a diet that contains plenty of vitamin D, and a vitamin supplement, with emphasis on D and C.

Calcium may be given either in the form of generous servings of milk, or in tablet form. Iron, usually in the back, is a prominent feature of osteoporosis. But the ailment can be present without pain.

As to long automobile rides, there is no objection; however, a pillow at the small of the back may afford considerable comfort.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am a heavy smoker and am trying to quit. I am naturally concerned about lung cancer and have had X-rays every year, but a friend tells me that they can't detect the condition. Another friend says of course they can. — M. S.

The second friend, of course, is right. While X-ray doesn't always detect a cancer when it is extremely small, it is still the best way to identify it early. A technique for Pap smears on bronchial secretions is also used if the X-ray leaves any doubt.

Dogs Defended by One of Their Own

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

As a matt of average intelligence and a resident of Belleville, I have, since puppyhood, read your newspapers with a keen interest.

As I have pewed through its pages I have been greatly impressed with man's progress, through the years, toward the making of a better world.

Each issue carries stories of wholesale slaughter in Viet Nam and of bigger bugbigs or shootings in the Deep South. Every weekend, on this continent alone, several hundreds are killed or maimed on the highways. Scientists are working feverishly around the clock devising bigger and better machines of destruction. It is indeed a pretty picture and one which even the dumbest puppy can understand, because it is obvious to all, that when the ultimate has been achieved all are dead, this will indeed be a very peaceful world.

When however I read the letters of "Disgusted Citizens" on your Editorial page advocating all-out war against man's best friend, I felt it was my duty to take pen in paw and say a few words in defence of self and kin.

Dog's largest problem is, of course, delinquent masters and these are to a large degree responsible for the term plants made by these "Disgusted Citizens". There is one complaint which recurs throughout these letters, like a worn-out recording. It is "Dog Tax Dollars." Several years ago, a writer of popular songs achieved worldwide acclaim for writing the lyrics "It only costs a dime" — makes the grass grow tall". We dogs have solved this conundrum, and in our small way we are doing something about it. We local semi dogs charges $1.69 (plus tax) for a ten pound bag of this commodity, which we deposit on your lawns free of charge.

It is true that we do have among our numbers certain churlish curs, who indulge in such criminal practices as bowling over little children, chasing motor cars and baiting Her Majesty's mail couriers. I will be the first to say that these offenders should be destroyed most promptly and severely, but to advocate the destruction of the whole canine race for the sins of the few, or alternatively to banish them to deserts, or even to Hutt's Island, seems to me to be more fanatical than Hitler or Mao Tse Tung.

I maintain that man can take a few lessons from us dogs in the virtues of honesty, loyalty, and common sense, rather than to contemplate our destruction.

Rover, A Disgruntled Canine

Some Dogs Are Not Allowed Out

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Dear Dog Next Door, Recently I have been reading in this newspaper to "Stay Home." I know you will obey this to the letter.

You have never bitten my children, dog is my garden or broken any of the by-laws pertaining to you.

But that is my complaint!

You have been here for two years ago, you have never left your own yard.

Therefore, you have been forced to do "business" in the same location all that time.

The weather will be cold and sunny soon. My family and I would prefer to be able to use our backyard to have "cook-outs" or just lie in the sun.

Unfortunately, due to the horrible smell coming over the fences from your side, this will be impossible.

You law-abiding dogs are just as big a nuisance as your lawless relatives.

Offended.

Community Life Becoming Extinct

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It was with great disappointment that I read in the Havelock Standard that Cordova Mines school is to be closed. Yet I was not surprised at the action of the Peterborough County Board as our country in many areas (education is one of them) has been slipping away from democracy and turning to centralization of power and dictatorial rulership. One member stated it was the county at large to be considered. Well, there ever a vote given to a county or township to vote in this system of 300 in a school? We know of none.

Whenever did it become necessary that you had to be a large identity to get democratic consideration? Cordova Mines is a community with over 180 adults and children, two stores and two churches. It has a right to be given democratic rights, and just by service.

When approximately 178 people vote in favor, or at least sign a petition for their school to be retained, and six sign against it, and when four of the board members make a motion that Cordova retain its school and ten children of the six be transported to Havelock, surely this was fair enough and good sound democracy. Congratulations to the two members, Mr. Aldred and Mr. Ford.

It was a sad day when the county treasurship was adopted in Peterborough county and sadder still for other counties when they realized the township trusteeship remained there would be fair government for each township. May I ask, will the school trusteeship stop at the county or will there be further centralization?

The old school system claims greater, better education, community fellowship. The fact is community life is heading toward extinction. You never have an opportunity to hear your child recite or take part in a play as we did in days gone by, you can hardly find a Christmas program. This year the only school that had a Christmas program that I know of was the Stirling Collegiate and Vocational Institute.

My boy did well in Cordova school, but not so good here.

If we wish to have individual enterprise and freedom for communities and citizens of state, we must get back to a democratic government. Government of the people, by the people and for the people, rather than this dreadful centralization.

I do hope that every township especially in rural areas will keep their school trusteeship and if there are any changes on this system the people have a right to vote.

Rev. R. H. James,
Oshawa.

Always the Fee

Windsor Star —

The Honorable Yvon Dupuis, a former minister in the federal cabinet, has been fined $5,000 for accepting a $20,000 bribe.

It would be unfair to regard the $5,000 difference as clear profit, since the Honorable Mr. Dupuis will undoubtedly have to pay his lawyer.

Judge's Begin Bank Holdup Hearing

legal ground in Canada. No superior court judge in this country has ever come up against the same procedure.

Mr. Justice Landreville's position came under attack as the result of his meeting from after his judicial appointment 7,500 shares in Northern Ontario Natural Gas Co. stock. The company had obtained a municipal gas franchise in Sudbury with the approval of which the mayor there in 1956.

An area of investigation has hung over the company off and on for the last eight years. Three Ontario cabinet ministers resigned several years ago after disclosures of dealings in NONG promotional stock.

CONVICTED PRESIDENT

The Ontario government has had two investigations into the company. He first president, Ralph K. Farris of Vancouver, was convicted of perjury in Toronto in 1964 for failing to tell one of these inquiries where 14,000 shares had gone.

Mr. Justice Landreville and three former mayors of smaller towns who got stock—all out of the 14,000 block—were charged with municipal corruption under the Criminal Code but cleared in court. Farris was charged with offering them bribes but the charges were dropped.

The law society's removal request—after Mr. Justice Landreville's discharge at preliminary hearing—touched off the Rand inquiry into the judge's hearings March 14. Only Parliament can remove a high court judge, and the government before moving has asked for a ruling on the propriety of his behavior and fitness for office.

The embroiled judge, 5½ years a member of the judiciary, has been at work in his absence sitting in on the public hearings. He goes back to his court duties Monday.

DEFENDS HONESTY

Last witness of the inquiry, he made a vigorous defence of his honesty in two days under examination here. Wednesday his lawyer, John J. Robinette of Toronto, made a final submission with the gist that he is "a man of good character."

Mr. Robinette, a leading figure in the inner councils of the law society and its immediate past head, criticized its request for the judge's approval by quoting its special committee dealing with the case had drawn inferences from speculation and had omitted the "elementary" procedure of hearing the judge defend himself.

Commissioner Rand said he would reach his own decision without taking into account the society submission to the government.

Mr. Robinette said nothing in the evidence — which includes more than 70 exhibits — suggests the judge committed misconduct after joining the bench and the evidence on his family activities shows he did not use any improper influence towards getting NONG New Liskeard franchise. He would not agree that the judge even committed an error of judgment in the circumstances of his acceptance of the company's stock.

storm, but commercial fishermen reported loss of nets.

However, the cold and unseasonal weather did not affect vegetable and fruit growing in southern Ontario, the department of agriculture reported. A spokesman said that the cold weather has kept back bud growth which might otherwise be damaged by May frosts.

U.S. HARD HIT

The wind-driven flood waters created more hardship on the United States side of Lake Erie. Thousands of residents were forced from their homes in an area stretching from Monroe, Mich., to Port Clinton, Ohio.

Rowboats and amphibious vehicles were used to rescue persons from flooded homes and cottages.

About 6,000 persons were evacuated from the Monroe area. Another 1,400 were moved out of the Toledo area and many persons were forced to move up to the second storey of their homes.

Another 1,800 were taken from Luna Pier, a small Michigan town.

U.S. officials said it was the worst flood in the area since 1952.

Ann Landers

Urges Counter-Irritant For Grandmother's Talk

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our card club meets twice a month. We are all retired women who have a lot in common.

One woman who joined the club last year has become positively obnoxious. She has held up the game for as long as 15 minutes at a time telling us little anecdotes about her grandchildren.

Mrs. Talkathon never fails to bring several posters and drawings that her grandchildren make in school. We have listened to their essays and poems ad nauseum. Her stacks of snapshots bore us silly.

We all have grandchildren, Ann, and we ANN LANDERS are just as proud of ours as she is of hers but we wouldn't think of imposing on folks the way she does.

What can be done to shut this woman up — short of telling her that we are weary of listening to her yak about her grandchildren? — BROKEN RECORD.

DEAR REC: At the next meeting announce that you have something cute to tell about your grandchildren. Drag out an interminable yarn — ad nauseum. Be sure to pass around a few dozen snapshots.

When you've finished, apologize for taking so much time and suggest that the club adopt a rule — no more talking about grandchildren. Recommend that the fine for breaking the rule be $5. After that, if Mrs. Talkathon insists on chattering about her grandchildren it's going to be mighty expensive.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was knocked out by a sentence which appeared in your column recently. Miss K.Q. asked — and with a perfectly straight face — "If the boys think virginity is so important, why don't they leave a few around?"

The lady's question implies that the deflowered lassies have all been drugged, slugged, hit in the head and carried off. Surely, Ann Landers, you don't buy that?

I have raised both boys and girls and am now in my seventh year as a housemother on a midwestern campus. Today the girls are as aggressive that it makes me glad my sons are grown.

There's a rule on this campus that no girls are allowed above the first floor of a fraternity house. Nevertheless, every weekend I have to broom out at least four or five females who have pestered the boys to let them see their rooms.

Yesterday an 18-year-old lad asked if I would go to his room and request that the girl leave. "I can't get her out," he said.

So, please, Ann Landers, don't perpetuate the myth that the little boys are seducing the little girls left and right. Generally it's mutual. Sometimes it's the girl who does the seducing. — IN COMMUNICATION.

DEAR IN: I appreciate your comments and would not deny that there is a large portion of truth in what you say. Instinctively, however, the male is the predator and no matter how wild some of the girls may seem, nature has decreed that the chaste will be chased — and sometimes caught. This is not my personal opinion, it is part of The Great Design.

Previous to her recent marriage Mrs. G. H. Rollins (nee Gail Langabeer) was honored at a miscellaneous shower held at the home of Mrs. D. Golka, Albert Street with Miss D. Young as co-hostess; at a bathroom and bedroom shower at the home of Mrs. W. Prindle with Miss Sharon Prindle as hostess. She was also presented with a gift from her co-workers at Northern Electric.

LOVE TRIES AGAIN

COLCHESTER, England (CP) — An Essex newspaper carried the following advertisement: "Jilted sweetheart wishes to dispose of bedroom suite as leaving country. Tea-stained pillows if desired. £20 ($60) or nearest offer, all inclusive, but not including sweetheart."

Mrs. H. Langford Heads W.C.T.U. in This Area

The annual County convention of the Ontario Women's Christian Temperance Union was held Monday in Holloway St. United Church, Belleville, and opened with an executive meeting presided over by the president, Mrs H. Langford, of Napanee.

The regular meeting opened at 11 a.m. The minutes of the executive meeting were read by Miss Margaret Mitchell. Mrs L. Wright gave the corresponding secretary's report and Mrs. G. E. Dobbs read the treasurer's report. Mrs. F. S. Mills of Napanee, sang a spring solo, accompanied at the piano by Miss Beatrice Baughn.

Under the leadership of Mrs. R. G. Coulter, the U.C.W. provided luncheon.

During the noon hour, Jim Steven and Bill Ridley, two students from Bellerville Collegiate Institute, gave a report on the Tri- Alpha Conference held in Niagara Falls at Christmas time. This is the Temperance Youth Group. There were about 700 members in attendance at the Conference. The purpose of it is to teach our young Canadians to assess the hazards of alcoholic drinking.

They stated that a sober driver drives a car but a drinking driver just aims it and under the latter conditions, the car becomes a deadly weapon. Twenty-six ounces of whiskey, if consumed within half an hour would kill. An endeavor was made to teach the young people facts and figures in regard to the alcoholic problem so they would not be influenced by the whims of the crowd, TV and magazine and newspaper advertising and other mediums of promoting the sale of intoxicating beverages.

The dangerous drug "LSD", which temporarily eliminates all intellectual and cultural restraints, was also discussed.

WORSHIP SERVICE

The worship and memorial service was led by Mrs. George Finlay. She read excerpts from the book "Greatest Members". Mrs. R. G. Coulter placed a large white ribbon bow on a basket of white chrysanthemums in memory of members who died during the past year.

The following presidents reported on the work done in their Unions: Mrs. Edna Craig, Newburgh; Mrs. E. V. C. Lewis, Ficton; Mrs. Ward Wartman, Napanee; Mrs. R. G. Coulter, Belleville; Mrs. W. O. Striker, South Marysburgh. Presentation of county awards was made by Mrs. E. V. C. Lewis. These are given for pupils who have written prize winnings temperance essays.

Mrs. E. Muscliow, of Belleville, read the camp treasurer's report. Besides being camp treasurer, Mrs. Muscliow is an outstanding Bible study leader at Consecon Children's Camp, on Lake Consecon, which she has attended for many years. Miss Margaret Mitchell will also be the craft teacher at camp again this summer. This year's camp will be held from June 30th to July 9th, and applications forms will be available from any of the executive members or from Mrs. E. Muscliow, 27 N. Park St., Belleville.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Beth McKay, of Toronto, field secretary of many years and now retired, was guest speaker. She brought a vital and inspiring message.

Statistics show that more than ten thousand people are killed by liquor consumption during the year whereas only one may be killed by a mad dog, yet the dog is shot and the government licenses the sale of liquor.

Mrs. L. Wright sang a selection accompanied by pianist, Mrs. E. M. Hubbs.

Mrs. Ward Wartman read the report of the nominating committee listing the following officers: Mrs. H. Langford, Napanee, president; Mrs. R. G. Coulter, Belleville, first vice-president; Mrs. George Finlay, Strathcona, second vice-pres.; Mrs. L. Wright, Picton, corr. secty.; Miss Margaret Mitchell, Newburgh, recording secty.; Mrs. G. E. Dobbs, Belleville, treasurer; Mrs. Donald Wellbanks, S. Marysburgh, camp liasion officer; Mrs. E. Muscliow, Belleville, camp treasurer.

Mrs. Edna Craig, of Newburgh, installed the officers and Mrs. E. V. C. Lewis gave the courtesy report, thanking the minister and officials of Holloway St. United Church, also those who prepared the luncheon and all those who had taken part in the program.

Church Groups

ST. MARGARET'S EVENING GUILD

The members of the Evening Guild held their first monthly meeting in the church hall. The Guild has been asked to cater to a wedding in June. Mrs. G. Mountford and Mrs. L. Anderson have agreed to convene this event.

After the current business was concluded, the ladies workbasket was conducted by Mrs. R. Bailey and her group.

The second meeting was in the form of a tour of the radio station CJBQ. Mrs. R. Rushton gave thanks to Mr. F. C. Murray for the hospitality.

READ C.W.L.

On Thursday evening members of Read Catholic Women's League attended Mass at 6.30 p.m. This was followed by a pot-luck supper, annual meeting and showing of slides on the Ecumenical Council, all held in the parish hall.

Business was conducted by the president, Mrs. C. Jordan.

Mrs. J. E. Walsh and Mrs. F. Buckley were in charge of the nominating committee. Mrs. Walsh presented the slate of officers for the coming year as follows: director — Rev. W. V. Hamilton; president — Mrs. T. V. Corrigan; 1st. vice-president — Mrs. W. Buckley; 2nd. vice-president — Mrs. J. Murphy; 3rd. vice-president — Mrs. G. Walsh; recording secretary — Mrs. J. Shannon; corresponding secretary — Mrs. C. Brennan; treasurer — Mrs. F. Colley; councillors — Mrs. J. Walsh, Mrs. R. O'Brien, Mrs. A. Hannifan, Mrs. W. Steele, Mrs. G. Parks, Mrs. S. Brennan, Mrs. L. Gokers, Mrs. M. Horrigan and Mrs. J. A. Jordan.

MR. AND MRS. GERALD H. ROLLINS

Rollins — Langabeer

Archdeacon A. S. McConnell officiated at the wedding ceremony in St. Thomas' Anglican Church at 12 noon on Saturday, April 16 when Gail Marie Langabeer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Langabeer, Belleville was united in marriage to Gerald Howard Rollins, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rollins, Belleville.

The church organist Mr. D. W. Davenport played traditional wedding music and accompanied the six choir boys as they rendered appropriate selections.

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. Lyle Langabeer, the bride wore an Empire style floor - length bridal gown of white silk organza highlighted with white lace appliques. The back of the dress was enhanced with a flowing train edged with lace appliques. A chapel length veil was caught by an organza rose headdress encircled with tiny pearls. She carried a white prayer book crested with yellow roses and cascading streamers with yellow rosebuds.

Mrs. James Jones, sister of the bride as matron of honor wore a street-length sheath dress of yellow silk organza with matching overskirt appliqued with yellow roses, and a matching wedding ring heath. dress. She carried a nosegay of white 'mums tinted yellow.

Miss Ardel Sunderland, cousin of the bride and Miss Sharon Prindle, cousin of the bridegroom were identically attired in the manner of honor, but in shrimp pink color and carried nosegays of white 'mums tinted to match their dresses.

Mr. Herbert Seames Jr., of Belleville attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Robert Long of Belleville and Mr. James Jones of Orillia were the ushers.

A reception for 80 guests was held in St. Thomas' Parish Hall where the bride's mother welcomed the guests wearing a pink linen sheath dress with matching jacket, pink accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Also receiving was the bridegroom's mother who wore a beige linen ensemble of matching dress and coat, mint green accessories and a corsage of tinted green carnations.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride chose a white and turquoise plaid suit with matching hat and other accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Rollins reside at 23 Grier St., Belleville.

Liberal Senator From N.B. Tours Penal Institutions In New Zealand and Japan

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Jail sentences worked off on weekends are being tried out for youthful male first offenders in New Zealand, says Senator Muriel Ferguson, who recently toured penal institutions there and in Japan.

The Liberal senator from New Brunswick made the inspections during a trip to the Commonwealth and Empire Law Conference late last year in Australia. A director of the Elizabeth Fry Society here, she is one of nine senators on a joint committee of Parliament studying Canadian penal ltiaries.

The weekend sentences can be served in any one of three "periodic detention centres" for youths 16 to 20 in New Zealand. Set up in 1963, the homes serve young men who had had no previous convictions.

The idea is to keep them busy with lessons and small jobs around the community from Friday afternoon to Monday morning—"the time when they are likely to be idle and get into trouble, often because they have no idea of how to use their leisure time."

There are from 10 to 30 youths at each centre. They eat, live and work with the home director in a "family atmosphere. Some of them say they have never eaten at a table before. They have always just had something to eat handed to them."

AIM TO BUILD GOODWILL

They are given academic lessons, lectures, physical training and counselling and do repair work around the house and grounds. One group looked after the lawns at an old people's home in the community.

The new approach is part of the New Zealand justice department's philosophy of involving the offender in neighborhood activities, and winning the goodwill of the community towards him.

"They want to keep institutional care as brief and remedial as possible, and especially stress rehabilitation for young offenders."

There are no weekend centres for women yet, although the government is considering them.

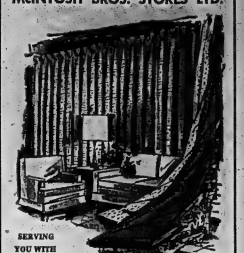
In Japan, Senator Ferguson visited the Tokyo Guidance Home, a centre for 90 women convicted under the anti-prostitution laws.

For the first 30 days of the normal six-month sentence, the women undergo psychological, physical, educational and adaptability tests. Then they follow one of two courses of two courses of study—the first including housekeeping, gardening, dress - making, handcrafts and office skills; the second concentrating on nursing, cleaning, laundry, mending and "kitchen affairs."

Another women's institution in Japan allows occupants to go into jobs about two months before their release date. They must continue living in the reform centre, but can travel freely in and from their work.

In this centre, as well as having guidance and counselling sessions, the inmates can study japanese language, music — especially the flute — and skills such as sewing and typing.

"The Japanese feel that we should be tolerant, because what we call a crime now may not be considered an offence at a later date."



Senator Fergusson said one japanese had illustrated this theory by saying it used to be a criminal offence in Japan to own an American dictionary or American cigarettes.

The philosophical approach to rehabilitation is shown also in treatment of prisoners who have misbehaved.

"They have n't punishment cells. Instead, there is a room, furnished just like all the others, but separate. They call it the room for self-reflection."

Local Paintings to Be Shown at Spring Fair

May 7 marks the 21st anniversary of the exhibition of Mandy Macdonald paintings shown each year at the Spring Fair. The event is sponsored by the University Women's Club of Belleville and District and will be held on Saturday in the auditorium of St. Michael's Academy.

Mr. Macdonald first displayed his paintings at this event in 1945 and each year has donated a painting as a door prize. Proceeds from his generous donations are used to provide scholarships for city and district high school graduates who plan to enter University in the fall.

Originally one $50. scholarship was awarded. As the exhibition has become more widely known, the success of this project has enabled the scholarships to be increased. In 1966 the club plans to present three $200. scholarships and will make a $300. donation to the Ailes Wilson Fund for continuing education of women graduates.

MANY LOCAL SCENES

Mr. Macdonald who is a native of Point Anne and still lives there several months of the year has portrayed many local scenes on his canvases. He is a grandnaia of the Albright Art School, Boston; of the Boston Museum School of Fine Arts and of the Ontario College of Art. Several of his paintings hang in the National Gallery in Ottawa.

In addition, this year, Mrs. Macdonald, who is also an artist of note, will display her unusual button collection containing many interesting military buttons dating back to the war of 1812.

Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald will be present at the Fair to discuss the exhibits with the visitors.

CLUB 4-H NOTES

TYENDINAGA CALF CLUB

The Tyendinaga 4-H calf club had its second monthly meeting at the Tyendinaga Township Hall. Two new members joined to make a total of 17 members.

After the opening of the meeting, talks on feed for livestock were given by Larry Bertland, fieldman for the extension branch of the Department of Agriculture in Stirling.

Next meeting will be at 8:00 p.m. on May 10, at the farm of Gerald Walsh.

TESTED AND APPROVED RECIPES

My pat alibi for giving you two totally unrelated recipes today is that I have tested and approved them.

One is for Blueberry Pan Bread. This is similar to a muffin mix and can be baked in 12 muffin pans. But I made it in a square pan because I was in a hurry.

The other is for a seasonal, reasonably priced vegetable dish — Scalloped Celery with Almonds that stole the show at a recent dinner party.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

THURSDAY

Baked Ham Slice in Milk; Mustard Bean Pickles; Candied Sweet Potatoes; Frenched Green Beans; Bowl Salad of Tomato Wedges, Cucumber Slices and Shredded Lettuce; Thousand Island Dressing; Old-Fashioned Apple Pandowdy; Milk or Pouring Cream; Coffee.

SUNDAY (Guests)

Chicken Cacciatore (see Tuesday); Buttered Noodles (or Crusty French Bread); Cauliflower au Gratin; Tossed Greens; Italian French Dressing; Vanilla Ice Cream Balls in Toasted Cocoanut with Chocolate Sauce; Tea.

BLUEBERRY PAN BREAD:

¼ cup best quality shortening, ½ cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon vanilla, 2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 tablespoon single-acting baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup fresh frozen blueberries (do not thaw them), ½ cup light brown sugar (for topping), grated rind 1 large orange (for topping).

Cream shortening until light; add sugar and beat until fluffy. Beat in egg. Stir in milk and vanilla. Sift together the sifted flour, baking powder and salt. Sprinkle over wet ingredients, sprinkle frozen blueberries over flour mixture and mix to barely blend in. Do not overmix! Turn into 8½" x 8½" square pan lined with buttered paper on bottom. Sprinkle evenly with brown sugar then with grated orange rind. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 35 minutes. Cut into 9 or 16 squares and serve, preferably hot.

SCALLOPED CELERY AND ALMONDS (serves 6 or 8):

4 cups green cutter celery cut in ½" pieces, ¾ cup blanched almonds cut in halves, lengthener, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, one 10-oz. can undiluted cream of chicken soup, ½ cup milk, 1 beaten egg, ¾ cup buttered crumbs (or ½ cup corn flake crumbs).

Cook cut celery in 1 cup boiling salted water until barely tender. Drain. — Add almonds and turn into large shallow baking dish. Melt butter, blend in flour, and stir in soup and milk until thick. Remove from heat and quickly stir in beaten egg. Pour over celery and almonds and carefully mix through them. Top with crumbs. Bake at 300 deg. Fahr. 45 minutes or at 375 deg. Fahr. 30 minutes.

Fathers Need Better Deal Says Sister

TORONTO (CP) — Mothers and fathers frequently get neglected while hospital staff attend to the needs of the parents' newborn children, the International Childbirth Education Association conference were told Wednesday.

Dr. John S. Miller of Berkeley, Calif., said some mothers think it a terrible time after childbirth that they build up a hostility toward their own children.

"It is essential, he said, that mothers be helped beyond the six weeks' checkup period after birth.

"She needs someone friendly to come in and take care of the child while she gets a rest, to give her friendly counselling, assure her that she is normal when she feels a sudden rage against her child."

Sister Mary Frances, supervisor of obstetrics in a Dallas, Tex., hospital, said fathers need a better deal in the maternity wards, the father is treated merely as another visitor and not made to feel like the head of a family.

Susanna's Family Fare

TOUCHES THE HEART

Dear Susanna: My daughter, who is in training in a distant city as a nurse, write today that she is looking after a two-year-old girl patient who is being treated for asthma.

The child's mother gave the little girl a picture of the family to keep beside her, and it brings her great comfort. She takes it everywhere and shows it to everyone.

I thought it was such a good idea, I would send it to you to pass on to other mothers whose children must have a stay in hospital. — L. J.

A most dear and precious idea. — Susanna

TOTE FOR TREASURES

Hi Susanna: On outings in the car in the nice weather, we always carry a few plastic bags (and small ties) in the trunk.

Then, if we find some berries or shells, or sometimes small plants, we have something in which to bring them home. — Mrs. C. D.

A quantity of moist earth in the bag with the plant will help to keep it fresh for a few hours. — Susanna

FOR SAFETY'S SAKE

Dear Susanna: As a precaution, it is advisable to make a duplicate note of the serial number of traveller's cheques. — Mildred A. Price.

Toastmistress Clubs Provide Good Training

DEAR DORIS — With reference to the woman who wanted to gain poise in public speaking, may I suggest you refer her to a Toastmistress Club?

Any woman interested in her own development is eligible to apply for membership. Toastmistress Clubs usually meet twice monthly. Several members speak on subjects of their choice, and a topic mistress assigns short impromptu talks. Round table and panel discussions, debates, book reviews and other types of program vary the pattern. — BRANCH PRESIDENT.

DEAR B.P.: Thank you. Other enthusiastic members have been praising your clubs to the skies! The 50 branches in Canada are spread right across the country. And I'll be glad to give a name and address to contact, to anyone writing in, — including L.A.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I'm 14, shy, and like boys. I'm not popular with them, but I have a lot of girl friends. How do I act in front of boys if I'm shy? — TROUBLED.

DEAR TROUBLED: Who isn't more or less shy at 14? I'd have sent you a dandy article on what to do about shyness if you had only enclosed ten cents, and put your right name and address on a stamped envelope. Try it. No one but you need ever know your guilty secret!

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am in my early 40's and I've been suffering with my head for a few years now. My hair falls quite a bit, and sometimes it would ache on the top so much that I couldn't comb my hair. Could you suggest what would be the matter? — WORRIED AND UNHAPPY.

DEAR WORRIED AND UNHAPPY: Sorry, but you've come to the wrong specialist. Headaches are a symptom in many body ailments, and only your doctor can say which one.

The head (and heart) trouble I concern myself with are more of the psychological kind.

(Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Walsh and Mr. Grant Walsh of Lorne Park College, Port Credit, Ont., spent some time on the week-end with their parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Walsh. Mr. Gary Walsh and Mr. Grant Walsh are junior college students at Lorne Park. Mr. and Mrs. Gary Walsh fill the positions of Dean of Men and Dean of Women also at Lorne Park College.

Teachers Vote To Accept Labor Contract

MONTREAL (CP)—The province's 2,300 government - employed striking teachers voted early today to accept a labor contract but will remain on strike.

At separate meetings in major centres throughout the province the teachers decided to continue their walkout pending withdrawal of charges against members of their executive for ignoring an interim injunction ordering the teachers back to work.

Premier Jean Lesage said Wednesday the government is not in a position to withdraw the charges because the matter is now before the courts and will have to be settled there.

The members of the executive are liable to a maximum penalty of a $2,000 fine and 60 days in jail each if convicted.

The teachers, members of Le Syndicat des Professeurs de l'Etat du Quebec, struck April 12.

The union, an affiliate of the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions, represents 2,000 teachers, 300 of whom remained at work during the contract dispute, while 30,000 students have been idled by the walkout.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Mine Workers Union and leaders in the soft coal industry Wednesday signed a new contract increasing basic wages $1 a day, retroactive to April 1, and providing major fringe benefits.

Book Man As Six Found Fatally Knifed

NEW YORK (AP)—A 23-year-old former mental patient was booked by police on a charge of homicide today in the fatal stabbings of his atractive wife and their five children.

Police said the gentle, mild-mannered Jose Torres, 32, had made a statement but they declined to disclose its contents.

Assistant Chief Inspector Joseph McLaughlin declined to say what kind of weapon was used. None was found at the scene.

Torres was seized Wednesday night, several hours after the bodies of his family were found by the superintendent of the building where they lived.

Dead were Mrs. Maria Rivera Torres, 34; Jose Jr., 1, Harry, 2, Yvette, 4, Maria Luisa, 3, and Nancy, 2.

The victims, all in nightclothes, died of multiple stab wounds.

Income

tax deduction claims, arrive at the data centre several times a day by post office truck. Since returns from parts of Canada come to Ottawa, the department expects the flood to continue during the first week of May.

JUDGED BY POSTMARK

The filing deadline, extended by Revenue Minister Benson until midnight, Monday, May 2, is judged by the postmark on the mailing envelope—not the time it arrives at the local income tax collector's office.

Any late returns, received and tabulated after the revenue department's campaign this year was to get taxpayers to be accurate in making out their returns, but still about 13 per cent of the returns received have to be corrected or sent out to district tax offices for further checking.

A return that comes in "clean," as the data processors say, can return without error or complications, moves step-by-step through a process of checking and cross-checking. Assessment notices, cheques for payments, and refund cheques are mailed out in a steady stream.

Heart of the process is the computer room, where three IBM electronic computers work 16 hours a day—five days a week. The weekends are kept free but to catch up on any backlog that can't be handled in normal times.

CHECK FOR ACCURACY

From the initial sorting of returns by major geographic areas in Canada, payment cheques are counted and sorted by bank. Data from the returns then is transferred to punched card by key punching in pairs to double-check accuracy.

Data from the cards then is transferred by electronic scanners to reels of magnetic tape, which is fed into computers.

The computers almost talk back. They kick out errors that have inaccuracies, compare a taxpayers return this year with the file of his returns in past years, and point out discrepancies.

The department has encouraged taxpayers to use so-called personalized returns, blank forms sent out with name, address, and a code number printed on them. When these returns come back, the process of checking is speedy. When other returns are used, checking is time-consuming and, as a result, costly to taxpayers generally.

Skiing Soldiers at First Make Fun of Snowshoes

By BOB MacKENZIE

OLSBORG Norway (CP) —

"Why don't you use ducks instead of soldiers?" a Norwegian Army captain with twinkling eyes asked when he first saw Canadian soldiers trudging up a mountain on snowshoes.

"This is the only way to travel in northern Norway," he added as he dug in his poles and flashed down the mountain on skis.

His reaction was typical of many European troops in the early stages of the NATO exercise Winter Express on the roof of Europe about 180 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

Many still feel the same way but several who watched the first Battalion Group of Watch, in action admitted to second thoughts.

While the Canadians' speed on gentle slopes and the few stretches of flat land was well below that of their Norwegian and Italian counterparts on skis, it was a different story in the rugged mountain terrain that abounds in this region.

"We showed we could go higher, faster," said Lt.-Col. Gordon H. Sellar of Calgary, commanding officer of the battalion.

"Soldiers on skis had to follow the contour of the land. We could just go up and over."

LEARN IN MINUTES

Col. Sellar was quick to admit that skis had their advantages—at least for Norwegians and Italians.

"The Norwegians and Alpinis (the Susa Alpini Italian ski troops) have been on skis all their lives. They don't need special training.

"But not many Canadian soldiers have any extensive ski experience. This reduces it to a matter of training. You can teach a person to use snowshoes in five minutes but it takes weeks to teach him to ski with a pack on his back and a rifle over his shoulder."

The light magnesium snowshoes attracted interest from other sources. One Norwegian farmer who lives on a mountain in the exercise area asked where he could purchase a pair. He had never seen them before but was convinced they would be useful in the mountains.

British and American troops also tried snowshoes but with little luck. The Britons also used skis but followed an easy route along a highway.

Another mode of over-snow transport used by Canadians also caught Norwegians by surprise. A motorized sled—used in many parts of Canada by both sport and work—was employed on several mountain patrols.

King Olav V of Norway took a short ride on one during a visit to the Canadian headquarters and seemed to enjoy the experience thoroughly.

"We brought a few over for trials just to see how they would hold up under severe military conditions," Col Sellar said.

"They proved to be useful for two-man patrols although they may need some modification for regular military use."

Tomorrow: RCAF and Canadian Army helicopters impressive in NATO manoeuvre.

Does Man Harbor Secret Defence Against Cancer Is Question Asked

An immunity against cancer? Researchers are highly intrigued by that question today, and slowly, some answers may be forthcoming. This is the second of two articles...

By JOHN HARROUR
Associated Press Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—In dozens of laboratories, scientists are debating one question: Does man harbor a secret defence against cancer—and can it be called upon to fight human tumors?

Most researchers believe the answer is yes, but the way of proving it is elusive.

Dr. Lloyd Old of the Sloan-Kettering Institute of Cancer Research works with ways of mobilizing the weapons of immunity against cancer. Despite some recent reports which imply promise, he is unsure how long the search will take.

No one at present can tell how close or how far research is from a proven vaccine against cancer, or a proven anti-serum against tumors.

Scientific opinion is varied: Encouraging, but preliminary. Promising, but use caution.

This month at Wayne State University in Detroit one research team told of preliminary work on a small number of cancer patients and an intensified effort to prod their body defences against their disease.

YOUTH IN OLD FIGHT

The group's young Dr. Norbert P. Czajkowski, a resident at Detroit Receiving Hospital, and Dr. Jack S. Cohen, a resident at Harper Hospital, are ST. The group's immunologist, Melvyn Rosenblatt, a medical student at Wayne State, is 24. But the group has some experienced workers in Dr. Paul L. Wolf, professor of pathology, and Dr. Richard Bing, head of the university's department of medicine.

They have treated 26 patients with what they hope is a anti-body-stimulating method. Two had complete cases of remission, eight showed some tumor abatement, and 10 others died.

The medical school issued this statement:

"The cancer method so far has been primarily used as an experimental tool and has been found promising in animals. It has shown some hope of being scientifically interesting in patients.

"We feel that because of its primary scientific interest, its clinical use should be carefully controlled; therefore, this university will continue its search and make its findings available in the scientific literature as they develop."

URGES CAUTION

In New York, Dr. Harold Diehl, American Cancer Society vice-president, urged caution. "This is an encouraging report of some further work in the promising field of immunology," he said. "It is clearly preliminary, based on a few cases."

Still, even critics concede that the work could hold an interesting idea on how the body's defences might be mobilized against cancer.

The Wayne researchers sought a way of doing this by linking sample cells from a patient's tumor to material the body would recognize as foreign and by reinjecting the linked material into the patient. To obtain known foreign material, they chose the rabbit—presently a genetic stranger to man. From the rabbit they took globulin, a protein part of the blood.

The cancer cells were taken from a patient at biopsy, linked to the rabbit globlin by an enzyme mixture.

The cancer cells then were injected back into the same patient. Researchers believe they recognized a spectrum of anti-bodies — including agnesis against the rabbit globulin, against the tumor itself and against the larger, complex molecule.

Outside researchers would like to be sure, by testing the method and the serum in their own laboratories, that there was indeed a response by the patient to the tumor in terms of antibodies.

Another possible verification is a normal requirement in assaying a new development.

MAY AWAKEN DEFENCES

The group would be two items of import in the Detroit work, besides a usable therapeutic technique. First is having others duplicate their work, and are trying to disseminate, in private communication, all details of the technique to other laboratories.

They also intend, too, to pursue their own experiments further. Through this, they will need some $200,000 a year to support a new research team, including a biochemist, chemists, immunologists, cancer experts and surgeons.

The goal they want to try to refine whatever it is that seems to produce the antibody response. They would like to see if there is some cross-reactivity between tumor antigens, and they would like to know more about the nature of the antigens. Dr. Bing said the group may be a year and a half away from a controlled study in humans.

STUDY HUMANS

But the human patient is already a part of other experiments, although information is scarce. At Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, N.Y., several studies involving human have been performed recently.

Dr. Sigmond H. Nadler and Dr. George E. Moore reported they had exchanged small parts of tumors between individuals to try to get one cancer patient to develop antibodies to the tumor of another. They say respect the white blood cells from each cancer patient and reinjected them into the original tumor donor. They have been quiet about results. Of 38 full-term patients, seven showed some response, two showed complete loss of tumor at least temporarily, and five showed some decrease in tumor size. All but one case was black cancer of the skin.

At the same institute, a year ago, Dr. James T. Grace reported he was working on a tentative and experimental vaccine against leukemia—cancer of the blood and blood-forming organs. It was being tried on humans, but no results have been reported.

There are also plans elsewhere to use animals to develop antibodies to human tumors, but the questions persist in these instances on whether the human body would develop antibodies to animals-produced antibodies, negating the effect.

SEARCH FOR PROD

Besides these rather spectacular approaches, there are a hundred more quiet projects involving long and difficult serum work, trying to determine whether cancer cells do have a prod that the body's defences will recognize.

Some researchers have found immune proteins produced by leukemic cells, and suggest that such cells might be modified to produce large amounts of antibodies in test tubes when challenged by other tumors.

Some researchers are probing normal cells to find the nature of changes on them as they surfaces in hopes they will tell something about abnormal antigens.

Whatever the approach, the impact of the slightest hint of good news often brings a great but premature reaction from patients prepared to grasp at a straw.

After one recent report, one hospital recorded 1,200 telephone calls and hundreds of telegrams and letters, most of them pleading for the yet-to-complete experimental material. In this and similar cases, researchers must reply that access to the experimental work is simply impossible.

Most of the immunity techniques to date are desirable for use on human patients in the course of conventional treatment, they emphasize.

For the present, immunity, vaccines and serums against cancer remain merely a hope. But the work goes on.

New Low-Fat Dairy Spread Near Market

GUELPH (CP)—A new low-fat dairy spread, as palatable as butter, developed by the dairy science department of the Ontario Agricultural College, may appear on the Ontario market this year, it was announced Wednesday.

Dr. D. M. Irvine of the department said several Canadian dairies have sent representatives to see the new product in the making and have expressed interest in its manufacture.

Dr. Irvine, who assisted Dr. D. G. Bullock in the development of the new spread, estimates the product could sell for less than butter and would be competitive with it in price. Dr. Bullock left the college last week to take a new post in Ottawa with the National Dairy Council.

Dr. Irvine said the new spread contains less than half the amount of fat found in butter and margarine, but about seven times as much protein. It contains a small bit of one to two weeks and will not run on hot days or if spread on toast or hot corn.

Final Plans Completed for Jaycee Roadeo

NAPANEE — Final plans for the bicycle Road-eo were presented to the Napanee and District Jaycees at their dinner meeting Tuesday night. Letters have been sent to principals of the schools of the area asking that they urge pupils to enter. There is no entry fee.

There are four categories, one each for boys and for girls under 13 and one each for those over 13. The bicycle will be examined and marked for a mechanical standard. Each entrant will be judged for his skill as a rider, and must take the written examination set by the Ontario Provincial Police.

James Hawkins, education and youth committee chairman is in charge of the project. Local town police and the O.P.P. will put the boys and girls through their paces. The Road-eo will begin Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, at the west side of the market place. Plans were discussed for a visit to the Belleville unit May 10.

TO ATTEND CONVENTION

At least seven members of the local unit will attend the district convention in Port Perth, where the nine units will present their reports and elect district officers. Peter Ganas, winner of the effective speaking contest, will represent the unit in the district contest.

The Spring [illegible] reports was well received. It showed that the project had been a financial success. The members expressed pleasure at the cooperation they had received from the other organizations of the town. Many had participated in the program.

Nominations were made for officers for next year, with the election to be held May 28.

Various Traffic Offences Heard In Court

NAPANEE — Magistrate R. C. Jackson handed out heavy penalties Tuesday for traffic violations in the area.

Robert Baker of Napanee pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving and was fined $50 and costs, also his driving licence was suspended for six months.

Earl McFee of Napanee was fined $35 and costs when he pleaded guilty to a similar charge. A fine of $20 and costs must be paid by Harold William Fox of Napanee for speeding. For driving while his licence was suspended, Glenn Perry of Napanee was sentenced to seven days in jail, with no alternative of a fine.

Twenty-seven other drivers were charged with speeding, most of the cases settled out of court.

Frederick Ralph Holmes had been charged with assaulting Constable Henderson in a barge room, and his case had been remanded, Tuesday Magistrate Jackson placed him under suspended sentence, and under probation for six months. Donald Young, involved in the same incident, was found guilty of creating a disturbance in a public place, and was fined $35 and costs.

Jim Hawkins, Jim Elliott, and Jim Hawkins allowed their names to stand for the office of president. Ernie Lever declined the nomination to continue.

Envoy Frank Phelps of the Salvation Army and R. D. Dale, head of the English department of the N.D.S.S., were guests of the Jaycees. Envoy Phelps spoke on the work of the Army, and asked for the support of the Jaycees in the Red Shield campaign, opening Monday. He was introduced and thanked by Maurice Rankin.

Mr. Dale was presented with a certificate of appreciation for his services in conducting the course in business letter writing and effective public speaking. He volunteered his services for next year. The presentation was made by John Joyce, chairman of the committee.

Aspects of Safety Presented At Bus Drivers' Seminar

NAPANEE — When 65 grown men will watch and listen to a program, and then prolong the meeting by four hours discussing answers to the questions which have been troubling them, there are two things that one sees are conscientious and unselfish, and that the meeting was greatly needed in order to solve problems.

This was the situation last week in Napanee, and the occasion was the safety seminar for school bus operators organized by Constable James Elliott. Constable Elliott is the safety officer for the local detachment of the O.P.P. His safety campaign began quietly with visits to the public schools, and the pace is quickening as his work is coming to public attention. He will carry his message to any group on request.

The formal program consisted of films, and of addresses by men who presented various aspects of safety. The speakers were: Grant Peer of Kingston, public commercial vehicle inspector with the department of transport; Corp. Gordon Clifton, provincial safety officer with the department of transport; Paul Anderson, inspector of public schools; James McLean of Kingston, Eastern Ontario supervisor of driver examinations for the department of transport; and Constable Elliott.

VARIOUS DISCUSSIONS

Discussions took in not only the condition of the vehicle itself and its management by the driver, but also the conduct of the school children on the bus, and the driver's responsibility for their conduct, as well as their own responsibility.

The question of the conduct of the children while on the bus was gone into at length, and the standard procedure reviewed. Children must not bother the driver, must take their seats and remain there quietly, and must not put their arms out of the windows, for example. But these rules are not always kept. In some districts the situation became so bad that it was difficult to secure and keep good drivers.

School bus safety patrols have been entirely changed this situation notable in the London area. Now the students in each bus are organized as a safety patrol, electing their own officers, holding their own courts and punishing offenders when rules are broken.

Before bus safety patrols can be set up the consent of the parents of the school board must be obtained. Once this is done, a representative from the department of transport comes from Toronto to supervise their organization. Bus drivers of this county are of high calibre, Constable Elliott states. To his knowledge, only one has had an accident in the past year, and it was minor, with no injuries.

Charles Lake, who operates a school bus in Stirnderen, was awarded a plaque from the transportation safety association in recognition of his freedom from accident.

Tyendinaga Personals

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — Kenneth Claus has completed his year with the Ryerson School of Technology in Toronto and is visiting his parents for two weeks before returning to Toronto, where he has accepted a position for the summer with a firm of consulting engineers.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Claus were guests last Wednesday evening of Mrs. H. C. Pile of Napier St., Napanee, Mr. Claus' former teacher. Both Mr. and Mrs. Claus are teachers in the Quinte-Mohawk School.

Mrs. Alvin Maracle of the Slash Road is under observation at the Kingston General Hospital.

Mrs. Tom Maracle of North Tonawanda, N. Y., spent a few days last week visiting her brother Melville and went to see her brother Stuart in Belleville, and her father, Robert Hill, who is still receiving treatment in the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. William Brant of Shannonville is supplying in the Quinte-Mohawk School for Mrs. R. M. Rathburn, who is a patient in the Lennox and Addington General Hospital in Napanee.

Hees Approves Parole After Twenty Years

HAMILTON (CP)—A person imprisoned for life for premeditated murder should be released on parole only after serving at least 20 years and being certified by a committee of psychiatrists as cured of any mental abnormality, George Hees (PC—Northumberland) said Wednesday night.

The former trade minister told a meeting of Young Progressive Conservatives here that defeat of a resolution in the Commons to abolish capital punishment now made it necessary for the government to introduce legislation amending the present law.

Under the law as it stands now, Mr. Hees said anyone convicted of capital murder would be sentenced to hang but likely would have the sentence commuted to life imprisonment since the present government has commuted all such sentences in the last three years.

And, he added, life imprisonment means that a person can be released on parole after nine years of good behavior in prison.

Mr. Hees said that as a minister in the former Conservative government he attended many cabinet hearings of appeals for commutation from life sentences. He found that persons convicted of capital murder needed psychiatric care.

The government should raise the standards of psychiatrists employed by the penitentiary service, and should ensure that convicted murderers are given psychiatric treatment.

3 Scientists Called Heroes By Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Greene Wednesday night called three scientist "heroes" of Canada for their work in producing the new antibiotic drug myxin.

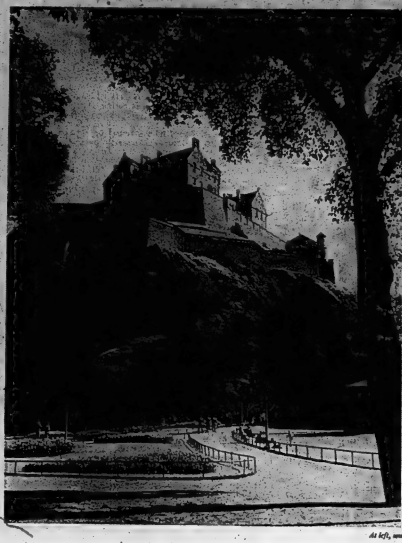
He said on the free-lime CBC telecast The Nation's Business this achievement will stand in history long after Ottawa's current and unimportant flaps and furores are forgotten.

Announcement of myxin's discovery in Ottawa by agriculture department scientists Dr. Douglas C. Gillespie, Dr. Edward A. Peterson and Dr. Fred D. Cook was made Tuesday.

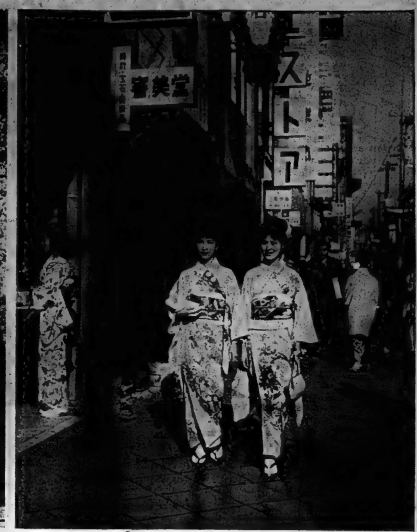
Mr. Greene said myxin has been found effective in lab tests against the organism causing tuberculosis, against the bacteria that causes sweeping hospital infections, and against a wide variety of plant and crop diseases.

It's possible anti-cancer properties are being tested at the University of Saskatchewan's cancer research institute in Saskatoon.

Soble Admits Being After CTV Network



OTTAWA (CP)—Kenneth D. Soble has given the CTV television network notice that he is out to gobble up its members when the current CTV licence expires June 30, 1968.



Mr. Soble, who operates CHCH-TV in Hamilton, told a public hearing of the Board of Broadcast Governors Wednesday-he is getting ready to line up support for a new national TV network and have it in shape for presentation to the BBG at the first hearing after Oct. 1, 1967.

He and Maurice F. Strong, president of Power Corp. of Canada Ltd. in Montreal, would supply the main capital but would seek wide public support.

Pleading his bid for permission to organize a private network before the BBG, Mr. Soble recalled that the board had authorized affiliate stations of the CTV network to purchase the network only under certain conditions. These were that network operations be reviewed at the first public hearing after Oct. 1, 1967, and that any CTV bid for a licence renewal be heard at that time.

Also at that hearing, the BBG would entertain applications "by any other persons" for permission to form a network.

At left, unusual view of Edinburgh Castle, Scotland. At right, Tokyo street scene, Japan. Just two of the 103 countries served by Shell Companies.

The Ramages go to Scotland and the Diddams have yet to choose where they'd like to go!

Left: Winners Mr. and Mrs. Diddams, 73 Bedford Park Avenue, Richmond Hill, Ont., have yet to decide where they'd like to go. They collected their matching half of a "Take Off With Shell" bill at a Shell Station in Toronto. Right: Mr. and Mrs. Ramage, 1439—41st Street, S.W., Calgary, Alta., decided on a trip to Scotland. They matched their "Take Off With Shell" bill at a White Rose Station in Calgary. Two other winners are: Mr. & Mrs. Paul of Abbotsford, B.C., and Mr. & Mrs. Von Richter of West Saint John, N.B. And there are many more holidays overseas still to be won! Over 20,000 cash prizes have been won to date. You could be a winner too!

You could take off on a holiday overseas—or win money in cash — the very next time you drive in to a White Rose or Shell station.

You'll fly in the new BOAC Super VC10—the world's most advanced long-range jet-liner. Incidentally, practically every BOAC jet flies on Shell fuel.

How you can win

Every time you drive in to a White Rose or Shell station, you'll receive a sealed envelope containing half a "Take Off With Shell" bill.

A holiday overseas

After you answer a skill-testing question correctly, you win two return tickets to your choice of any one of 103 countries served by Shell Companies. You also receive $1,000 spending money to take with you on your holiday.

Win cash too

When you have collected both left and right halves of a $500, $100, $50, $10 or $2 bill, hand both halves to the dealer.*

You'll receive the face value of the bill when you answer a skill-testing question correctly.

Thousands of winners

There will be tens of thousands of winners during the coming weeks. That gives you plenty of chances to win money in cash or a holiday overseas—or both!

So, wherever you go from coast-to-coast, don't pass up any opportunity to drive in to a White Rose or Shell station during the coming weeks.

*All bills subject to verification. Complete rules are printed on back of "Take Off With Shell" bills. This offer from Shell Canada Limited and its White Rose and Shell dealers expires June 4th, 1966.

Next time you drive in to a Shell or White Rose station you could win a trip to one of these countries. Which one would you choose to visit?

VALUES . . .
It's useless to pay too much, but it's novice to pay too little. When you pay too much you lose a little money, that is all. When you pay too little, you sometimes lose everything because the things you bought was incapable of doing the thing you bought it to do. The common law of business balance prohibits paying a little and getting a lot . . . can't be done. If you deal with the lowest bidder, it's well to ask something for the risk you run. And if you do that, you still have enough to pay or complying better! — John Ruskin.

Geochemist Outlines Losing Fight to Remain in Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—This is the story of how Canada lost to the United States another university graduate—a PhD in geochemistry.

What makes it different is the struggle he put up to avoid joining the brain drain. The fact he lost raises questions about how seriously this country tries to retain its professionals.

Dr. Lynn Monham, a native of Hamilton, details his experiences in University Affairs, a periodical published by the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada.

He now is senior scientist, geochemistry, for Geological Survey of the State of New York, Albany, N.Y.

He graduated from McMaster University in Hamilton in 1955 as a geologist, having spent his three undergraduate summers in the field. Then came two years with a large Canadian mining concern, after which he returned to university for his master of science degree.

He worked another year as a mining geologist, then entered the graduate school of the University of Chicago in 1958, completing his PhD in early 1963.

"At that time . . . I wanted very much to make my career in Canada," he says. "I was emotionally committed to the idea of an academic, governmental or industrial career in basic earth sciences in a Canadian organization or institution."

SEARCHED FOR POST

He wrote the federal labor department and received a "perfunctory reply" that his area would be "anticlinal." He never heard from it again.

He wrote the federal Geological Survey but was told that because of the freeze on civil service hiring in 1962 they could "give me no encouragement."

Next he sent circular letters to university geology departments across Canada and "received no offers." He answered a university advertisement but was advised that the position had been filled.

Dr. Monham tried the Technical Service Council in Toronto and was told they "seldom received requests for people with research interests in geological sciences such as I presented."

"This, in a country whose mineral productive is valued at $3,000,000,000 annually."

Among others, he wrote a mining and chemical concern in British Columbia. They replied four months later they had nothing to offer.

This correspondence took place late in 1962 and early 1963 as Dr. Monham was completing his PhD. He received some offers from U.S. universities and also a National Research Council post-doctoral fellowship at the University of Manitoba. He spent an "enjoyable" year in Winnipeg.

PAID MORE IN U.S.

In late 1963 he resumed the job hunt. He was interviewed by the federal mines department and later received a two-sentence form letter refusal in reply." Again the Geological Survey replied "there was flatly no chance of an opening in my area in the months ahead."

An eastern Ontario university "after dangling me . . . on a string for two months" wrote that their "hiring freeze" position he sought with a one-year temporary appointee."

"In the spring of 1964 I applied for my present position with the government of New York State, and I am happy to say that I was accepted and the job has turned out to be a very happy change of fortune. . . .

"I am doing the sort of work for which I feel best fitted—at $2,000 more per year than I had a right to expect in Canada."

Dr. Monham, who stresses he is not trying to blame anyone for his experience, says his thesis is this:

"My own experience, and that of my friends, has shown us that there's going to have to be a rethinking of the attitudes of Canadian employers (public, private and institutional) toward the talent pool of scientists and scholars that our country is supposed to need so acutely in the years ahead, or their problem is going to be greatly compounded."

Military Pacts No Guarantee Of Peace--Yugoslavia Premier

Prime Minister Stambolic of Yugoslavia wants closer relations between East and West. Answering a series of questions submitted by Canadian Press reporter John Best, Stambolic said affiliation to pacts is no guarantee of security for a state. He said East-West relations have improved but could be improved still further.

By JOHN BEST

BELGRADE (CP) — Prime Minister Petar Stambolic of Yugoslavia says a conviction is growing in the world that formal affiliation with military pacts does not guarantee the security of states.

He called for more extensive collaboration between East and West and for efforts to overcome what he termed the lack of confidence in their relations.

The Yugoslav prime minister replied in writing to a list of questions submitted to him by The Canadian Press.

Stambolic was asked this view of the current Canadian initiative to bring about a settlement in Viet Nam and whether Yugoslavia would be prepared to co-operate with Canada in efforts to get negotiations started.

He replied that Yugoslavia is prepared to support every effort that could contribute to ending the war in Viet Nam and enable the Vietnamese people to decide their fate freely.

"Our two governments are conducting an exchange of opinion on this matter through diplomatic channels," he added.

Canadian diplomatic sources said the two governments have been in touch with one another constantly, both here and in Ottawa, on the Viet Nam question.

MUST BUILD CONFIDENCE

However, these contacts have been confined to mutual exchanges of information thus far and the sources emphasized that no joint action has been taken.

Yugoslavia was the organizer of an appeal by 17 nonaligned countries last year calling for a negotiated end to the Viet Nam conflict.

In answer to another question, Stambolic said that Yugoslavia, as a socialist and nonaligned country, advocates developments in international relations that would "facilitate the overcoming of bloc division."

"... The conviction is prevailing more and more in the world that the security of states is not guaranteed by formal affiliation to pacts. The struggle for peace and general security represents the only sensible and realistic basis for the security of every country."

Relations between socialist countries and a number of Western countries, especially European ones, had improved.

"However, much more could be done in this respect. In order to achieve this, it would be necessary to promote more comprehensive collaboration and to overcome more rapidly the lack of confidence which is still present in their relations."

Such a climate could be brought about by further promotion of economic, cultural, tourist and other forms of cooperation.

Stambolic said Yugoslavia's economic relations with Western countries, "our traditional economic partners," are expanding constantly and it wants to develop these still further.

However, restrictions imposed by West European trade groups created serious difficulties in promoting economic exchanges.

Changes that occur in the structure of Yugoslav foreign trade when the country becomes a full member of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade — expected later this year — would depend partly on measures taken by other member countries to liberalize the import of Yugoslav products.

Store Sales Down Due to Added Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — Department store sales in Ontario in the week ended April 9 fell 25.6 per cent below sales in the comparable week last year, the bureau of statistics reported Tuesday.

Sales had been running well ahead of year-ago levels before the five per cent provincial retail sales tax went into effect April 1, an increase from the three-per-cent rate.

The decline in Ontario sales led sales reductions of 7.4 per cent in Saskatchewan and 2.4 per cent in Manitoba, but sales were up 11.6 per cent in the Atlantic provinces, 8.1 per cent in Alberta and 1.9 per cent in British Columbia. No report was released from Quebec.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

So what happen now as the scene of action shifts to Detroit?

If you think I am going to jinx those Red Wings by calling four straight or something else ridiculous, think again.

However, facts are facts and to date, the Abel-bodied (no pun intended please) Red Wings have outplayed the Canadiens in just about every department.

— Desire is still the key. So far, no one has played poorly for Detroit. Everybody works. They have to — and they know it.

They also have a red-hot goalie in Roger Crozier. Believes is likely still shaking his head over that one save Tuesday night.

One sports buff here points out that of the dozen goals scored in the series to date the big scoring guns do not have a one. By big guns, he means Howe, Delvecchio and Ullman of Detroit, Beliveau, Rousseau and Richard of Montreal.

But as long as the Detroit trio continues to frustrate the Habs at every turn on the ice, as they have, they could play all season without scoring a goal and still earn their pay.

Right now, Montreal fans are waiting for the club's reputation to become a reality. It should be a do or die situation tonight for the Habs. By the way, the game will be TV'ed at nine, due to the time difference.

We bet on Detroit before the series started but not too confidently if the Wings can win tonight we will start considering where to spend our winnings — the whole two bits.

Banff backers for the winter Olympic games went down swinging for the third time in Rome this week, and needless to say, are very unhappy about the whole situation.

Montreal also failed in its bid for the summer Olympics and the twin defeats inspired one Montreal columnist to inquire why "Canadian have rejected Christians as lunch for the lions in three days."

The Banff delegates, as well as others in the know, blame pressure from conservationists, and back-stabbing by A. Sidney Dawes, Canada's aging Olympic delegate, and by IOC President Avery Brundage, of Chicago, for their defeat.

It is easy to understand Banff's bitterness. This was likely their best chance. They came close in 1963, edged by Grenoble, France, by three votes. It wasn't nearly as close this trip.

Montreal, making its first bid, will be back to try again.

So, the beer-drinking capitals, Munich, Germany, and Sapporo, Japan, are the winners.

Don't hold your breath until Canada's bid or bids are accepted.

The Belleville Minor Baseball Association has announced plans for a coaches and players baseball training school this weekend.

A two-day affair, on Saturday and Sunday, it will be held at the Park Dale Community Centre.

All players and coaches and any other interested persons are urged to attend. The lyke and peewee players will get their instructions from 9.00 a.m. to noon with the bantams and midgets on tap from one to four.

Inter-squad games will be played on Sunday, beginning at 1.00 p.m., giving the boys a chance to put Saturday's instructions into operation.

Local instructors working with the boys will include Al Kelleher, Bob Bunton, Bill Latchford, Russ Soule, Moe Hunter, "Duffy" Pulwell, Gord Oliver, Don Dolan, Stu Muirhead and Glen Dainard.

And Saturday has been set as the final day for player registration for minor players. Forms will be accepted at the Park Dale Field.

'Far From Out' ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Wings Just Rest

Blake Muses Habs' Defensive Lapses

By AL McNEIL

DETROIT (CP)—Despite his club's two successive losses to Detroit Red Wings in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final, Montreal coach Toe Blake figures his Canadiens are far from eliminated.

In an effort to halt Detroit's march to the Cup, Blake whipped his athletes of a train here Wednesday afternoon on their arrival from Montreal and onto a waiting bus which whisked them to Detroit's Olympia Stadium.

Once there, the team was subjected to an hour-long workout with the stress placed on shooting accuracy and line rushes.

In contrast, the Red Wings, who defeated Montreal 5-2 Tuesday night and 3-2 in the opener last Sunday, were given a day of rest by manager-coach Sid Abel.

On their arrival from Montreal by air early Wednesday, the Wings retired to their hotel for a steak dinner and then attended a movie.

Both clubs will be back in action Thursday night at the Olympia in the third game of the series.

Blake said he was pleased with the workout of his players but added: "We're not out of this series yet," Blake said and Sam Pollock, the club's general manager, echoed those sentiments.

TOE BLAKE

Blake said an example of Habs' defensive lapses came on the Wings' second goal Tuesday when right-winger Bruce MacGregor was given a clear path to the Montreal net just after the beginning of the third period.

"I'm still trying to figure out what happened to (Bobby) Rousseau and the defence on that one," Blake mused.

Rousseau had wheeled as if to check MacGregor, then changed course and sped toward his own blue line, leaving the Detroit winger in possession deep in the Montreal zone.

Blake is unhappy with his forwards, who have accounted for only two of the four goals Canadiens have picked up so far in the finals. Centre Ralph Backstrom got one in the opener along with defenceman Terry Harper while Yvan Cournoyer combined with J. C. Tremblay, another defenceman, for Habs' total output in the second game.

DIDN'T SHOOT ONCE

Blake said Backstrom played a fine game in Montreal last Sunday but "Tuesday night he was on the ice for three Detroit goals and never had a shot on the net all night."

Utility forward Cournoyer and Dave Balon will likely see more action tonight, although Blake gave no indication exactly what line changes he contemplated, if any.

He also indicated Lorne Worsley will remain his first choice for netminding duties.

Worsley has appeared in all Montreal playoff games so far. "I'd hate to make a change in the goaltenders at this time," Blake said. "(Charlie) Hodge may have stopped the net ones but could have missed the difficult ones that Worsley was good on."

Neither club reported any serious injury although Canadiens' defenceman Jean-Guy Talbot and J. C. Tremblay were nursing minor ailments.

Talbot's left eye was almost shut as a result of a clash on the boards in the second period with Detroit forward Ab McDonald. Tremblay was limping after stopping a hard shot with his ankle.

Departmental Softball Meeting Held

The Departmental Softball League will have four clubs ably five entries for the 1966 season, it was learned at a meeting last night.

The four clubs entering at the meeting are: City Hall, Public Works, Fire Department and The Intelligencer.

Public Utilities may enter. Deadline word from that club is expected at another meeting next week. That meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, May 4, at the Moira Street Firehall. The time is 7.30 p.m.

S. Finkle and A. Rump are co-presidents of the league and Bill Cooney was named secretary.

The league will play on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights and an attempt is being made to secure use of the CNRA Park.

The new OASA softball rules were adopted for the league.

LEEDS FORCES PLAYOFF

LEEDS, England - (AP) — Leeds United defeated Real Zaragoza of Spain 2-1 Wednesday night—making a playoff necessary to decide who goes through to the final of the Inter-Cities Fairs Soccer Cup. Real won the first leg 1-0 in Spain last week.

Colorado Will Bid For 1967 Winter Games

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—Colorado's Olympic committee announced Wednesday a concerted effort will be made to bring the winter Olympic Games to the state in 1976. The formal bid must be made in 1970.

Richard H. Olson of Denver, commission chairman, said that with award of the 1972 Games to Japan "there is a better probability of bringing the 1976 Games back to the North American continent."

Colorado's bid must be made by the athletic body, the International Olympic Committee, and a decision has been reached regarding this.

BARCELONA WINS

Orr, Young Star

Generals Blank Shawingan

SHAWINIGAN, Que. (CP)—Bobby Orr came up with another brilliant defensive performance and Ian Young played an outstanding game in nets as Oshawa Generals blanked Shawinigan Bruins 3-0 Wednesday night to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Canada Memorial Cup final series.

The Generals could wrap up the series with a victory here Friday night in the fourth game of the five-game series.

Orr, the Generals' high-scoring defenceman, was the offensive star as he scored a goal and assisted on markers by Danny O'Shea and Chris Hayes. All three goals were scored in the first period.

Young also played a key role in the game as he kicked out 30 shots for his blanket, including the final period when the Bruins made a strong bid to get on the scoreboard.

Philippe Myre played a good game in the Shawinigan nets as the Generals fired 38 shots at him, including 24 in the opening frame.

Orr scored what proved to be the winning goal at 1:38 of the opening period while Shawingan's Jean - Claude Marcotte was serving a minor penalty.

O'Shea moved the Generals ahead 2-0 at 5:07 while both teams were short handed. O'Shea blasted a hard shot shot past Myre after taking a pass from Orr.

Orr had a chance to get another goal when he was awarded a penalty shot midway through the first frame. However, he shot wide of the net.

Hayes clinched the victory with his goal at 15:37 as both teams were at full strength.

The Bruins came on strong in the final period, outshooting Oshawa 12-7, but Young made several good saves to keep the Bruins off the scoresheet.

Release Plans For Hull Dinner

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Wednesday, May 11, was announced as the date of the Bobby Hull Testimonial Dinner, following a meeting of the Joint Alhambra - Shrine committee last night.

Official confirmation of the date was made with Hull via telephone this morning.

The Black Hawk star left winger, who established a NHL goal-scoring record with 54 this season, arrived in the Quinte area late last night.

The dinner is in the capable hands of the Belleville Alhambra Islam Caravan and the Belleville Shrine Club.

All proceeds from the affair, expected to draw between 400 and 500 people, will be divided between the two groups and they in turn will turn it over to their pet charity projects.

Alhambra supports the retarded children and the Shrine does likewise for crippled children.

The dinner will be held at St. Michael's Auditorium and all tickets will sell for $30 each.

"With such worthy causes as crippled and retarded children and keeping in mind the significance of our outstanding guest of honor, we feel this is a reasonable charge", offered a committee spokesman.

Four hundred tickets will be sold. They are available from members of the Shrine, the Alhambra, or from two downtown merchants, Gerry O'Connor and Bud Gill.

The affair will officially get under way at 7:00 p.m. with a cocktail hour in the Nicholson gym. At the same time, young guests will be showing a color hockey movie, likely of the 1965 Stanley Cup finals between Hull's Chicago Black Hawks and the Montreal Canadiens.

The dinner itself will be served in the St. Michael's auditorium at eight o'clock sharp.

Following the dinner, the party will move to the Shrine Club where dancing will be held.

Joint chairman of the committee are Hull Stewart, of the Shrine, and Ken Fox, of Alhambra.

Master of ceremonies will be Tom Hookings, well-known radio personality from CJBQ.

A beautiful trophy was unveiled last night for presentation to Hull at the dinner. Included on the trophy is a gold puck bearing the number "54" in recognition of Hull's all-time scoring record. The trophy will be suitably inscribed and will be on display shortly in the window of O'Connor's Jewel Box.

A great deal of thought is going into the inscription, stressing the excellent leadership role Hull has played for the youngsters of the Quinte area.

Hull, a native of Point Anne, now resides on Big Island, Prince Edward County, during the summer months.

Still to be made definite is a guest speaker. Billy Reay, Hull's current coach at Chicago, and Bob Wilson, the hockey scout who signed Hull to the Chicago Black Hawk chain, are the possibilities. Confirmation of one or the other, or both, for the dinner, is expected shortly.

Special menus will be placed at each dinner setting and will include a picture of the guest of honor, plus a space for autographs.

"Hull is a man who does much for the youth of not only our area but the country", said Joint - chairman Stewart, "and we feel there will be a number of young people attending the dinner. Thus it is most fitting that monies from the project will go to the less fortunate children", he concluded.

Master of ceremonies for the up-and-coming Bobby Hull Testimonial Dinner, Tom Hookings smiles his approval of the trophy Hull will receive from the Alhambra Islam Caravan and the Belleville Shrine Club. Bill Stewart, on the left is joint chairman of the committee, representing the Shrine, and Ed Lee represents the Alhambra, on behalf of joint chairman Ken Fox.

CHESS GAME DRAWN

MOSCOW (AP)—The eighth game in the world chess championships lasted only 22 moves Wednesday before it was declared a draw at the suggestion of Tigran Petrosian, the defending champion who was playing white. Petrosian leads with 4½ points to 3½ for Boris Spassky, the challenger. A total of twenty-four matches will be played.

Politics Vetoed Banff

Writers' Opinion

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lobbying by conservation groups may have had a bearing in the failure of Banff, Alta., to obtain the 1972 Winter Olympics but politics also played a large part in the decision, Canadian sportswriters say.

The International Olympic Committee, meeting in Rome Tuesday, awarded the Games to Sapporo, Japan. It also chose Munich, Germany, over Montreal as the site of the 1972 summer Olympics.

It was Banff's third attempt to obtain the Games but Montreal was making its first try.

Some sportswriters suggested that the appeal of the Orient to foreigners and Japan's fine job in staging the 1964 summer Games at Tokyo helped to sway the decision.

Canadian wildlife and conservation groups opposed the selection of Banff as the site because they felt the Games would harm wildlife in that area of the Rocky Mountains.

Hal Sigurdson, sports editor of the Calgary Albertan, wrote: "It was not Montreal that was Olympic '72's most formidable enemy or even the sincere but misguided souls in those wildlife and conservation groups. . . . In the final analysis, Banff fell victim to the lure of the Orient. . . . Banff just can't match' sakl in Sapporo."

Writing in the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix, Cam McEmelle commented:

"They say politics doesn't enter into the Olympics, but it would appear strings were definitely pulled this time. . . . I don't think the part played by the wildlife people alone was sufficient to turn the vote against the picturesque Rocky Mountain resort."

Hal Walker of the Calgary Herald said: "Much as the International Olympic Committee likes to maintain it is not politically directed, the truth is that it is. . . . Our only course is to make sure that we withdraw from future bidding in these rigged deals. Don't let these people have the chance to whack us in the nose again."

Jack Fraser of the Montreal Gazette claimed that "Canadians have replaced Christians as lunch for the lions in Rome these days."

Vancouver Sun columnist Jim Kearney said: "They tried to sell Banff on merit alone. It just goes to show where playing by the rules in a cynical old wheeler-dealer world will get you."

Bob Pennington of the Toronto Telegram commented that Canada is "beginning to realize that smiling pledges of support too often result in a double-cross in the ballot box" by IOC delegates.

Laurie Artiss of the Regina Leader-Post applauded conservation people for many of their aims "but their concern about the deforestation may have been misdirected. The last time I looked at Banff, the neon signs, paved streets and fancy hotels were not exactly the last outposts in the wilderness."

Maurice Smith of the Winnipeg Free Press said: "The fact that the Japanese . . . did such an excellent job of staging the 464 sports extravaganza undoubtedly did much to influence the vote in their favor. . . ."

Jim Vipond of the Toronto Globe and Mail called for the resignation of Sidney Dawes, 73, of Montreal, Canada's Olympic delegate. He said Dawes "has given a lifetime to amateur sport at both the national and international level. But it is time younger men should be given an opportunity to represent Canada. . . ."

All Players On Team Are Deaf

TORONTO (CP) — An unusual team has joined the Toronto and District Soccer League this year.

All 15 players on the club, St. Francis de Salles — are deaf.

The team is sponsored by the Catholic Deaf Society and is coached by Leo Bass, who has 30-per-cent hearing.

Bass depends on lip reading and hand signs for communicating with his players. All 15 players must be reached in person or with notes to be notified of practices or changes.

The league has arranged for referees to carry flags, as well as whistles, to indicate stoppages in play to the members of St. Francis de Salles.

"Didn't Face Realities" Says Canada Blew Bid

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Why did Canada lose the 1972 Winter Olympic Games?

The thought here is that we blew them—for a couple of reasons:

1. The Banff sponsors didn't face realities.

2. They and the Canadian Olympic Association were afraid to face up to Sidney Dawes.

When blatant opposition sprang up right in Canada to the plan for staging the games in the Alberta playground, Banff sponsors reacted in a hesitant, pussy-footing manner.

And they took a wishy-washy, soft sell approach to Rome where the International Olympic Committee awarded the games to Sapporo, Japan.

KNEW ABOUT OPPOSITION

Sponsors of the Banff bid have known for a long time about the opposition of conservationists to the idea of holding the games in a national park.

Rather than fight it with every means possible, the sponsors built their appeal to the IOC around the old-fashioned idea that pro sport was taking hold of our youth and that Canada needed the games to "help her young people retain their amateur spirit."

What else is new?

This is a high-sounding, idealistic presentation for such a doddering old political organization such as the IOC.

In 1964, at Innsbruck, when Banff was turned down for a second time, the sponsors put the blame on some unidentified crank who wrote IOC president Avery Brundage saying Banff didn't want ski bums" cluttering up the landscape.

WENT TO FRANCE

At the time, Brundage and Dawes, Canadian member of the IOC, said the letter didn't influence the voting, which gave the 1968 games to Grenoble, France, by a 27-24 third-ballot vote.

The Banff people argued in effect that that the crank letter did, in fact, influence the result.

Yet this year in Rome they made a presentation that seemed to slough off the conservationists as cranks. If they believed what they said in 1964, they should have been prepared to confront the opposition of the conservationists head-on when they went before the IOC this time.

What about Dawes?

The irascible 77 - year - old Montreal millionaire has repeatedly abused Banff sponsors and the Canadian Olympic Association since the COA endorsed Banff as Canada's site years ago. They knew that Dawes was against Banff and for Garibaldi, B.C.

MUMBLED IN CORNERS

But they took it and mumbled in dark corners about the treatment they were getting. COA officers tolerated the "old man" and their favorite cliche was: "We've got to humor him. He won't be around forever."

In private, both the Banff sponsors and the COA men said they wouldn't be surprised if Dawes voted against Banff. This was in the 1964-1965 period. In private, they said he didn't lobby for Canada when Banff lost the 1968 games. In private, they'll say the same things about this latest setback.

The day after the Rome vote, the Associated Press quoted a member of the Canadian delegation, who didn't want his name used, as saying Dawes voted for Japan.

Why don't those who criticize Dawes identify themselves? All of this should have been brought out into the open years ago. What could Banff—and the COA—possibly lose? At least they would have the satisfaction of arousing public opinion against Dawes. And the fight would be a wide-open.

Back to the conservationists.

WROTE BRUNDAGE

It might be mere coincidence that Prime Minister Pearson's April 14 letter 13 days before the IOC voting to Brundage and the last-minute rush to Rome by Health Minister MacEachen followed a Montreal visit by Brundage.

The IOC president let it be known privately then that the conservation issue was a serious one.

The Banff sponsors had known these people were writing letters to IOC members saying a national park was no place for the Olympics. So did the COA. But they woke up too late.

Rangers Win Cup For 19th Time

GLASGOW (Reuters)—Rangers won the Scottish Football Association Cup for the 19th time Wednesday night, beating age-old Glasgow rival Celtic 1-0 in a final replay.

Rangers, which started the match as underdog after a scoreless draw in the first match Saturday, have not lost a cup final in 36 years and now lead Celtic 19-18 in cup victories.

As in the first game, Celtic, the current Scottish League leader, was the better side. It kept the Rangers' defence under continuous pressure, but wasted countless chances.

Burgess Pulls Up Sox; Dodgers Win

BY HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Smoky Burgess, the catcher who could pass for one of those paunchy movie bartenders, happens to be the most prolific lunch-hitter in baseball.

Wednesday he hit a two-run pinch single that helped Chicago White Sox to an 8-6 victory over Boston Red Sox.

Burgess, 39, stands five feet, eight and weighs 192 pounds—most of it centrally located.

Every time he delivers a pinch hit, he adds to his major league record. Wednesday's was his third this season and the 113th of his 17-year major league career. It helped the White Sox to their 10th victory in 13 starts.

In the only other American League game played Wednesday, Washington Senators blanked New York Yankees 2-0 on Mike McCormick's five-hitter. Other games were postponed because of rain and cold.

Chicago broke a 5-5 tie in the seventh inning on two walks and a single by Ron Hansen. Then Burgess stroked his single and while he was chugging down the first base line, Ken Berry scored from third and Hansen took off from first and raced home with the Sox' third run of the inning.

ALL SINGLES

It was his third hit in seven at-bats this season, all of them singles. "I would have been dead if I tried for another base," he said.

McCormick, who was a $30,000 bonus boy with New York Giants a decade ago, and won the National League earned-run title in 1960 with a 2.70 average, is making a comeback as a Yankee-killer.

The shutout extended McCormick's streak to 31 scoreless innings against the onetime Bombers, who now have lost 13 of 14 starts.

McCormick developed a rib trouble in 1962 and drifted to Baltimore and finally the minors before being sold to the Senators in 1965. "At 27, he's making a new career for himself in the American League.

McCormick got the runs he needed Wednesday when Ken McMullen smacked a two-run double off Al Downing in the third inning. The hit was one of three that Downing gave up but it was enough to beat the young lefthander.

Batting — Vada Pinson, Cincinnati Reds, went four-for-four, slamming two singles, a double and a triple, scoring three runs and driving in two in Cincinnati's 8-6 victory over San Francisco Giants.

Don (Little D) Sutton looks like he's ready to challenge Don Drysdale for the Big D label—both on the mound and at the plate.

A 21-year-old right-hander in only his second year of professional baseball, Sutton emphasized his rapid development Wednesday night when he posted the first complete game of his major league career in Los Angeles Dodgers' 4-1 victory over Atlanta Braves.

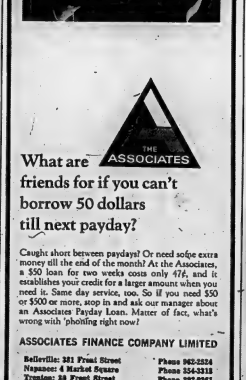
Sutton's place with the Dodgers remained questionable because of his inexperience until Drysdale and Sandy Koufax held out during spring training and manager Walt Alston looked at Sutton's minor league record.

"Sutton has improved every start," said Alston after the six-foot-one, 185 - pounder checked the Braves on five hits and struck out 10 while walking only one. "Right now he's the fourth best starter on the staff."

Sutton, however, may be after bigger things.

He's already posted two victories, and also is stealing some of Drysdale's hitting thunder. Big D was the Dodgers' leading hitter last year but little D collected two hits against the Braves and now is No. 1 on the club with six hits in 13 at-bats for a .464 average.

Drysdale is winless and hitless.



Only two other National League games were played, Houston Astros defeating St. Louis Cardinals 3 - 1 behind Dave Giusti's three-hit pitching and Cincinnati Reds' outslugging San Francisco Giants 8-6 as Vada Pinson went 4-for-4.

Sutton got more than enough hitting support from Wes Parker, who drove in three runs, and Manny Mota, who returned to the line-up with a four-hit performance after sitting out four games because of a pulled leg muscle.

Giusti allowed only a second inning single to Tim McCarver until the Cardinals scored in the ninth on Curt Flood's double.

Jim Ray Hart provided Giusti with enough working room. Clyde Wright clocked a two-run homer in the first inning, then lost the sixth with a single and eventually scored on Bob Aspromonte's double.

Pinson, who scored three runs

Amerks Oust Quebec

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rochester Americans have taken a major step in defence of their Calder Cup championship and now only Cleveland Barons stand in their way in the American Hockey League.

The Amerks Wednesday night defeated Quebec Aces, Eastern Division champs, 4-3.

The triumph gave the best-of-seven set to the Americans 4-2. They'll meet the Barons in the opener of the best-of-seven final in Toronto Saturday night.

Larry Jeffrey scored twice and Bronco Horvath, Jim Pappin, Daryl Sly and Mike Walton had one goal each for Rochester. Leon Rochefort had two goals and Ed Hoekstra one for Quebec.

Goals by Jeffrey, Horvath and Pappin shot the Amerks into a 3-0 first-period lead. Rochefort converted a pass from John Hanna and Billy Sutherland for Quebec's first goal at 8:50 of the second period. However, Sly and Walton registered for the Americans before the end of the same session to give their team a 5-1 lead.

TORONTO (CP) — Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League may move their "home" for the second time in two months.

The Americans were forced out of Rochester Memorial Auditorium early in March when the American Bowling Congress championship moved in. The bowling tournament does not conclude until early in May.

Americans, who chose Toronto as their home base, eliminated Quebec Aces from the Calder Cup playoffs Wednesday and now meet Cleveland Barons in the best-of-seven final series. The first game will be played here Saturday night, but the team may play its other home games at Buffalo Memorial Auditorium. All that's needed is the approval of the Barons.

Attendance at 15,000-seating Maple Leaf Gardens for the Rochester games has been low.

Nip Guelph 4-3

Beavers Tie Senior Set

GUELPH (CP) — Sherbrooke Beavers held off a determined rally late in the third period to defeat Guelph Regals 4-3 Wednesday night and tie their Eastern Canada Allen Cup finals 2-2.

Fifth game in the best-of-seven senior hockey series is scheduled here Friday night with the sixth in Sherbrooke Sunday. If a seventh game is necessary, it will be played Monday night in Sherbrooke.

The loss was the first in 11 playoff games at home for the Regals, champions of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series.

A power-play goal by Bill Beckman gave Sherbrooke a 3-1 lead early in the third period and Guy Black increased it to 4-1.

Dave Locksz cut the margin to two goals and Ray Ross put Guelph within one goal with less than five minutes remaining. Guelph's bid to send the game into overtime, however, failed when time ran out.

SCORE FOR BEAVERS

Maurice Thurtibide and Jean Paquette were the other Beavers marksmen.

Butch Martin counted the first Guelph goal.

The Beavers outshot the Regals 25-18.

The two teams came out of 11 listless first period tied at 1-1.

Thornton Asks For Trade

TORONTO (CP)—Dick Thornton, controversial hitchhiker with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, hasn't changed his tune. He still wants to be traded.

Thornton was an all-Canadian defensive halfback in 1963 and 1965 after joining the Bombers from Northwestern University in 1961.

But he's asked to be traded or switched to starting quarterback with the Bombers.

Now he'd rather play for Hamilton Tiger - Cats, Toronto Argonauts or Calgary Stampeders and his quarterbacking aspirations have nothing to do with it.

"Now it's because of a business opportunity," he said here. "I can't pursue my job in Winnipeg."

Thornton is a salesman for a Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., firm which manufactures heavy duty sealing and pipes, but the firm has no office in Winnipeg.

COULD WORK, PLAY

"We do have headquarters in Calgary and Toronto where it would be possible for me to work and play football," said the 26-year-old father of two. "If I played in Hamilton, I could commute to Toronto."

Thornton said he has approached Ralph Sazio, coach of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, to see if he could work out a trade with Winnipeg coach Bud Grant, but so far nothing has developed.

"I guess it would be a tough trade to make," said Thornton. "It might take a couple of frontline players for Grant to let me go."

Thornton claims to have heard a rumor that Calgary offered fullback Lovell Coleman for Thornton.

"I heard Bud told the Stampeders he'd want Coleman, plus Tony Pajeckowski and Larry Robinson for me, Thornton added.

Pajeckowski is a former winner of the award in Canada's outstanding lineman and Robinson, a defensive halfback, was named the top Canadian player in the Western Football Conference last year.

"Winnipeg can be chintzy about it or deal me," Thornton said. "The reason I came to Canada is that the Bombers sold me on the chance to follow a career outside football. Now I'd like to get the opportunity, they ought to make a trade for me so I can grab it."

Jets Whip Leafs 11-5; Suns Win

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Columbus Jets were pre-season favorites to repeat as International League champions because of a veteran cast.

The veterans contributed to three Jet victories in three starts, but one of the big factors was the bat of rookie Jim Derrick.

Of the three triumphs, Derrick accounted for two. His home run drove in both runs in a 2-0 opening-game victory over Toronto. In a 4-3 triumph over Buffalo Tuesday night, he sent home three runs with a double and single.

Just about all the Jets got into the act in the middle encounter, an 11-5 drubbing of Toronto, but Derrick was conspicuous with a triple and a single that batted in three runs.

HIT .389 LAST YEAR

Columbus' home game with Buffalo was rained out Wednesday night, along with the Syracuse-Richmond game and the Toronto - Toledo doubleheader. But Jacksonville Suns ran their record to 8-1 with a 4-2 triumph over Rochester Red Wings in 11 innings.

Estevan All Even With Kings

BY JOHN SHORT

EDMONTON (CP) — Estevan Bruins' manager Scotty Munro predicts his club, which boasts the best-of-seven Western Canada junior hockey final Wednesday with a 5-3 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings, will move in front Friday.

"We're just as big and just as tough," he said. "And I think we skate better."

Munro praised Edmonton defenders Rod Wahkenberg and Al Hamilton but showed little respect for the remainder of the club that represented the West in the Memorial Cup final six successive years.

"You can't win when you play 20 minutes of hockey," said Edmonton coach Ray Kinaschewich. "We fell behind four goals and we couldn't come back."

BLOCKS 35 SHOTS

Netminder Don Caley, picked up from Weyburn Red Wings for playoffs, blocked 35 shots to 20 for Edmonton goaltender Don McLeod.

Ted (Chief) Hodgson scored two goals, including the clincher, for the Bruins and Wayne Green, Morris Stefaniw and Gerry Walker added the others.

Hamilton scored twice and set up Falkenberg for the other.

Special Training Restricted

ROME (AP) — The International Olympic Committee ruled Wednesday that athletes who will compete in the 1968 games in Mexico City can have more than four weeks of special, high-altitude training in the last three months before the opening ceremony.

IOC president Avery Brundage of Chicago said any violation of the rule would be a "gross breach of sportsmanship" and that the committee had approved the restriction so that no athlete or country could "take an unfair advantage over other competitors."

The rule, Brundage said, does not apply to those "who normally live or train at such heights" as that of Mexico City, this clearly meant that athletes from high areas would still have an advantage, but Brundage had acknowledged this all along.

Brundage said the IOC will watch developments in the last three months and any violation of the rule could possibly involve disqualification. Then he emphasized that it was up to the national Olympic committees and the sports federations to enforce the rule so that no one "takes an unfair advantage over other competitors."

There has been much criticism of the choice of Mexico City site because it is 7,500 feet above sea level. Many critics contend this would endanger the health of athletes.

Jack Valenti Movie Czar At $125,000 a Year

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —Jack Valenti, special assistant to President Johnson, will find plenty to do in his new job as movie czar.

He was appointed as $125,000-a-year president of the Motion Picture Producers Association this week. The office has been vacant since the death of Eric Johnson in 1963.

Valenti's most serious problems concern censorship—a situation that harks back to the 1920s when some quick-buck producers purveyed nudity and blatant sex, much to moralists' alarm.

The alarm became more general after scandals involving important film names. Movie censor boards began to proliferate.

Worried film bosses banded together in the Motion Picture Association and hired Will Hays as president. As President Roosevelt's postmaster general and political effetatlan, Hays had important connections in Washington and all over the country.

Through the production code, the Hays office maintained firm control of movie content until 1945, when Hays retired. He was succeeded by Eric Johnson, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"Johnston performed the important, function of freeing money that was frozen in foreign countries during and after the war, said an industry observer. "This was money the film companies desperately needed. He also helped expand the global market."

Johnston paid little attention to the moral revolution in films during his tenancy with foreign films from abroad and shifting mores.

Decisions by the U.S. Supreme Court helped the producers in their drive for freedom of the screen. But many protectors of public morals feel restraints are needed.

The classification of films has been proposed to protect children from explicit sex and violence. Such a system has been employed in England and other countries.

"That will be Jack Valenti's first job—dealing with the censors and classifiers," one commented the observer. "He'll have his hands full."

At the Belle

"The Great Race" is Great Entertainment

"The Great Race," a comedy extravaganza the likes of which has never before been attempted on the motion picture screen, is everybody's answer to entertainment.

It roars with king - sized humor and far - out adventure; it charges frantically into the magical world of hair-raising stunts; it gives all it can with the wondrous performances by Jack Lemmon, Tony Curtis and Natalie Wood doing round-the-globe escapades.

"The Great Race" now showing at the Belle Theatre, exploded into spectacular action at Warner Bros. studios. Five-year period of incubation in the mind of Blake Edwards, its creator and director. It is he who sought the answer to the universal desire for slapstick, excitement and utter worldly adventures in the incredible — all of which is played against rich and elaborate background by richly talented people making "The Great Race" a milestone in film-making, and certainly a unique experience in entertainment history.

Jack Lemmon is malevolent black, Tony Curtis is sparkling white and Natalie Wood in happy pink are the regimental leaders of this multi-million-dollar enterprise — one which is calculated to prove, among other things, that even in 1965 automobiles were man's best friend as well as his deadliest enemy and also that film comedy can be funnier, faster and more elegant than ever before.

"The Great Race" is Technicolor and Panavision is fine family entertainment and is now showing at the Belle Theatre in Belleville. Continuous performances on Saturday and Sunday.

Lamp at Midnight Was Long, Lacked Excitement

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Lamp at Midnight was one of those well-intentioned—and period pieces of which NBC's Hall of Fame series is so fond. But as historical dramas are wont to do, it sipped along Wednesday night with the speed of an Arctic Glacier.

It was full of stately trappings and high-sounding words that during important scenes, one had the impression the actors were trying to be more fun than the viewers.

There was Melvyn Douglas, playing old Galileo, a 16th-century scientist and astronomer. His makeup included so much crepe hair and beard that he looked something like the cowardly lion of The Wizard of Oz. Sonny Wayne, usually a bundle of energy, was a fanatic priest determined to bring Galileo to his knees if not the stake for heresy.

The story had Galileo making a telescope which reinforced his belief in the Copernican theory that the earth revolves around the sun. This brought him, a devout Christian, into conflict with his church's doctrine that the earth is the centre of the universe.

The program was well produced but it was too long and lacked excitement.

Dallas Sales Executive Falls For Con Game

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Police say a Dallas sales executive has been fleeced of $21,000 by one of the oldest con games in the book: A flashing, whirring money machine.

Forgery detective Oscar Shinpaugh added, that a Fort Worth businessman dropped about $2,000 to the same bunch, believed to be a car dealer and his accomplices.

The 43-year-old Dallas man and the 25-year-old Fort Worth victim told police they fell for a money - making machine scheme that Shinpaugh called "one of the oldest and most unbelievable tricks in the books."

The detective said the Dallas man said he was approached in a suite in a large Dallas motel by a former business acquaintance in April 1.

There, the man said, he found a portable "money-making machine" replete with "ultraviolet bleaching liquids, a spinning money grinder and various bottles of colored chemicals."

CHANGES $10 TO $100

The acquaintance said the device could make $10 bills out of $1 bills. And $1,000 bills out of $100 bills.

They demonstrated by bleaching out a $1 bill in thick, clear liquid. After a few minutes in the cylinder, the bill emerged looking like a $10 bill.

The Dallas man said he was taken in, the officer related, and left the motel to get $21,000 of his own money. He returned shortly with 210 $100 bills in a suitcase.

He handed over the money and watched the men load it into the device. After waiting in another room for a few minutes, he went back to the "lab" — the men and money gone.

Olympic Bids For Games Cost $300,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Resources Minister Laing said Wednesday he has doubts whether Canada should make a third try for the Olympic Winter Games.

He said in the interview the two previous bids by Banff had cost taxpayers $300,000 "and it makes you question just how tough a league it is."

"When you go out to offer tremendous sums of money, up to millions of dollars, to attract people for 10 days, you begin to ask yourself how good a bargain it is," Mr. Laing said.

If the Banff bid had been successful, the Games would have been held in Banff National Park. Mr. Laing's cabinet responsibilities include the national parks.

Earlier in the Commons he had rejected statements by Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson that park policy contributed to Banff losing its bid for the 1972 Games.

The government had done all it could to help Banff, the minister replied. The Games would not have resulted in any serious damage to the park and certainly "no permanent damage."

Radio Station CHEX Wants Power Increase

OTTAWA (CP)—A proposed increase in power for radio station CHEX in Peterborough was asked Wednesday before a public hearing of the Board of Broadcast Governors.

J. A. McArthur, president of CKLY in nearby Lindsay, branded the boost as an attempt to collar business in his station's area.

Wally Newegan, manager of CHEX, said a power increase to 10,000 watts from 5,000 would allow his station to get a good signal into the Bancroft area and the Haliburton highlands to the northeast; the station had no ambitions toward Lindsay, northwest of Peterborough.

The power increase might improve the CHEX signal in some places in the Lindsay area but would not have "the predominant signal."

The BBG will announce a recommendation on the matter later.

Moira

MOIRA — Mrs. John Holden spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Earl Smith at Bloomfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Mclnroy enjoyed a bus trip to Chalk River Falls on Saturday.

Moira U.C.W. met on Thursday at the church and did some house cleaning. At 3.30 the president, Mrs. Don Mclnroy called the meeting to order and Mrs. David Mansley read a prayer.

On Sunday morning after church service Mr. Owen Ketcheson spoke a few words of farewell to Mr. Hughie Palmer before his departure to the western province to start a new career. Mr. Douglas Farrell made the presentation of a purse of money. He also presented Hugh with a Bible from the Sunday School.

Lenox Excitement

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Lenox Hill Hospital, the setting for the new CBS-TV series, "Mr. Broadway," is a place where the action is fast and furious.

Within the first 15 minutes of the premiere episode Wednesday night, a man was shot, a woman was stabbed, a baby was born and a man died.

Not to mention the fact that a man was arrested for the murder of his wife, a girl was arrested for prostitution and a man was arrested for the murder of his wife.

Quite a night at Lenox Hill.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For April 29

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You can gain what you desire. Key is pacing, sensible attitude. You do require cooperation of associates. Know this — don't permit impulse to rule logic.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Battle tendency to be impatient. Security, happiness, possessions may be at stake. Be thorough — utilize abilities to fullest. Associates who urge quick decision may not be fully informed.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Fine for promoting long-lasting relationship. Real accomplishment results if you overcome tendency to scatter forces. Concentrate efforts. Aid may come from source close at hand.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Review community interests, be aware of facts regarding professions, property. Some revisions due. Financial prospects improve if you keep alert for creative opportunities.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Deceptive conditions may exist where finances are concerned. Keep tight rein over budget. Be aware of what goes out — and why. Then you achieve desired results.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Outside interests appear attractive . . . but best to take long close look. What appears sure and safe may prove risky. Don't invest in schemes. Keep on solid ground.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Tackle unfinished business. Realize responsibilities cannot be permitted to pile up. Remember promises to those less fortunate. Show special concern for loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Some delays may be necessary. Use time constructively. Give and receive . . . make concessions in some areas. Highlight unique approach, glamor. Study Libra message.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Future may now be closer than you think. Means plan, study various methods. Stress independence, creative projects. Includes writing, publishing, making known your views.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Friends can aid in fulfillment of wishes. But, basically, you must take initiative. Don't wait for others to begin project. Lead the way . . . set sterling example.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Beautify surroundings. Strive to improve relations with mate, partner. Don't neglect details. Check with those in authority. Applies mainly to legal affairs. Read fine print.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Seek support of reliable individuals. Means don't go too far afield. What you require is available — and familiar. Know that act accordingly. Hint available in Aquarius message.

* * *

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are intuitive, able to teach, to make complicated subjects clear. You often surprise friends with store of specialized knowledge.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Cycle high for Virgo, Libra. Special word to Taurus: When young person offers creative suggestion . . . listen!

Eight Children Perish in Fire, Parents Away

HULL, Que. (CP) — Eight small children died Thursday night when fire swept the interior of their frame duplex just minutes after their mothers left for a church bingo about four blocks away.

Four others, including the 13-year-old girl taking care of the group, managed to get out of the house.

Dead are seven of the 11 children of Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Larcher, who lived in half of the two-storey building, and the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Emond, who formerly occupied the other half of the building.

Police identified the victims as: Louise, 10, Guy, 9, Benoit, 7, Carole, 6, Marius, 4, Lise, 2, and Anne, 1, all of the Larcher family, and Charlise Emond, 2.

Four other Larcher children, Diane, 12, Lise, 11, Christian, 3, and 15-day-old Marie-Sylvie—escaped.

Mr. Larcher, 33, was at work driving a taxi when the fire broke out just before 8 p.m.

Police said Mrs. Emond brought her daughter to stay with the Larcher children while she and Mrs. Therese Larcher, 31, went to the bingo. The fire alarm was given by a neighbor about 10 minutes after the two women left.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

Fire Chief Roger Poirres had no idea how the fire started.

He said in an interview the victims were found scattered throughout the house. Three were in the livingroom downstairs, some were in their beds upstairs and one was found "in a closet, apparently trying to hide."

Armand Guitard, a 63-year-old neighbor, told reporters he heard someone screaming in the street. It was Diane, "ask for her body. She kept saying 'My family is in there.'"

Mr. Guitard said another man boosted him to the top of a tank at the rear of the building and that he broke an upstairs window with a stick.

Dense smoke poured out the window and he was unable to get inside. "I shouted for the children but there was no answer."

Tension Runs High In Republic

By LUIS SIGARAN

SANTO DOMINGO (Reuters) — Tension ran high here today after six persons were wounded when U.S. troops opened fire on stone wielding demonstrators protesting American military intervention in the Dominican Republic.

Police said the shots appeared to have fallen wide of the mark and struck six innocent bystanders, including two boys aged 14 and 15.

Two of the wounded were reported in serious condition.

The incident followed the accidental shooting Tuesday of a 13-year-old shoeshine boy, killed by a bullet from the rifle of a U.S. guard outside the American Embassy residence. The rifle fell to the ground and went off as the boy was about to shine the sentry's boots.

Thursday's shooting incident took place at a U.S. checkpoint on a bridge. Soldiers manning the checkpoint were reported to have opened fire when threatened by the demonstrators.

BURN U.S. FLAGS

Meanwhile, thousands of other demonstrators gathered near the U.S. Embassy and set fire to American flags.

The demonstration was organized by the Dominican Students Federation in mark the first anniversary of the landing of U.S. troops in the Caribbean republic following the April 24 revolt against the ruling junta.

Roads leading to the embassy were closed by police but a number of demonstrators on motor scooters managed to break through, shouting anti-American slogans.

Hundreds of others began also shouting "Out with the Yankees" and "If the Yankees don't go home they will die."

Riding Changes Attacked

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—The ghost of Elbridge Gerry haunted the Commons Thursday.

Mr. Gerry was governor of Massachusetts in 1812 when a method was devised of shaping electoral districts so that one party could get the best of things—hence the term "gerrymander."

MPs from Alberta and Ontario did everything but say that their constituencies had been so treated.

The debate on redistribution of federal ridings, now in its third day, was supposed to last until next Wednesday. But government House Leader Mcllraith said Thursday night most of the 27 objections signed by 158 MPs may be cleared away before the House takes its weekend break.

As a result, Monday and Tuesday might be devoted to a supply debate with Wednesday set aside for Manitoba objections and the end of the redistribution debate.

All the arguments will be sent to 10 independent electoral commissions but the commissioners — judges, lawyers, electoral officials—are under no obligation to make changes. The commissions were established to reapportion the boundaries of Canada's 265 federal ridings.

The work has resulted in 304 ridings, one less, to be contested in the next federal election. In some areas, constituencies have disappeared. In others they have been sliced or enlarged.

MANY MPs UNHAPPY

The affected MPs in many cases don't take the changes kindly.

Lawrence H. Kindt (PC—Marine) burst into Alberta French to express his feelings about the changes in Alberta.

"I was confronted, like everyone else, with a fate accompleseye", Mr. Kindt said.

Part of this was the inclusion of the Waterton Lakes part of his riding in a gigantic new one to be called Rocky Mountain.

It stretched from the Montana border to the Peace River and includes three national parks—Waterton Lakes, Banff and Jasper—and all the coal miners, Indians, bears and mountain lions along the way.

"To get into this Rocky Mountain constituency, one would have to travel in and out like a stitching machine," Maynard Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said of the 700-mile-long giant.

PM Asked If Mounties Knew Of Scandal Involving Any MP

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons uproar may follow RCMP Commissioner George B. McClellan's sworn testimony Thursday that Prime Minister Pearson sought from him in late November, 1964, any "scandalous" information about any member of Parliament in the previous 10 years.

The commissioner told the Gerda Munsinger inquiry that Mr. Pearson made the request at a meeting in the prime minister's office in the last two or three days of November, 1964.

This was only a few days after conservative MP Erik Nielsen made his first Commons charges Nov. 25, 1964, about influence-peddling in high Liberal circles which resulted in the royal commission into the Lucien Rivard affair.

Commissioner McClellan said the meeting was attended by then justice minister Favreau who lost that portfolio after the airing of the Rivard case—and, he believed, by Gordon Robertson, cabinet secretary. He testified:

"I was asked if I had any information in my files of a nature which reflected improperly or wrong-doing on the part of any member of the government, the previous day."

"I was then asked, after I answered that, (the commissioner did not say what his answer was) if I had any information indicating any improprity or anything of a scandalous nature involving any MP in any party over the last 10 years.

"I was of course aware that the matters we are discussing today, in part at least, were the subject of gossip and in answer to the direct question of the prime minister I said, 'yes, sir.'

"He asked what it was and I referred to this (Munsinger) file. The prime minister's words were to the effect, 'well, I think I better see it.'

"That I did."

"Thank you very much," said Conservative counsel C. P. H. Carson who cross examined Commissioner McClellan throughout most of Thursday's hearing.

He said on oath that he personally delivered the Munsinger file to Mr. Pearson Dec. 8, 1964, in the presence of Mr. Robertson and not any week later. Mr. Pearson said April 1, 1966, after he had asked for its return. The Munsinger inquiry was established by the Liberal government March 14.

Case Shocked Fleming, Dief Said He Knew All

Under cross-examination by Arthur Fulton, counsel for Donald Fleming, the commissioner acknowledged he had not brought to Mr. Fleming's attention Pierre Sevigny's alleged involvement until late January, 1966, following become justice minister Aug. 8, 1962, succeeding Davie Fulton.

Mr. Fleming testified that he had not even heard any gossip about the Munsinger case until Mr. Justice Spence and Commissioner McClellan came to him about it in late January, 1963.

He had been shocked, upset and disturbed. He had gone immediately to Mr. Diefenbaker with this information.

The then prime minister had "answered very swiftly" that he knew all about the case, that Mr. Fulton had told him about it, that he had called in Mr. Sevigny for a talk and that he was satisfied there had been no breach of security.

Mr. Diefenbaker testified Wednesday he had informed Mr. Fulton about the affair Dec. 7, 1965, and was under the "distinct impression" Mr. Fulton had gone immediately to Mr. Diefenbaker.

He also said the association between Mr. Sevigny and Mrs. Munsinger ceased immediately after Dec. 7, 1960.

Jules Dupre, Mr. Sevigny's lawyer, has said Mr. Sevigny intends to testify.

Mr. Justice Spence will be hearing Supreme Court cases next week and the inquiry is adjourned until Monday, May 9, at 10:30 a.m.

Frantic and Confused Moves Made to Avert CBC Strike

OTTAWA (CP)—The threat of a strike by CBC producers, which could cripple domestic programming, draws nearer today amid frantic and confused efforts to find a solution.

With a strike deadline set for 10 p.m. EDT Sunday, CBC producers and administrators kept up their war of words Thursday but both sides made conciliatory gestures.

Tom Koch, president of the Toronto Producers' Association, sent a telegram to CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet saying the strike deadline will be suspended if two conditions are met:

1. Agreement by the CBC management to suspend the removal of the co-hosts of This Hour Has Seven Days, Laurier LaPierre and Patrick Watson, pending an inquiry.

2. Setting up an inquiry by Guy Cearra, CBC vice-president for administration, into the producers' grievances, with the terms of reference acceptable to both sides.

About 90 minutes later, Mr. Koch sent another telegram, this time to Prime Minister Pearson, offering to suspend the strike during mediation of the dispute.

Aides in the prime minister's office spent the rest of the day trying to clarify whether the producers want outside mediation, an informal CBC inquiry or both. The situation remained unclear Thursday night.

Mr. Pearson offered to use "the good offices" of his government to mediate. But he told the Commons that the method of mediation remained to be decided. The government did not wish to interfere with CBC administration.

Late in the evening, Mr. Ouimet sent a telegram to the Commons broadcasting committee saying he will be pleased to meet Mr. Pearson or anyone he may designate "to discuss the present situation and its resolution."

Mr. Ouimet, beginning a second seven-year term at $40,000 annually, was again criticized by CBC personnel at hearings of the House broadcasting committee Thursday.

War Fever Begins to Grip U.S. Says Anxious Senator

NEW YORK (AP) — Senator J. W. Fulbright says "a war fever" has begun to grip the United States and could lead to global conflict.

At the very least, he adds, it is crippling President Johnson's "Great Society" programs.

U.S. military involvement in Viet Nam has "generated the beginnings of a war fever in the minds of American people and their leaders," the chairman of the Senate Foreign relations committee told a dinner meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers Association's bureau of advertising.

Fulbright said as war casualties affect more and more American homes, "the patience of the American people will give way to mounting demands for an expanded war, for a lightning blow that will get it over with at a stroke."

Judge Rules CIA Agent Can Stay Mum

BALTIMORE (CP - AP) — A U.S. federal judge ruled Thursday that an agent for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency need not divulge information about his activities as an agent, even though he is being sued for slander by a Canadian citizen.

Eerik Heine, 46, of Rexdale, Ont., an Estonian native and naturalized Canadian, has sued the agent, Juri Raus, for $15,000, because Raus said he was a Soviet agent.

Judge Roszel Thomsen of U.S. district court made his ruling at a three-hour, pre-trial hearing in the case, which Heine filed against Raus two years ago.

Heine contended that Raus, 36, of Hyattsville, Md., denounced him as an agent of the Soviet secret police in 1952 at a meeting of the Estonian community in New York. Both men are Estonian natives. Raus is a naturalized American.

Raus, coached openly by lawyers at the court session here, admitted he was in the pay of the CIA, but had little else to say. The CIA submitted a statement to the court that to divulge further information "would be contrary to the security interests of the United States."

PLAINTIFF CHARGES CIA AGENT WITH SLANDER — Eerik Heine, 46, of Rexdale, Ont. (middle) ponders words of his lawyers following a pretrial hearing in Federal Court at Baltimore. Heine has accused Juri Raus, an agent of the Central Intelligence Agency, of slandering him by calling him an agent of the Soviet Secret Police. Flanking Heine are left, Ernest C. Raskauskas, and right, Robert J. Stanford. (AP Wirephoto)

Troops Presenting Arms Open Fire on Sultan

ADEN (AP)—Troops loyal to the sultan of Beihan and Oman are scouring the desert for 29 mutineers after poor shooting by rebellious soldiers saved the Arabian Peninsula ruler from assassination.

The attempt on the life of the sultan, said Bin Talmur, occurred Tuesday during a parade in the port of Salalah. As the troops were presenting arms, five soldiers broke formation and fired on the ruler.

The shots missed the sultan but two of his bodyguards and a Pakistani officer were killed. Three rebels were killed by loyal troops and 13 other mutineers were arrested.

Two Pakistani officers said an Arab corporal were wounded and were flown to Aden by the RAF, which has a staging depot at Salalah.

One of the Pakistani officers, a lieutenant-colonel, received serious bayonet wounds in the stomach when he struggled with a mutineer.

Obituaries

MAJ. G. P. HEPBURN JR. (Picton)

Full military honors were accorded at the funeral of Major George Patterson Hepburn, Jr. here this morning. Major Hepburn died Tuesday, April 26 in hospital at Petawawa.

More than 100 troops of the 1st Battalion, Canadian Guards formed an escort at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene. Also taking part in the service were a firing party and a rifle and drum corps. Members of all three services attended the service which was conducted at the G. R. Whaitam Funeral Home and the Church of St. Mary Magdalene.

The death of Major Hepburn at the age of 37 came as a great shock to relatives and friends. He was a member of the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Guards and had been serving in Cyprus with the unit which was acting as a United Nations Peace Keeping Force. He took ill there and was returned to Canada, March 1. Complications of his illness caused his untimely death.

He was the son of Major and Mrs. George P. Hepburn and was born and educated in Picton. He leaves his wife, the former Rosemary Hemmings and three children, David, Margaret and Elizabeth.

WILLIAM J. JOYCE (R.R. 1 Hatrell)

The funeral of Mr. William J. Joyce of R.R. 1 Hatrell was held on Wednesday afternoon, April 27th with a service conducted in the MacKenzie Funeral Home at Madoc by Rev. J. H. Thompson.

An L.O.L. memorial service was conducted in the funeral home on Tuesday evening and was under the direction of Trainor Lodge No. 500.

Bearers were Stan Thompson, Lindsay Tanner, Arthur Hagerman, Milton Reid, John Courtney and Clare Tanner.

Interment took place in White Lake Cemetery.

BURTON MARTIN REID

A life-long resident of Belleville, Mr. Burton Martin Reid, 86 Ashley Street died Thursday evening in Kingston General Hospital following a short illness. He was in his 42nd year.

A member of St. Michael's Church, he was the son of John Reid and the late Mrs. Reid, and is survived by his wife, the former Stella Campbell.

Mr. Reid also leaves three sons, Kenneth of Belleville, and Burton Jr. and Richard, (both at home); and three daughters, Marie (Mrs. Douglas Johnson) of Belleville, Doris (Mrs. Melville Leger) of Trenton, and Nancy Ann, at home.

Also surviving are three brothers Jack, Raymond, and Albert Reid, all of Belleville, and three sisters, Mrs. Fred (Luella) Gisburne of Hamilton, and Mrs. Eva McFarland and Mrs. Albert (Thelma) Kelley, both of Belleville. Mr. Reid had five grandchildren.

Mr. Reid will be resting at the Thompson Funeral Chapel until the service Monday morning. Funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

THOMAS HAMILTON ERWIN

The funeral of Thomas Hamilton Erwin was held Thursday afternoon from the chapel of the John R. Bush Funeral Home to White Lake Cemetery. Mr. Donald E. Hodgins officiated.

The bearers were Carman Grille, Maitland Grille, Harleigh Hamilton, Fred Westover, Cyril MacMullen, and Frank Hamilton.

MRS. ELLA MAY MIKEL

TRENTON — A native of Napanee, Mrs. Ella May Mikel of 80 Wallbridge Street, died at Trenton Memorial Hospital on Sunday. She was 77 and had been ill six weeks.

On Wednesday, Rev. J. W. Anderson of St. George's Anglican Church conducted a service at the Rushnell Funeral Centre.

Bearers were Arthur Bird, George McDonald, Aubrey Barr, John Gookie Squiers, Murray Lloyd and Wm. Weese.

Interment was in Mount Evergreen Cemetery.

A Trenton resident for the past 30 years, Mrs. Mikel was the widow of Albert (Patsy) Mikel, and the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Martin Maybell of Napanee. She is survived by her daughters, Mrs. Sidney (Mary) Yardy, Mrs. Norma Humphrey and Majorie and her sons, Gerald and Hubert, all of Trenton.

Mrs. Mikel was the sister of Mrs. Mary Moon and Leonard Markel, both of Napanee.

Continue Hearing

Two of 4 Accused of Holdup Identified as Car Occupants

The preliminary hearing into the $18,000 bank robbery March 31 at the Bank of Montreal, Frankford, moves into its second day here today.

The hearing was adjourned after defence counsel Robert Temple requested the court that Dr. MacDonald, manager of the Frankford Bank of Montreal, be called to the stand to allow for some cross examination. Mr. MacDonald was not in the courtroom at the time. The magistrate Baker adjourned the hearing until today.

The four accused, Maurice Langis, 31, Armand Philippe Bisson, 28, Victor Tessier, 42, and Gilles Gendreau, 27, are facing five charges each, one each of armed robbery, two counts of possession, one of being an accomplice for a firearm and one of possession of a stolen vehicle.

They elected trial by judge and jury.

Two witnesses, Harry Wickson and Wilfred Tessier, positively identified two of the accused, Langis and Tessier, as being in a speeding car in Frankford.

Mr. Wickson, a Frankford councillor who was driving alone in his truck near the bank when the robbery occurred, said he saw the car come south on Wellington St., and turn West on Mill St.

He said the driver had no mask, though the other three did have, and he identified Langis as the driver.

Mr. Temple asked, "You said the driver had been only two feet of his face for one, two or three seconds; you can positively identify this man as the driver of that car?"

"I have him," Mr. Wickson said.

"Isn't it possible that having never seen a person before and having seen him once and just seeing the side of his face for a few seconds, you could make a mistake?" Temple asked.

"I suppose it could be."

"It could be, but is it a mistake?" asked Crown Attorney John Pringle.

Mr. Wickson said, "I'm pretty sure of what I saw."

SAW SPEEDING CAR

William Henry Reynolds, a deputy police officer in Frankford, said he was driving behind an employee of the Village of Ameliasburgh, manager of the Frankford Bank of Montreal, he called to the stand to allow for some cross examination. Mr. MacDonald was not in the courtroom at the time. The magistrate Baker adjourned the hearing until today.

The four accused, Maurice Langis, 31, Armand Philippe Bisson, 28, Victor Tessier, 42, and Gilles Gendreau, 27, are facing five charges each, one each of armed robbery, two counts of possession, one of being an accomplice for a firearm and one of possession of a stolen vehicle.

SAW SPEEDING CAR

William Henry Reynolds, a deputy police officer in Frankford, said he was driving behind an employee of the Village of Ameliasburgh, manager of the Frankford Bank of Montreal, when he noticed the stolen car. Constable Ray Rucktshll, Lorne Bastedo, Phillip Woodacre, Neal Green and Robert Green. (Neal and Robert Green are nephews of Mr. deceased).

Interment was in St. George's Cemetery.

A well-employed vending machine operator, Mr. Pane had lived in Kingston for the past 15 years.

Mr. Pane is survived by his wife, the former Doreen Gay-den; two daughters, Linda and Lisa; his father, H. S. Pane; four sisters, Mrs. Wm. (Florence) Lawrence, Mrs. Gerald W. (Isobel) Chambers and Mrs. Gerhard (Jennie) Hendrick, of Kingston and Mrs. Michel (Lucille) Chouinard of Arvida, P. Q. and a brother, Frederick, of Sandusky, Mich., U.S.A.

"I noticed the last man getting in the car had a dark coat and cap on," Mr. Martin said. The other passed me with a light coat off and I saw he wore a grey sweater.

"When I got to the roadblock near Cobourg, I saw the police had stopped the car."

Mr. Martin identified Tessier as the man he saw get out of the car at the roadblock. He said under cross examination that he probably would not have thought anything about the action of the accused in stopping the car on the 401 and running to get his head but he knows now that he's been a bank robbery the day before.

Sgt. Constable Stanley Grey, O.P.P. Cobourg Detachment, testified he stopped the 1957 Chevrolet containing the four accused at 1:15 p.m. March 31. He identified Langis as the driver and said Bisson was in the front seat, Tessier was in the rear right of the car and Gendreau was in the rear left of the car.

"I asked the driver who he was," Sgt. Grey said. He identified himself as Maurice Langis from Montreal.

"I asked him where he was going and he said he was going to look for work in Toronto.

"I noticed Gendreau had his shoes off and the bottom of his trousers appeared to be wet.

NUMBER CHECKED

"Then Mr. Martin came along and showed me a piece of paper with a licence number on it. It was the same number as the one on the car I had stopped.

Sgt. Grey testified he took the men to Cobourg first then took them to Belleville later in the evening. He said that during the trip to Belleville, Langis and Gendreau who were in the rear, fell asleep.

Const. K. G. Burbidge, O.P.P. Belleville, said he also stopped a 1957 Chevrolet at 2:30 p.m. May 31 near Trenton but there was only one man in it at the time. He identified Langis as the man.

Const. Gord Oliver testified that he also found furnishings found on abandoned Oldsmobile by the bush west of Glen Miller. He said the hood of the car was warm when he touched it.

About 30 feet from the car, he found a pair of black pantyhose with both legs sewn, hanging on a bramble bush. Down by the road I noticed four sets of footprints."

He said none of the footprints matched the shoes the four accused were wearing when they were apprehended.

DOG SEARCHED

Const. Gary D. Walker, O.P.P. Campbellville, who participated in the search of the Glen Miller area with his police dog Butch, said he was the 19th time Butch had been used to date. He said this particular search was different as they were told Butch to locate what he was looking for.

He testified that Butch found a brownish green duffle bag April 2. "The bag was later found to contain money, guns, ammunition and articles of clothing." The bag was found about 7 p.m. on Lot 5, Concession 5 in Murray Township.

Sgt. Harold Bowring, who testified yesterday morning was recalled to the stand in the afternoon by Crown Attorney John Pringle.

He testified that at the time the four accused were found they had a total of $206.17 in their possession. He also said a brown jacket was found in the trunk of the abandoned Oldsmobile, was sent to Toronto for testing. "I had a piece of cloth with the word 'rear pocket of Langis' pants," he said. "Langis wore brown pants and the one rear button was missing."

Tessier testified a piece of plastic raincoat found near the car matched up with one of the cloth found abandoned in the woods.

The hearing is expected to end today.

No Particular
Brand of Beer
Found to Blame

QUEBEC (CP) — A special committee of the provincial health department reported Thursday the deaths of heavy beer drinkers in the Quebec City area resulted from a rare heart disease called cardiomyopathy.

A total of 40 persons are known to have contracted the disease since last November. The disease produced heart injuries.

The report said, "the committee is convinced that this heart lesion was caused by the association of several factors.

"It could be that two or three of these factors, as the members of the committee have asserted that many of the wounded persons drank large quantities of beer each day.

"But at present, inquiries have shown that no particular brand of beer is to blame."

VIRUS PLAYS PART

Another factor "was the frequency of virus infections in the area."

The committee said it based its report on four weeks of technical and microscopic investigations, including clinical tests of beer samples.

Those who died did not all drink the same brand of beer, the report said.

After the discovery of the deaths, Dow Brewery Ltd. in Quebec City recalled all of its beer in the area and destroyed 1,000,000 gallons down the drain.

The committee said other brands besides Dow are being investigated in connection with the deaths, but a spokesman declined to give any names.

Madoc Gold Rush of '67 Recalled at Society Meet

In a meeting held at the Corby Library auditorium Thursday night, the Hastings County Historical Society marked the 100th anniversary of the Madoc Gold Rush of 1866-67.

First speaker was former president, Gerald Boyce, who described how on August 15, 1866, the discovery was made by a team of prospectors under Marcus Powell of Madoc Township.

Mr. Boyce described the community. The discovery was made on lot 18 of the concession of Madoc Township and led to the famous Richardson Mine.

Unfortunately the mine was handicapped by several disputes over ownership, theft of the gold, bad luck, and the greediness of the gold pockets, and the lack of capital to develop the property. It is said that over $100,000 worth of gold was taken out of the mine, although estimates say that was spent on mining operations.

Belleville soon came to be called as "Gateway to the Golden North" as hundreds of "miners, speculators, blackleggers, and confidence men" moved through on their way north by stages to the Madoc and Marmora areas. Hotels were built in both villages to accommodate the inrush of people and a force of mounted police was stationed near the Richardson Mine to preserve law and order.

Many other gold mines were opened including the Deloro, Dickenson, Cordova, Williams Golden Fleece, Hawkeye, and Gatling mines, the latter established in the spring of 1867 four miles east of Marmora Village by C. J. Gatling the brother of the inventor of the celebrated Gatling Gun. None of these was a long-lasting success. Those who did not all gold was obtained in each case.

READ OVER DIARY

Also speaking at last night's historical society meeting was Mac Wallbridge, who read selections from the diary of an anonymous Trenton prospector, a diary covered the period after 1857 when the writer first visited the stage coach built by the Madoc area to help develop the Tudor Mine. Mining methods were outlined, including the building of fires and the use of explosives to loosen the ore. On one occasion in early spring the shaft became so hot, that snow had to be thrown in to cool it before work could be resumed at the Mission Worker Special Speaker At Service

TRENTON — Miss Ruby Walker, a worker in Japan is called the "inner-City" of Tokyo, will be the guest speaker at the regular morning service of worship at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Miss Walker, an employee of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, works with the needy and under-privileged people who, many times through no fault of their own, find themselves in physical and spiritual straits in a strange and big city, often in a foreign land. Many times these people are victims of circumstances, have fallen prey to the drugs and narcotics that have become a plague in the large cities of Japan. Miss Walker, in her work will speak at this special service on Sunday morning. The service will be conducted by the minister of the church, Douglas A. Wilson, and music will be under the direction of the organist and choir director, Mr. Harold J. McNish.

Women Will Raise Money For Swim Pool

TRENTON — A group of Trenton women have taken on the project of raising money for the United Service Clubs' swimming pool in the high school, and the first project they will sponsor will be the presentation of a play in the school, May 17.

Meanwhile, members of the swimming pool committee are being asked to speak before various town groups. This week, Rotary president Ken Mitchell spoke to the members of the Queen Elizabeth Home and Richard Lawrence explained that the $60,000 pool project is being carried out by Rotarians, Kinsmen and Kinettes, with the assistance of other groups and individuals.

Three Cheese Factories To Be Consolidated For Year-round Output

The Ontario and Federal governments will contribute $55,000 toward, the $133,000 over-all cost of the new addition of the Eldorado Cheese and Butter Co-Operative at Eldorado.

The announcement of the provincial grant under the provisions of the Ontario Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act, was made yesterday by Clarke T. Rollins, M.L.A. for Hastings East, and by Hon. William A. Stewart, Minister of Agriculture.

The Eldorado Cheese and Butter Co-Operative is consolidating with the Madoc and Oak Leaf Factories and the new plant addition at Eldorado will provide a year round milk outlet for dairy farmers in the Madoc district.

NO OTHER OUTLETS

At the present time there are no other outlets for milk produced in the area and a survey of the area indicated that 80 per cent of the farmers depend on milk production for the greater part of their income.

The Eldorado plant last year had a dairy production of 223,000 pounds and has a proven record of good management and is on a sound financial basis.

The present plant at Eldorado was constructed about 15 years ago and at the same time was considered one of the most modern factories in the district.

At that time four factories in the Eldorado area consolidated to form the cheese co-operative and since then the Springhill and Alexander factory patrons have been taken in.

BUILDING NEARLY UP

Now with the new addition, milk from a total of eight former factories will be processed. The plant will have a capacity of between 50,000 and 60,000 pounds per day.

Construction of the new plant addition got underway in January by Wilfred Spencer and is expected to be completed in another week or ten days following which the latter will commence the season's operation. Operation in the near future will be on a two-shift basis.

The new addition will provide a milk receiving room, a 60-ton milk powder for six 18,000 pound milk vats. A new boiler has also been installed.

SPEAKS TO ENGINEERS — Mr. Donald B. Redfern (centre), president of the 23,000-member Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario, last night addressed the Quinte Chapter of the A.P.E.O. at its annual supper meeting in the Hotel Quinte. Shown with Mr. Redfern are (at left) Alderman J. Deacon and Mr. H. N. Britton, chairman of the local chapter for the past year.

Engineers Denied Prestige Given Other Professions

"Engineers are often concerned that they are not accorded the same 'status', 'recognition', or 'prestige' which a community and the individuals thereof usually accord the doctor or lawyer," said D. B. Redfern last evening.

Speaking to the annual supper meeting of the Quinte Chapter of the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario, Mr. Redfern, president of the A.P.E.O. outlined some of the reasons for this situation. "The employed engineer very seldom comes face to face with the sum of things which he has helped to create, there is no personal service, no personal contact, there is no privileged communication, and perhaps most important of all, nobody ever really 'needed' an engineer."

By membership the engineering profession in Ontario outnumbers doctors 4 to 1, lawyers 8 to 1, architects 15 to 1, and veterinarians 20 to 1, although there are somewhat fewer engineers in the province than teachers or nurses, he said.

Making reference to recent moves to bring legal collective bargaining to the engineering profession, in effect "the formation of engineering unions under law", Mr. Redfern said that many engineers feel this would "reduce the professions to a trade, from which it has only partially recently graduated." He said that "employers of professional engineers, who are highly trained and fully experienced, have not generally taken any steps to relate the pay of these employees suitably to that of the electrician, the pipefitter or the bricklayer. Engineers' devotion to their profession and to their public responsibilities does not seem to have been adequately valued, comparatively, by employers."

NEED TO STUDY

With the doubling of technical information available every 10 or 10 years, programs of continuing education for those practising technical careers are becoming necessities. The Association has been active in working with universities to provide some of these courses, both in attendance and day, which are now in demand."

Mr. Redfern added "the profession holds many satisfactions for many people. The training is valuable for the pursuit of many careers other than that of technical practice. Probably more than any members of other profession engineers are equipped to move through several careers during their lifetime."

Executive building meeting report of the nominating committee on chapter officers for the coming year was accepted. Elected as chair in a mass was Walker; vice chairman, J. E. Tomlinson; secretary G. A. Bradford; treasurer H. C. Nettleton. Members of the chapter's executive for the coming year will be A. D. Revill, E. Matter, W. C. Tatham, N. Thomson, and R. H. Kraft. The chapter's auditors will be E. Rickards and E. Pugh.

Rival Speaker Against Lesage Will Be Dupuis

MONTREAL (CP)—Yvon Dupuis, former federal cabinet minister without portfolio who last week was fined $5,000 on an influence-peddling charge, says he will be a rival speaker next day when Quebec Premier Jean Lesage launches his provincial election campaign in Sherbrooke.

Mr. Dupuis, describing himself as "the conscience of Jean Lesage," said Thursday he has asked Lib in Sherbrooke for a short distance from the Armories where Mr. Lesage will speak Sunday.

He said his friends are organizing a "committee for the defence of Yvon Dupuis" to help finance his activities, which he said are strictly non-partisan in a political sense.

His fine last week ended a long trial on charges of accepting $10,000 from St. Johns, Que., chiropractor Roch Desjauriers to help the latter obtain a provincial racetrack licence. The licence was never granted.

Mr. Dupuis was asked to leave the federal cabinet by Mr. Pearson after the allegations of influence-peddling.

In the federal election of Nov. 8, Mr. Dupuis, standing as an unofficial Liberal candidate in the St. Jean-Napierville-Iberville constituency, lost his seat to a Progressive Conservative.

HITS TREE

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — High school student Ian Bynman, 18, was killed Thursday when the car he was driving hit a tree.

Accused Admits Hitting Victim With an Axe

CHESTER, England (Reuter) — Peter Hindley, charged with three sex murders, today admitted that he hit one of the victims with an axe "and he shut up," but claimed the chief prosecution witness was an accomplice in the act.

He said he and David Smith, then 17, hit Edward Evans, also 17, after he resisted their attempt to rob him.

Brady, 27, and his mistress, Myra Hindley, 24, are jointly charged with the murder of Evans, Lesley Ann Downey, 10, and John Kilbride, 12.

A highlight of the trial earlier this week was the playing of a tape recording of the death of Lesley, allegedly recorded by Brady and Miss Hindley.

Today, Brady testified for the first time.

He said he told Evans: "All you have to do is put your cash and valuables on the table and you won't get hurt." Evans was surprised and started sweating. He got from the chair and kicked at me, I grabbed him by the lapels."

He said Smith started to hit Evans with a stick, and when Evans would not "shut up," he picked up the axe from the fireplace and "hit Evans with the blunt side of the axe. The axe just bounced off his head and it did not seem to have any effect."

BY HITTING HIM

Miss Hindley stated at Brady as he continued:

"There was blood appearing and after that I did not know anything. I just kept hitting him until he shut up."

He said Evans was still alive but "gurgling." Brady claimed that Smith turned on Evans, took out his wallet and said he was "a goner."

The Chester court was silent as Brady told of the death of Evans in the living room of Brady's home in Hyrde, near Manchester. Brady claimed he picked up Evans in a "homosexual bidders" in Manchester and drove him home to rob him.

He said he and Smith—Miss Hindley's brother - in - law—trussed up the body together, wrapped it in sheets and took it upstairs. Smith's attitude was "heatrical and jocular," he said. "He was trying to crack jokes. He said the body was 'a dead weight'."

Brady denied prosecution allegations that he boasted to Smith of "three or four" murders he had committed, and brought Evans home to demonstrate a killing for Smith.

He had never committed murder, he said. He agreed he had discussed with Smith how they could do bank robberies and "roll queers" — rob homosexuals. They had planned to do a robbery the week Evans died, he said.

Landowners May Sue Govt. For Damages

WHEATLEY, Ont. (CP) — Landowners have started proceedings to sue the federal government for damages caused by Wednesday's violent wind and storm along this Lake Erie shoreline.

Harry Janke, a spokesman for the group, said landowners have hired a Leamington law firm to represent them in their suit.

His announcement came on the heels of a hint by Prime Minister Pearson of federal aid.

Mr. Pearson said the government is giving serious consideration to sending part of the north shore of the lake a disaster area with a view to offering financial assistance.

The storm, packing winds gusting up to 85 miles an hour, inundated the shoreline immediately southwest of Wheatley.

Mark Opening Of Expo 67 Next Year

MONTREAL (CP)—To mark the scheduled opening of Expo 67 April 27 next year, there were celebrations Thursday on the site of the world fair.

A group of 40 young people from across Canada and the Eastern United States toured the site, heard speeches and saw dances by les Grands Ballets Canadiens.

Speeches at the fair's welcoming centre were given by Expo Commissioner - General Pierre Dupuy, Postmaster General A. J. Cote, and Gerard Lemoine, Quebec minister of trade and commerce minister.

The site, which includes two islands in the St. Lawrence River off Montreal, had other visitors Thursday — residents from Montreal who responded to an open house invitation.

Another Expo event was the formal signing of the agreement providing for Soviet participation. The signing took place aboard the Soviet liner Alexander Pushkin docked in Montreal harbor.

Mr. J. Scriven expressed thanks in the group for this wonderful exhibition.

New Electoral Map Labelled 'Cartographer's Nightmare' By Member From Carleton

OTTAWA (CP)—Richard A. Bell (PC—Carleton) led off an all-party attack Thursday night on the redistribution proposed for Ontario's federal ridings, labelling the new electoral map "a cartographer's nightmare."

The former Conservative immigration minister said he was not straying from a partisan point of view.

The non - political commissioners charged with Parliament's redistribution has tossed aside the blending social, economic and cultural factors and worked only for geometric accuracy in changing new ridings.

Mr. Bell said a Progressive Conservative—could come to a unanimous agreement "by midnight tonight" on a new distribution of ridings in this area.

SEEKS BALANCE

Any redistribution must achieve relative permanence of boundaries and balance between community of interest and population centres, he said.

The commission whose members are a political science professor, the provincial electoral officer and Canada's chief electoral officer—should have abandoned a mere "mathematical uniformity" and permitted greater departures in population from the riding quota of 70,305. A 25-per-cent leeway is allowed.

The Commons record during the current redistribution debate will be used both to the Independent commission set up to change riding boundaries in each province on the basis of the 1961 census.

The commission may make changes if they wish.

Ontario will add three seats to its present 85 under the revision.

Mr. Bell said the Ontario commissioners would have been better advised to follow the new boundaries established for provincial elections.

He said Mr. Justice E. A. Richardson, the chief Ontario boundaries commissioner, was guilty of "cavalier attitudes" and he hoped the justice would take another look at the proposed changes.

BREWIN OBJECTS

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) thought Mr. Bell's request would receive a better reception if he didn't sprinkle his remarks with insulting comments. He found the proposed changes in the Toronto area "reasonable and fair."

Percy Noble (PC — Grey North) said the proposed Grey-Simcoe riding is an "ill-considered, incoherent" plan.

James Brown (L—Brantford) said the commission should aim for a "cohesive unit culturally and economically" but had not achieved this in the proposed Brant riding. Parts of the new riding had nothing in common with each other and there were "widespread objections."

Conservative Eric Winkler, whose riding of Grey-Bruce will disappear, said this would make no difference to him politically.

"My thoughts are very non-political. They are for the people."

He thought the larger rural ridings in western Ontario would be more difficult to represent. The new map was "hastily drawn and "a jumbled pattern."

K. R. Hymmen (L—Waterloo North) said the present ridings of Waterloo North and Waterloo South will be joined under the name Waterloo. They will unite the new riding of Kitchener.

In a reference to the electoral commissioners set up the boundaries and that is supposed to be non-political, he said:

"I don't believe in this place, I find it impossible to find an independent commissioner."

Mr. Hymmen said the city of Kitchener is growing and eventually will split the riding of Waterloo in two.

CRITICIZES SIZE

William Scott (PC—Victoria) said the proposed new riding of Victoria-Haliburton will be too large to be properly represented.

Heber Smith (CP — Simcoe North) said Simcoe County is broken into several fragments with little regard for population trends, community interests and such prominent geographical features as Georgian Bay.

Liberal Harry Harley argued only that the three-way division of his Hamilton West keep the city of Burlington united with the township of Nassagaweya, which it now includes.

Harold Danforth (PC—Kent, Ont.) had toured his riding and asked about the proposed new boundaries. The proposals had come as a shock to the citizens of Kent County."

John B. Morison (L—Wentworth) asked the commission to "reconsider its decision to add Ancaster Township to Brant County" in the proposed riding change.

Rod Webb (PC — Hastings-Frontenac) viewed the changes with a "very sad heart." Redistribution "should have been handled by the senators." He was sure they wouldn't have used the technique of "haggle and chop up."

Three MPs from Northern Ontario agreed on slight changes they would like made to the proposed ridings of Cochrane, Algoma and Timiskaming.

J. A. Habel (L—Cochrane) said candidates in any federal election "will have to buy bell-copters" to cover the huge new Cochrane riding stretching from Lake Superior to Hudson Bay.

George E. Nixon (L—Algoma West), whose riding disappears, opposed extension of the proposed Cochrane riding to encompass the town of Minden coin. The town should be linked to either the new Muskoka-Parry Sound riding or Simcoe ridings.

German Issue

The movie, The Spy Who Came In From The Cold, from the best-selling novel by John le Carre, is an authentic reminder of the permanency of the east-west split in Germany.

At least the way things have been in Germany since the last war, and the way they are today, would suggest that the country will remain divided indefinitely.

East Germany, as the film suggests, is to all intents and purposes a satellite of the Soviet Union. Its allegiance is to communism and its espionage organization is geared to this premise. Anyone seeking to escape into West Germany is not simply a German moving from one part of his country to another, but a fugitive from the so-called people's republic and therefore liable to be shot on sight.

John le Carre drew from his own experience as a former member of the British diplomatic staff in Berlin to paint a stark picture of the gulf that separates the two Germanys, and realistically symbolizes the differing political concepts more graphically than the wall that snakes across Berlin and makes escape all but impossible.

Ironically, the movie company resorted to another divided country — Ireland — to achieve an authentic background for their Berlin story. In Dublin they found an old section of wall and the cobbled streets they needed.

In politics it does not take much to pit brother against brother — as Baroness Maria von Trapp relates in her book, The Trapp Family Singers (on whom the film, The Sound of Music, was based). When the Nazis occupied Austria people soon found out who their friends were. It was the same with the Nazi occupation of France and other parts of western Europe.

Yet while Austria and France have both regained their independence, Germany remains divided — and as far as may be determined, irrevocably.

Even West German Chancellor Erhard appears to hold this view. "The two social systems," he said recently, "are too different to give any prospect of fruitful co-operation." He was commenting on East German leader Walter Ulbricht's advocacy of a confederation as the sole realistic approach toward German unity.

Erhard feels that any settlement of the German question (if any is possible) must be worked out with Moscow and not with the East German regime, and he has indicated Soviet Premier Kosygin will be welcome in Bonn anytime.

But the Russians do not seem interested in the reunification of Germany — their old enemy — and for good reason. A united Germany would quickly regain prosperity and power, and would probably ally itself with the west. And this the Soviets clearly do not want.

Sub-Standard Streets

Belleville drivers need not be surprised these days if ruts in the 1950 edition of the city's road surface are becoming more numerous. For one thing it is spring, when this can be expected. Less satisfying to contemplate, however, is some evidence of long-term neglect.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell has told Council that of the 84.5 miles of streets in the city about 67.5, or 80 per cent, are now, or soon will be in a sub-standard state. He estimates it will cost nearly $15 million over a period of years to bring this stretch up to standard.

The trouble is, this city is not in the space program stakes, so that any road improvement scheme will have to be spread out over a long period. Last year $50 000 went into three miles per year and an estimated $380,000 per year from the capital works fund.

But he warned that the length of the program must be limited to a period that would permit his completion before streets reconstructed in the early stages became obsolete again.

Alderman Dr.- Russell Scott has been appointed head of a committee to study the engineer's report and bring in a recommendation to council. Clearly this is a matter of urgency and one that should be tackled with despatch.

Rally Driver

Women rally drivers can compete with the best of male drivers — and still retain their femininity in the most gruelling of long-distance tests.

That is the word from Rosemary Smith, a 27-year-old Irish designer cum rally driver who is competing in the Shell 4000 rally which starts in Vancouver Saturday and finishes in Quebec City a week later.

"Most girls couldn't care less what they look like when they're driving — they look like old hags," said Miss Smith with typical Irish candor in an interview in Toronto. Putting her hand to her mouth, she added: "Well, that was unkind — but it's true. Maybe it's not true of your Canadian drivers, I don't know yet, but it's true in the continental rallies."

"I just couldn't drive without my nails done or my makeup on," said Miss Smith.

For all her glamor and good looks, Miss Smith is a seasoned competitor. She has taken part in the major European rallies and the rugged Circuit of Ireland among others. A frequent prizewinner, this will be her first Canadian rally. When not driving she is at home designing sports clothes for a Dublin firm.

Memories of Voyageurs

Ottawa Journal

The research for a dozen Ottawa Valley centennial projects has been done in one article in the spring issue of the trade-mon's Bay Company's magazine The Beaver. The author is Major C. C. J. Bond, historian of the National Capital Commission.

What stirs the imagination is recollection of trade being conducted in the Fort Coulonge area in the winter of 1804-05 (100 years before Pilliwood Wright) of a fort at or near the present Rockland in 1761 and of the first English-speaking settlers arriving at the old seigniory of L'Orignal in 1792.

The article, entitled "The Hudson's Bay Company in the Ottawa Valley," mentions a 1801 note naming Medard des Groseilliers as "general de la flotte des Ottaouais." Major Bond continues: "Highway of missionary and explorer, truck route of the fur brigades, the waters of the Grand River of the Ottawas between Lac des Deux Montagnes and the Mattawa were ploughed year after year by the 'canots de maitre' and the river shores resounded to the voyageurs' songs—when they had breath left to sing."

Let's not pretend that the voyageurs or the fur traders or the raftsmen were immune to human weakness or error! They became tired, drunk and ridiculous on occasion.

* * *

The newcomer was John McLean who took over from Joseph Godin. The latter had participated in the fur-trade wars—and there were just that, bitter, ruthless and violent—as an employee of the North West Company which fought the HBC. But now the companies were united and McLean found Godin "poorly old gentleman, bearing a paunch that would have done credit to an Edinburgh bailie" who came puffing ceive in".

McLean soon found that the old warrior was only nominally in charge at Fort Coulonge; the authority resided in the manager the establishment was in the hands of Godin's daughter, "a stout, masculine looking wench, full 30 summers blown."

* * *

The Centennial Commission is to treat Ottawa to reproductions of voyageurs' songs on the river next year. They should be heard as well in other communities along this river of history where the fur traders came in the wake of the war parties and where a great company of saintly missionaries, proud lords of the forest and reckless canoemen and raftsmen made their way to found a vast Dominion.

Shave Cream In Miniature

Watertown (N.Y.) Times

Consumer clamor for convenience has prompted more and more companies 'o turn out products in miniature form or one-use packages. In the food line we are familiar with certain jellies, catsup, mustard, certain sauces, salt and pepper and the like.

Hardware dealers have become major purveyors of one-shot items such a small packages of bolts, screws, nuts and washers. No need to buy a full box or a pound. In drug stores pills, lotions, deodorants, nail polish and other items are now sold in miniature form.

And this brings up the point: Wouldn't it be a boon if the manufacturers of shaving cream, lotion and deodorants would make it possible for a man to buy a can or jar of these items in miniature—without having to accept a "package deal."

These miniatures are invaluable for the man who does considerable travelling. They conserve space.

Urges "Creative Rebellion"

Pottsbrough Examiner

The Rev. R. C. Plant, a United Church minister from Deep River, has told a conference of United Church young people that they should stage a creative rebellion against the regimentation of the Ontario high school system. The minister suggested that education seems to place too much importance on the height of girls' hem-lines and the length of boys' hair.

In regard to church services, Mr. Plant voiced the long-standing criticism of young people and perhaps many who are not so young) that they are boring and often have no identifiable relationship to the problems of the individual. He remarked the persistence of some clergy who act as if the Bible contained literal fact rather than spiritual truth.

If it is unrealistic to expect a creative rebellion — or any other kind of rebellion — on the part of young people, it takes place as a result of the minister's words. The forces of the establishment are entrenched and still too firmly in power for that. His words are interesting because they reflect the repository of establishment morality — and those words express the sentiments of a significant body of clerics who recognize that a morality based largely on appearances will not meet the demands of current living. The initiative for the creative rebellion of which Mr. Plant speaks will have to come from enlightened clerics and teachers and others within the establishment.

Strictly Personal
Can Peace Be Attained

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"When you have eliminated the impossible," Sherlock Holmes told Dr. Watson, "whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth." This piece of logic applies to little as much more than just the solving of crimes.

From my study of history, for example, it seems clear that everything we have done in the past to keep the peace has been treaties, balances of power, arms conquests — perhaps we suggests most of all — have given us only an uneasy truce for a few years.

The idea of some kind of world government is fraught with peril — it is utopian, idealistic, the time is unripe, the people are not ready for it and it could pave the way for a world dictatorship. It does not have one chance in a thousand — but nothing else seems to have any chance at all.

The idea of a genuine democracy, likewise, seems highly improbable, for many of the same reasons — there are not enough people who are mature enough to make the important decisions influencing the course of history. Yet, again, no other system is workable, and all others we have tried are worse. As Aristotle said, it is the least bad form of government, in a practical sense.

What is so puzzling and distressing about the human race is that we are more willing to [illegible] impossible than to take a chance on the improbable. We want easy answers to hard questions, even though history, again and again, tells us that easy answers are no answers at all. We want short, harder questions when they often are not.

We do not want to pay the price for world unity, which is to abandon some of our sovereignty; we do not want to pay the price for democratizing society, which is to educate and lead in more on education for intellectual growth and emotional maturity, to finance our physical plant and our military hardware. So, in the end, the price we will pay must be literally sky-higher.

We want to choose between the good and the bad, but we do not have this range of choice. We have to decide between the relatively bad and the absolutely bad. And since the absolutely bad — as the killing national disputes by war — never works, we have to choose the relatively bad.

The development of nuclear weaponry has eliminated all past ways of "solving" our problems as impossible. The resolution of conflict by other means is difficult, delicate hazardous, demanding a maturity most statesmen and citizens do not possess. But, however impossible, it is the best we have left to us. May we only know it in time.

To Your Good Health
Hyperventilation Said Psychosomatic Illness

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is hyperventilation, its symptoms cause and prevention? — Mrs. H.

* * *

This is one of the most frequent examples of a psychosomatic illness. Disorder, in which tension takes charge, results in what appears to be physical condition.

Under certain circumstances of extreme anxiety, fear or tension, the individual will start to breathe rapidly. It is usually psychological.

With this rapid breathing, the patient senses a shortness of breath — so he keeps on trying to breathe even faster. The effort results in the breathing it rapid but shallow.

He not only inhales and exhales rapidly, and by breathing in such a manner he takes in a rate, he reduces it to a lower-than-normal level. There is from this, some danger of alkalosis, or excessive alkalinity of the blood.

Yet between spells the patient is well, and frequently little if any physical ailment can be detected that can account for the condition.

This hyperventilation is particularly familiar to psychiatrists, and of necessity they become adept at recognizing it and putting the patient at ease, at least temporarily, until it subsides.

Permanent correction depends on finding out what is disturbing the patient so deeply, and solving his problem. Such things as continuing pressure or other dilemma, from which he can not seem to find any escape without help, may be involved.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am a woman of 60, and have a noise in my ear; I went to a specialist but he does not know what it is. Sometimes it is loud and sometimes not but it makes me very nervous. Can you tell me anything about it? — W. M.

I'm glad that you have been examined because sometimes ear noises signify a serious disorder. Most of the time they do not. There are multiple causes and several things that can be done to allay the annoyance. I suggest that you get my booklet "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures," which, among other things, will help you stop being so nervous about the problem. For a copy send 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of The Chicago Sun Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158 Dundee, Ill.

Dear Dr. Molner: My pediatrician said my daughter is 20 pounds overweight but he didn't say what to feed her on. How can one tell a child of five not to eat what she likes? She does not eat much candy or sweets. She loves potatoes, macaroni, cheese and fish, but doesn't drink much milk. — M. P. L.

It is not a matter entirely of what she eats; it's how much, too.

Cut out all candy, and keep desserts simple: Gelatin and a graham cracker, for example. It isn't by her, at first, to learn what to eat. It's for you to set before her what she needs. Cut down on starchy foods (macaroni, and such). Baked potato is excellent, but without gravy and with very little butter. See that she gets a good helping of protein at each meal — lean meat, fish, egg. She needs milk, for its calcium and other nutrients, but the skim variety will be less fattening. Since she obviously has gotten into the habit of eating a lot, give her some salad, plenty of vegetables, (not with cream sauce) and a some fruit. At her age 20 pounds overweight is a lot, and right now is the time to start getting her into better eating habits. Your physician may have other suggestions.

Militia's Job In Red China

Toronto Globe and Mail

One in every four humans is Chinese. With this in mind, there should be little surprise or skepticism over the official claim that China has a military force of about 100 million men and women. Even if it is put in perspective, should this vast force cause too much fear in the West.

For more than a year, the Chinese have placed great emphasis on building up a mass militia. In part, this drive reflects their concern that the war in Viet Nam could escalate into a direct conflict between mainland China and the United States. It also reflects domestic strains — including a sharp debate within the Communist Party leaders and some military professionals, and fears that enemy people lack sufficient revolutionary fervor.

Militia, as can be told, most communes, factories, schools and offices on the mainland have militia contingents. But probably only a minority — the Ming Ping or "backbone" militia — are effective fighting forces. The majority suffer from a shortage of modern weapons and ammunition. Since as much time is spent on political indoctrination as military training, their professional competence is likely to be low.

This is hardly an awesome army to be launched on any invasion beyond China's borders. Most Western experts, however, agree with official Chinese statements that the role of the militia is defensive, and that its defensive capability would prove impressive.

Teachers Get An "Eyeful"

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

If teachers could get a student's eyeview of themselves, it could help them to correct teaching faults, says W. R. Boggs, cigar-smoking co-ordinator of the Project For Gifted Youth at the University of Illinois.

Maple Leaf coach Punch Imlach runs films of the hockey team in action to point out to players their faults and teaching. He could use the same the coach's book, the expert thinks.

Mr. Boggs says he has tested his theory and the teaching results were obtained when teachers were exposed to videotapes of themselves.

About half a dozen teachers are involved in each session.

— the anxiety level is too high when just one teacher is involved — Mr. Boggs explained.

In general, the cameras take in the whole classroom and the student teachers are usually behind the scenes. Later, the subject teacher and the other five or more get the videotape together.

A frequent teacher reaction is "Do I sound like that? — did I do that much talking?"

One outcome of the tests was that teachers were usually surprised by their students which only tests memorization.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

April 29, 1966 . . .

A British force of 10,000 men, commanded by Gen. Charles Townshend, surrendered 30 years ago today — in 1916 — at Kut-el-Amara, Mesopotamia, after a siege which lasted 143 days. Captured, the force had set out to capture Baghdad and nearly reached the city before being turned back. Three relief expeditions failed, as did efforts by one of the Turkish army with money. The defeat added to Turkish confidence in it's war, which did not flag until a second British force captured Baghdad in a well-conducted three-month campaign early in 1917.

1894—Jacob Coxey led unemployed American workers in a march on Washington.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1916 — Kut-el-Amara's British garrison surrendered to the Turks after a siege; British units attacked Bushire, a Persian garrison on the Persian Gulf.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1941—the population of a large area of Plymouth was evacuated under heavy attack in which eight German bombers were shot down. German and British guns duelled across the Strait of Dover; the Hitler war budget was brought down in Ottawa; 122 were drowned in the torpedoing of the Nerissa off the Canadian coast.

High Flying Liquor Laws

Hamilton Spectator

Manitoba's legislature has approved in principle liquor act changes that will allow drinks to be served aboard aircraft, flying over the province.

Airborne drinkers shouldn't get excited. This does not mean the airlines will immediately open a bar on their non-stop flights either way.

Serving drinks in the air is legal in Ontario. The airlines serve them on flights from Toronto to across-the-border points now.

To date laws in the prairie provinces have forbidden airborne booze. Now it may be served right to the Saskatchewan border when the tap must be turned off until the British Columbia border is reached.

But the airliners probably won't do it. They can hardly be blamed.

Until it is possible to serve legally liquor all the way from one terminal to another it is silly to expect them to try. The provincial red tape involved would make the stewardess' job even more difficult.

In any case the airlines are not that fond of bars alert.

Though some airborne drinks they do it only because the public demands the service.

Girls Fined For Bootlegging In Apartment

TORONTO (CP)—A former secretary with the Ontario Liquor Control Board and her room-mate were each fined $50 Thursday for keeping liquor for sale in an apartment.

Eileen Young, 23, the secretary, and Sandra Holland, 19, were taken into custody when Magistrate R. Tupper Bigelow ordered them time to pay the fine.

Police said the secretary, in her spare time, worked for a gang of bootleggers, taking telephone orders.

Gromyko Visit to Vatican Gives Germans the Shivers

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Andrei Gromyko made a rather quiet, tourist-like visit to Italy but his words sent a shiver of fear along the German political spine.

It was the call of Europe for Europeans, an appeal for collective nationalism that would automatically exclude the United States.

To look to the U.S. from Europe is an obvious Soviet ambition and in former days the Soviet foreign minister's suggestion would have received a cool welcome from Italy's Christian Democrats.

But the situation in Europe is changing. The Common Market has magnified the power of national economies. The old North Atlantic military concept is profoundly disintegrating.

EVICTION NOTICE

France has pinned an eviction notice on the NATO doorstep and Gaullist de Gaulle, who spoke to Moscow in June, has hitched a new partnership with Russia. The mood can spread ing concern in Rome and Sociling, imagine, says Giuseppe Barra, a high columnist of the ruling Christian Democrats, European peace negotiations in which the Soviet Union is present and the U.S. excluded. The thought made him shiver.

But Gromyko was speaking in a country which, while it dislikes what de Gaulle is doing to NATO, is highly dependent on the Common Market.

It is just possible Italy might be forced to embrace some compromise if the alternative is destruction of the Common Market through French action. Political realism has forced the Italian government to pay more attention to the left. About one-quarter of the Italian voters are Communist.

EXPANDING TRADE

Italy also has expanding trade links with the Soviet Union. Within the need of overcoming heavy unemployment—in the overpopulated agricultural south, Italy is anxious to promote better relations with her most receptive markets and suppliers.

Italy is unlikely to go as far as acceptance of de Gaulle's anti-NATO policy—and it is unthinkable that Italian government in effect told Gromyko so—but the government has shown a subtle way of compromising and joint French-Russian pressure may be hard to withstand.

An example of this compromise is Italian refusal to give China diplomatic recognition but it did agree to an exchange of trade missions, which in itself is a considerable amount of political recognition.

Two Canadians Were Trapped In Underground Spy Agency

By PETER BUCKLEY

LONDON (CP)—The story of how two Canadians found themselves snared tragically in the collapse of an undercover spy network in France during the Second World War is told in detail in an authorized history of British Special Operations Executive, a wartime secret service agency.

The two men were F. H. Pickersgill, brother of Transport Minister J. W. Pickersgill, and Canadian Flying Ace Andy Mc-Allister. Both were captured by the Germans within a few days of being parachuted into France and both died in a mass execution at Buchenwald concentration camp 15 months later.

Their fate is set out in a book called SOE in France by Oxford historian M. R. D. Foot published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office ($6.75).

Pickersgill and McAllister are among at least a half-dozen Canadians who worked for SOE and whose efforts are mentioned by Foot. His is the first history of the agency to be based on some of its top-secret official files, although the stories of several SOE agents have been detailed previously since the war, using unofficial sources.

AGENCY IN CHAOS

Foot writes that the two Canadians landed in France at a time of disastrous confusion in all parts of Britain's SOE network, whose main job was to infiltrate agents from underground list them locally to disrupt the German war potential and foster resistance leading to sabotage and propaganda.

Some of the agents were inadequately trained or careless. At least one and probably several talked at length after capture by the Germans. And, says Foot, "under pitilessly" at SOE headquarters in London "mazes things much worse."

While all with several strokes of pure luck, the circumstances allowed the German counter-espionage machine to make fearsome raids on the British underground networks and assemble a great catch. The Canadians were arrested and the two French agents killed to flee, were wounded by gunfire and captured a few miles away.

WERE BEATEN UP

Foot reports that Pickersgill and Macalister "held firm" under questioning by the Germans, despite a "physical knocking about."

The next spring, Pickersgill was taken to Paris from his country prison in an effort to make him help the Germans deceive London through fake radio messages.

But the Canadian "had other ideas," Foot writes. "He set about his guards in the Vesuve Fish with a broken bottle-and, killed two of them, leaped from a second-floor window and ran for it, only to be brought down by the sub-machine gun of an alert sentry."

Pickersgill and Macalister, along with 25 other captured agents, were transferred to the notorious concentration camp at Buchenwald in September, 1944. Foot writes: "Both were summoned by name to the camp office and did not return. The survivors thought it was an administrative affair."

DEATH BY FIRING SQUAD

"Polish acquaintances in the construction gang at Buchenwald gleaned the survivors next day," Foot writes. Three days later, another group of 37 prisoners, Pickersgill, Macalister and another Canadian, Lt. Edmondson were surrounded and "they disappeared in their turn."

Pickersgill, Macalister and Macalister showed up some of the laxity in SOE operations and helped the German make further inroads into underground activities.

The two Canadians were carrying messages for other agents "which the staff in London had been trusting enough to send in English in clear (uncoded)," Foot says. They also had some radio sets and a few codes that Macalister was to use in his messages back to London.

The Germans used the codes and equipment to send false information to London, luring more British agents into their trap. And an adroit German security officer posed as Pickersgill for several months to make still further arrests.

Edmondson, the other Buchenwald victim, was dropped into France in March, 1944, with the aim of helping set up a network of agents near Verdun.

But he and another agent were apparently expected by the Germans.

a wood and, hearing German spoken, they slipped into the trees and opened fire on the speakers. In the moonlit gunfight that followed two Germans were killed, but both the parachutists were wounded and made prisoner."

A. Beauregard landed with another agent Feb. 8, 1944, and went to work as a wireless operator in the Lyons area. Foot says he "was caught by (German) direction-finding in July and executed in Mouthir prison at Lyons [and] after the Germans withdrew" from that part of France.

F. A. Deniset landed in France near Poitiers about the same time as Beauregard. He was to have been an arms instructor in one of the underground networks. But he and others in the same group were not heard from after landing and Foot presumes they were captured.

Britain and Rhodesia Talk Because Both Wilson And Smith Are in Trouble

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—Both Prime Minister Wilson and Premier Ian Smith were in trouble. That's one reason British and Rhodesia are talking again.

Wilson and Smith were both widely off-base in their estimates of the likely outcome of Rhodesia's Nov. 11 unilateral declaration of independence.

Smith, 46, and it would be an "eight-day wonder," implying there would be a week or so of splash headlines, then the busy world would turn to other things. By now it may seem more like a 158-day nightmare.

Wilson, 50, found that sanctions—even oil sanctions—did not produce the "quick cure" he predicted for the Rhodesia situation.

When Commonwealth prime ministers held an emergency meeting on Rhodesia in Lagos in January, Wilson's mien spoke of bringing down Smith "in weeks, not months." A few months ago the word "weeks" or "sooner or later" became more popular in government circles.

Now Wilson's government is again building up for more decisive British action against uppity white-skinned colonists. Commonwealth sanctions committee, established at Lagos, has been "working hard" and a "breathing spell" to complete talks with South Africa aimed at "persuading" it to end its "seepage" through the trade embargo.

The deadline for a new Commonwealth prime ministers meeting — July — was getting "extended" a few days. It has been set at Lagos in case Smith still was in power by mid-summer. And in New York, an anti-African move was afoot to get the issue back on the table at the United Nations by May 20.

British politicians say the one thing Wilson could not do was stand still. He knew that sooner rather than later he would be asked by British authorities also say some 3,000 of Rhodesia's 200,000 white population have emigrated since and to ruin the Rhodesian economy while ousting Smith.

In Rhodesia, the outlook apparently was bleaker. Observers reported the mood changed recently. The flag-waving of a few months ago was replaced by a certain foreboding.

Smith must have been shaken when Wilson sent reinforced power with a 97-member majority in the March 31 British election.

Smith promised his followers last summer that at least two countries — presumably South Africa and Portugal — would recognize his regime after he declared it independent. But not one country recognized Smith.

Although South Africa announced a business-as-usual policy and allowed oil shipments to go to Lourenco Marques, Rhodesia, there were many signs that Smith's action caused acute worry in Pretoria. Premier Hendrik Verwoerd's government.

Indeed, the speculation in London is that the Rhodesian issue would have come to a head earlier but for the British and South African elections.

There are conflicting reports on whether Rhodesia is getting sufficient gasoline and oil from South Africa to meet her needs. But it appears clear that Wilson's caress is preventing oil flowing up the pipeline from Beira, Mozambique. Portuguese Mozambique was a bitter blow to the Rhodesians.

PLOT UPSET

Reports in London and Salisbury indicate that Smith's representatives had tried to arrange 27 tanker cargoes of oil to be shipped through Beira, sufficient to supply Rhodesia for a year. But Wilson upset the plot by warning United Nations authority to prevent such tanker cargoes getting through.

On top of all this, Rhodesia's secret tobacco auctions in Salisbury March did not go well—according to British sources—despite official assurances that they did. And British authorities also say some 3,000 of Rhodesia's 200,000 white population have emigrated since and to ruin the Rhodesian economy while ousting Smith.

Readers' Friday Column

QUESTION:

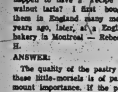
Thanks for all the benefits I have enjoyed from your column — it's wonderful. May I ask another favor? Do you happen to have a recipe for walnut tarts? I first bought them in England many years ago, later, at a bakery in Montreal — Rebecca H.

ANSWER:

The quality of the pastry in these little morsels is of paramount importance. If the pastry is tender and thin these are little gems.

Pastry: 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 2/3 cup shortening, 2 tablespoons ice water, 3 or 4 tablespoons ice cold water.

Filling: 1 egg, ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons soft butter, ½ cup ground or finely chopped walnuts (or pecans or blanched almonds), 1 teaspoon almond extract, raspberry jam or jelly.



To make the Pastry cut the shortening and butter into the flour and salt with pastry blender or tips of fork. Drizzle in water, tossing with fork until you can press dough into a ball between your palms. Roll out on lightly floured board to ⅛" thickness. Cut out with floured cutter to fit twelve 3½" tart tins. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 5 minutes only. Remove from oven.

Reduce oven heat to 425 deg. Fahr.

To make Filling beat the egg and then stir in the sugar, soft butter, ground nuts and extract. Drop into each partially baked tart shell 1 teaspoon raspberry jam or jelly. Full 2/3 full with filling and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. about 10 or 12 minutes or until barely set and just tinged with gold. Made right, these are minor masterpieces and are at their best served warm. Also try variations using apricot jam or lemon marmalade instead of the raspberry jam or jelly.

Alouette Club Enjoys Maple Sugar Party

The French Canadian "Alouette Club" for Belleville and the region last Sunday held its Spring activity for members and friends: "The Maple Sugar Party."

Participants gathered for the occasion at Presqu'Ile Provincial Park. About 180 persons including children, took this opportunity to enjoy themselves with their families.

Mr. J. A. C. Bernier, president of the club and Mr. Bernard Gagnier, president of the entertainment committee, acted after the guests assisted by the ladies and members of the other committees.

The Alouette Club was honored by the presence, among other attendants, of Mayor J. R. Ellis and Mrs. Ellis and their children, Mr. R. M. Girard, Chaplain of the Albert College, and Mrs. Girard and their children, Mr. & R. A. Law, marketing division manager of the American Optical Co., and Mrs. Law and their daughter, Mrs. Ronald Stevens Gregson, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Longtin from Oshawa with other delegates from that city. The menu of the day included pancakes with maple syrup, pork beans with homemade bread, eggs cooked in maple syrup, "creions" maple syrup taffy. The maple syrup was of the best quality and flavor and for the "sweet tooth", maple sugar cakes made by Mrs. Jeanette Pilon were distributed to all.

There was a special program of plays and amusements for the children directed by Mrs. Lise Duchesne and Mr. Michel Thiffault.

Luncheon Bridge Held at Yacht Club

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club was the scene of a luncheon bridge Wednesday afternoon. Guests were received by Mrs. Harold Craig, wife of the Commodore of the Club, and by Mrs. Ernie Colebourne, president of the ladies' group.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN ERNEST PEOPLES

Peoples — Levett

Rev. Harry M. Davis officiated at the wedding ceremony in Bridge Street United Church when Carol Gail Levett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Levett, Belleville, was united in marriage to John Ernest Peoples, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Peoples, also of Belleville.

The church organist Mr. S. Alec Gordon presided at the organ and rendered traditional wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length white crepe sheath bridal gown topped with a full length Chantilly lace coat with long lily-point sleeves. An elbow length three tiered veil fell from a lace bow headdress. She carried a white lace covered Bible created with red roses and white carnations with cascading knitted streamers with tiny rosebuds.

Miss Susan Miles, Belleville, as maid of honor wore a mauve peau de soie dress with bell skirt and matching jacket. Her headdress was similar to that of the bride. She carried a bouquet of white mums centred with yellow roses. Miss Melinda Levett, sister of the bride and Miss Donna Peoples, sister of the bridegroom were bridesmaids and were dressed identical to the maid of honor. Little Miss Carol Lynn Peoples, sister of the bridegroom was the flower girl wearing a yellow taffeta dress styled the same as the other attendants, and a floral lace head band. She carried a basket of white mums and yellow roses.

Mr. Bill Lang of was groomsman, while Mr. Jack McDonald and Mr. Paul Peoples, brother of the bridegroom were the ushers.

For the reception and dinner at the Club Canara, the bride's mother received the guests wearing an A line two-piece coat dress of yellow shantung, with navy blue accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a beige two-piece brocade ensemble with matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Leaving on a wedding trip to Montreal and points east the bride donned a navy blue two-piece coat dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

Guests attended from Hamilton, Buffalo, Ottawa, Napanee, Toronto and Burlington.

Mr. and Mrs. Peoples will reside at 55 Bridge Street East, Napanee.

Russian Women Like Foreign-made Goods

By JOHN REST

MOSCOW (CP)—In the underground pedestrian passage connecting Revolution Square with the huge G.U.M. department store, a brisk trade was in progress.

A sign advertised women's sweaters, sizes 44-46-48. Price: 45 rubles.

A young woman in a red leather coat, who represented herself as a department store employee, tended the milk-shift counter.

The sweaters had a fuzz on them that made them look foreign. They sold quickly but not quickly enough.

The police turned up. It developed that the sweaters A. F. Tramova was selling could be bought at any clothing store for six rubles.

During the investigation Tramova revealed the secret of her commercial success.

"The basis of success is the deep study of consumer demands," she solemnly explained to the police. "Some women buy only foreign goods.

"I invented a way of making such goods. I bought a cheap sweater, took an ordinary brush and made a fuzz. I changed dull buttons for bright ones, and put on a foreign trade mark. I have lots of them; usually I follow instructions for washing German nylon stockings.

"I wrapped the sweaters in colored paper and put them in cellophane bags."

The sweaters Tramova sold her sweaters easily at a spring fair in Lenin Stadium, and nearly Moscow's quarrying stores. She made herself a bundle of money. But she won't be able to keep it.

A people's court sentenced Tramova—imprisoned twice before—to four years for "speculating." She also had her property and money confiscated.

CARS Reports Increased Case Load

The Belleville Branch of The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society held its April meeting at the Social Service Centre, 224 John Street. Mr. A. E. Chestland, president, was in the chair.

The budget for the local branch for the 1966 United Appeal Campaign was discussed. Mr. Doug Barrett, regional director for Eastern Ontario of the Ontario Division of The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, gave a report on the new financial formula to be used by all branches of the Society throughout Ontario.

Mr. Barrett announced that the annual meeting of The Ontario Division of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society would be held in Toronto early in May when representatives from all branches in the province would attend.

Mr. A. E. Chestland and Miss Gladys H. MacDonald were appointed to represent the Belleville branch at the meeting.

Mrs. Kathryn Brown, physiotherapist with the local branch, gave the report on the treatment centre operated by the Belleville General Hospital Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Mrs. Brown established the increase in the number of patients being referred by their family doctors. From March, alone, 9 new cases were opened and 143 treatments were given.

Clinic hours which have been placed throughout the resort areas during the summer months to collect money to be used strictly for research are again being distributed.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN EDWARD RONSKY

Ronsky — Yates

Rev. A. Lauder officiated at the wedding ceremony in Christ Church, Belleville, on Saturday April 23, 1966 at 13 noon, when Phyllis June Yates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Yates of Napanee was united in marriage to John Edward Ronsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ronsky, Belleville.

The church organist Mr. John C. Hilbers played traditional wedding music and accompanied the choir in appropriate selections.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Carl Yates, the bride wore a full length sheath gown of silk bengaline featuring a fitted bodice with scooped neckline accented with appliques of Alencon lace dotted with seed pearls, and long lily-point sleeves. Matching Alencon lace extended down the front of the sheath skirt meeting the edge of the full length train at back. An elbow length veil flowed from a headdress of crystals and seed pearls. She carried a Bible crested with large red roses and cascading streamers knotted with red roses and ferns.

Miss Janice Ronsky of Belleville, sister of the bridegroom as maid of honor was wearing a buttercup yellow pure silk organza over nylon taffeta sheath dress with Empire style waistline. The bodice and overskirt were of hand eliped Chantilly lace featuring a scooped neckline and cap sleeves. She wore a matching headdress and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow and white poms encircled with tulle and ferns.

The bridesmaids Mrs. Glen Meeks and Miss Sharon Anderson were identically attired to the maid of honor but in turquoise shade. Miss Judy Rowbotham of flower girl wore a white nylon dress trimmed with yellow and she carried a basket of yellow and white poms.

Mr. Dennis Reid was groomsman and Mr. Glen Meeks and Mr. David Rowbotham were the ushers.

At the wedding reception held in Club Canara, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a beige sheath dress with lace jacket, brown accessories with a corsage of yellow roses and mums.

Assisting was the bridegroom's mother who wore a sea foam green French chiffon dress completed with accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronsky will reside at 13 Mill Street, Napanee.

Consumer Chief Says That Young Unmarried People Should Be Told How to Use Contraceptives

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Young unmarried people should be told how to use contraceptives as part of their sex education at home and in school, the national president of the Consumers' Association of Canada said Thursday.

Mrs. Beryl Plumptre of Toronto made the statement presenting her association's brief to the Commons health committee asking that birth-control information and sale of contraceptives be made legal.

Young people should not get this information "behind closed doors and from inferior persons."

"They do not get enough information to resist the desire to conform and so get into trouble. They should be taught in school the information and responsibility that goes with sexual intercourse and being a good citizen."

The brief also said that the minimum age for marriage should be raised to 16 for girls and 18 for boys.

CHECKS PILLS

The food and drug director also now cannot enforce regulations with respect to effective devices for women, although it does check contraceptive pills, which also are technically illegal.

Fears that advertising would be "harmful and indecent" seemed to be groundless, because legislation already requires advertising to be "in good taste."

Other products already are advertised in vague terms in some Canadian magazines, Mr. Plumptre added.

"They say 'for germicidal protection' or 'intimate marriage problems.' One of my effective said she didn't even realize they were contraceptives."

The brief said making contraceptives legal might lessen the tax burden by cutting welfare payments to large families. I would also enable Canada to submit a brief and for some good reason are unable to have it ready by then would be heard later.

The association brief, based on a resolution approved by delegates from across Canada at the 1965 annual meeting, said present laws lead to confusion and a "chaotic" state of affairs.

The association brief, based on a resolution approved by delegates from across Canada at the 1965 annual meeting, said present laws lead to confusion and a "chaotic" state of affairs.

CANADA'S ROLE

Mrs. Plumptre said Canada could play a more constructive role in assisting underdeveloped countries which might need birth population problems.

Other association executives at the committee hearing included Mrs. G. J. Hart, Port Arthur.

At the suggestion of the Planned Parenthood Association of Metropolis, who felt that some members were unsure of the technical aspects of birth control, the committee moved to view a film strip produced by a pharmaceutical company on the subject at a meeting Tuesday morning.

The committee's meeting with representatives of the justice and health departments will be held May 10 to discuss legal aspects of the proposed legislation.

WILL HONOR AUTHOR

SUDBURY (CP)—Hugh MacLennan, author and member of the English department at McGill University, Montreal, Rt. Rev. Jacques Garneau, associate director of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, and G. W. Tamblyn, president of Lakehead University, Port Arthur, will receive honorary degrees at Laurentian University's convocation exercises May 20.

Successful Living

Weight-Losing Pills Often Not Much Help

DEAR DORIS: Do you know of any way to obtain weight-losing pills other than from a doctor's prescription. — TOO HIPPY.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR TOO: No, and if I did, I'd still take a dim view of them, for general use.

Unless a reducer gets brand new eating habits — so that healthful-giving natural foods attract him more than our over-sweet sweets — those extra pounds have a way of piling on again at the first let-up.

I know one girl who says she has taken off 300 pounds — on and off. And were. Every time she takes off 20, in a spurt of self-denial and soup, it goes right back on.

* * *

Confidential to MIXED UP: Keep your head and control your impulses. No reason you should confess all just because a boy says he likes you.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: Is there any place in Canada that would inform me of my exact ancestry? — WHO AM I?

DEAR WHO? Ancestry? How far back? If you mean parentage, the names of mother and father appear on your birth certificate; available from the registrar of births, Parliament Buildings, in your province of birth. In the case of adoption the names listed will be those of the adoptive parents, with names of natural parents only available by court order.

To go further back you will have to have a search made of your family tree. There are tree-searchers who will do it for a fee, usually located through your own public library, which will give you guidance all the way through — besides supplying books on the subject.

* * *

(Is it better to put up with misunderstandings, or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light.)

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves, if reducing pounds and inches of unsightly fat don't disappear, from back, thin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way and be adorned by many who have tried the plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly blood disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Authors Claims Language In Burgess Books, Poor

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP)—Peter Rabbit and Danny Fieldmouse should have stayed in the Thornton W Burgess briar patch, says Canadian author Lyn Harrington.

"I'm shocked at the poor quality of the language in the Burgess books. They're the so much of the trash available for children to read — unrealistic, polished, repetitive, with no new ideas for the child."

She'd like them with the reams of mysteries and career books that are churned out for the children's market. "If you go into some stores and see the tons of cheap books you'd think there was nothing good for children to read. It's a shame, because a child has so few years to read books for his age."

Mrs. Harrington speaks from 13 years' experience as a children's librarian, and as an author of children's books like Cobalt, Eskimo Girl and the Real Book of Canada.

She was in Ottawa to address the annual conference of Ontario Library Association.

"It just bored me writing in the children's library. If I weren't writing, that's where I'd be now."

A short, grey-haired woman with friendly blue eyes, she began her writing career with and met her husband, at the desk of the Sault Ste. Marie library. She left there from the school in 1928, left to get her degree in library science at the University of Toronto and returned to stay until 1941.

She noticed the man she was to marry because he took out books that nobody else did. "He was a lumberjack and encouraged her to write up a reading project she had carried out for the library journal.

"I guess it was the magic of seeing my name in print. Anyway that was the start of my career as an author."

The couple, who have no children, now live in Toronto but travel for several months every year in Canada and around the world in search of material. Mr. Harrington is a photographer—

"He travels and I write and I do"—and his photographs often illustrate his wife's work.

"Our first article together was about a trip to Flowerpot Island in Georgian Bay—it was fascinating."

Since then they've been to the Arctic and Africa, South America, Greece and Turkey. Last December they returned from three months in Red China and their book China and the Chinese will be published next fall.

SAW INNER MONGOLIA

"It's the kind of book that's simply written, so it will turn up in the 'children's' section as well as the high school and adult departments of the library. I don't plan it that way, but it's nice."

In China they were allowed to visit places like Inner Mongolia, where few foreign journalists had been before. They travelled 15,000 miles, mostly on trains.

"They're better than here—more punctual. There's a table in every four - berth compartment—that's where I did my typing. We had a flowering plant, even dailies, and they kept bringing in a big thermos of hot water to make tea."

At first the couple saw a lot of factories.

"But we got tired of that so we said to our interpreter, 'Cheng, we want to meet people—child brides, women with bound feet.' So he laid on all these things. We went to a divorce court, and met a Chinese millionaire."

The millionaire is on a salary, she said. He gave his fortune to the government after the revolution and they are paying it back to him in instalments.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Baker, Belleville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Gloria Ila Diane, to Mr. Richard James Flindall, son of Mr. E. F. Flindall, Belleville, and the late Mrs. Flindall. Marriage will take place in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, Saturday May 28th at 2 p.m.

Rev. Norman Hutchinson, Dr. Evelyn Williamson, Mrs. A. English, Mrs. Janette Thompson and Mrs. Bruce DeGrow, members of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association, are attending the fourth Mental Health Conference of the Ontario Division of C.M.H.A. at Holiday Inn, Hamilton, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

Club Activities

WEDDING RING CLUB

College Hill United Church Wedding Ring Club held its regular meeting on Monday evening, with President Merrit Waite in charge.

Plans for the visit to the G.M. plant in Oshawa on June 16 were completed. It was decided to hire a bus for the transportation and there will possibly be room for a few who are not members of the Club.

It was suggested that as many members as possible go to Stirling to see Holloway St. Church's Variety Show presentation.

Devotions were led by Art and Nellie Greenwood. A solo was rendered by Monta Moorcroft accompanied by Marjorie Kerr at the piano.

Everyone enjoyed the entertainment for the evening which included saxaphone solos by Larry Brown, humorous readings by Annis Dickens and Nellie Greenwood, accordion solos by guest George Schultz; a short play by Larry Brown and Annis Dickens entitled "Van Sanders" and a sing-song with musical accompaniment.

Refreshments and a social time closed a very pleasant evening.

U.C.W. Meetings

HOLLOWAY U.C.W.

The General meeting of Holloway Street United Church Women was held in Education Hall on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. N. Brown, leader of Unit 1, was in charge of the program on world missions. The worship service was conducted by Mrs. J. Cordes, stressing the thought that "Every problem in the world is the business of every Christian in the world." The Easter Seal offering was received by Mrs. E. Hubbs and Mrs. R. Jose. Two duets were sung by Rev. and Mrs. J. Wm Lamb.

Rev. Paul M. Packman of Canadian presented a film showing the Church of Christ at work in Brazil. Pictured were the beautiful skyscrapers, office and apartment buildings with the shacks of the poor near by, a few of the natives and their homes, the cities, the mountains and the fields of coffee plants.

The president, Mrs. J. Fred Wilson, conducted the business session. Announcements were made of a Spring Tea on June 1 and the Harvest Banaz on October 26.

Mrs. Arnold Mitchell, on behalf of those present, thanked all who had helped with the program. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the members of Mrs. R. Taylor's Unit.

SHOWN WITH MAP OF MID ONTARIO DIVISION at yesterday's Salvation Army Home League Rally held at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church are, from the left, Mrs. Major R. Homewood, Mrs. Brigadier B. Bernat, Mrs. Brigadier W. Hawkes and special guest Mrs. Colonel W. Effer.

NOW YOU HAVE IT, NOW YOU DON'T

Dear Su: I am supposed to take a teaspoonful of liquid iron tonic every day, but it was giving me trouble.

Nearly every time I poured out a whole spoonful onto a teaspoon, I would spill a few drops on the way to my mouth.

Anyone can understand why I didn't appreciate this happening one bit, because, the most tonics, it's more expensive than gold!

I tried something else. With a little practice, you can get so that you know almost exactly where a teaspoonful of liquid comes up to in the centre of a dessert spoon.

Now I simply pour the tonic directly onto a dessert spoon and take it right from there. Haven't spilled a drop in weeks. — Getting Stronger

NO GREASY TASTE STUFF

Dear Susanna: As much of the bacon seems extremely fatty lately, the next time you plan bacon for breakfast, try broiling, instead of frying it.

It cooks through without becoming overly crisp, and doesn't get that greasy taste either, since it isn't lying in the extra-fat. — Mrs. Metcalf

SHOE SHINE TRICK

Dear Susanna: My mother wears cotton work gloves while polishing my little sister's shoes.

This way her hands remain clean to continue on with her many chores. — Janet Alexander.

If you have any hints for running a successful household — or problems — write to Susanna in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope when requesting pamphlets.

200 Women Attend S.A. Home League Rally

Two hundred women, representing Salvation Army Home Leagues in nine Mid-Ontario Division Corps yesterday attended a rally at Victoria Ave. Baptist Church here. Corps in Gananoque, Kingston, Tweed, Campbellford, Deseronto, Picton, Napanee, Trenton and Belleville were represented. Mrs. Brigadier W. Hawkes, Divisional Home League Secretary was in charge of the rally. She was assisted by Mrs. Major R. Homewood, wife of the Division Youth Secretary, Mrs. Brigadier B. Bernat of the local Corps welcomed the visitors.

Mrs. Gordon Grainger and Mrs. Roy Jose of the Belleville Pinnacle St. Home League distributed samples of Black Diamond cheese to the delegates. Mrs. R. Lane represented the Belleville Station St. Home League, depicting the Ontario Hydro, with name plates and identification.

SPECIAL GUEST

Special guest for the event was Mrs. Colonel W. Effer who spoke on customs and programs for women in East Africa. Mrs. Effer and Colonel Effer are now Territorial Spiritual Evangelists and are stationed in Toronto after having served abroad for some 30 years with the Salvation Army.

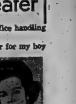
One of the highlights of the afternoon session was a lively hymn quiz. Delegates attempted to match hymns with the names of the women who had written them.

Captain V. Droumbolis and Mrs. A. Kane of the Gananoque Corps conducted a remembrance to former delegates. Angela Lovely of Trenton sang a solo.

EVENING PROGRAM

In the evening, Brigadier W. Hawkes was chairman for the program which included selections by the Belleville Citadel Band and the Home League Singers from Picton. A presentation of "Beautiful Hands of Service" was given by the Kingston Home League.

Mrs. Col. Effer presented the Divisional Award to the Campbellford Home League. The award is presented for all round achievement.



Theme of the rally was "Service." Earlier this week, a similar rally was held in Peterborough for home leagues in that section of the Mid Ontario Division.

Ann Landers
Knits on Boss' Time, Now He Wants Sweater

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I work in a four-girl office handling the switchboard and doing some typing.

A few weeks ago I began to knit a sweater for my boy friend. My boss walked by and asked what I was doing. I told him I was knitting a golf sweater. He said in a half kidding way, "Since you're doing it on my time, I want it."

ANN LANDERS

I thought nothing of his remark until a couple of days ago when the boss came by again and asked me how "his" sweater was coming. He held it up and allowed as how it was going to be a perfect fit — and that the colors pleased him, too.

I'd like to give this sweater to the boss because he has been very good to me, but my boy friend is violently opposed to the idea. I don't know what to do, Ann. I think my boss is expecting the sweater, but I don't want to have any trouble with my boy friend. Please advise. — KNIT WIT.

* * *

DEAR WIT: Give this sweater to your boy friend and get busy on a second one — for the boss. And since he made a crack about knitting on his time I suggest you do all future knitting at home. Many a truth is spoken in jest.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 17-year-old son has always been a good student and an outstanding athlete. I can't be objective about this boy because I am his mother, so I'm asking for your opinion.

A girl (I'll call her Debbie) telephones our son at least once a night. I was hoping she'd see your column several weeks ago about girls who telephone boys. But if she saw it, it didn't help.

Two weeks ago this girl got a new car for her 16th birthday. She comes by every morning to drive our son to school.

She always manages to ring the door bell when we are at the breakfast table. Naturally I feel compelled to invite her to join us.

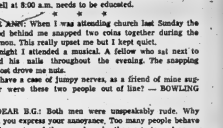
I'm a slow mover in the morning and it's all I can do to attend to the demands of my family, at that hour. Company at 8:00 a.m. I don't need.

Should I keep quiet and hope this romance dies of natural causes or should I drop a hint and hope she takes it? — BURNED TOAST.

DEAR BURNED: A hint would not faze this girl. Tell your son to get up 15 minutes early and eat in the car. A 16-year-old girl who doesn't know any better than to ring a boy's doorbell at 8:00 a.m. needs to be educated.

* * *

DEAR ANN: When I was attending church last Sunday the man seated behind me snapped two coins together during the entire sermon. This really upset me but I kept quiet.



Last night I attended a musical. A fellow who sat next to me clipped his nails throughout the evening. The snapping sound almost drove me nuts.

Do I have a case of jumpy nerves, as a friend of mine suggested, or were these two people out of line? — BOWLING GREEN.

DEAR B.G.: Both men were unspeakably rude. Why didn't you express your annoyance. Too many people behave like doormats and then wonder why they get stepped on.

IT'S Baby Week

APRIL 30 - MAY 7

Start Your Baby Photo Album in Hospital on Day of Birth

You don't need a bare bottom on a bearskin rug in baby's photo album anymore.

The key idea these days is "events", not "poses". And the very first event is birthday — literally.

You may not be able to take the shot yourself, but the few dollars charged by an "official photographer" in the maternity ward is well worth it. That schnooched-up, hours-old face makes a priceless photograph and should be the "starter" for every baby album.

After that, your imagination sets the only limits to how satisfactory the album will be as you leaf through it in years to come.

Just a few simple "rules" will keep you clicking successfully:

1. Record event! Naturally you'll remember to take plenty of pictures at birthday parties and Christmas, but make a note of this little list: Playing with first toy, a bath in the wash basin, first spoon-feeding, first haircut, first long pants or party dress, playing in snow for the first time, meeting a new puppy or kitten.

And if you want a magnificent study in concentration, get some shots of your two or three-year-old trying to tie his shoes or brushing his teeth.

2. Get action in your shots. Kids are just naturally active, so get them on film that way. Shoot baby crawling, eating and drinking. Get the older children on a swing or splashing in the wading pool. By all means have Dad hike one of the youngsters up on his shoulders and watch those little fists grab a double handful of hair.

3. Get a growth record. Keep comparing Billy or Sue with the same "measure" year after year. Baby will be in mother's arms the first year, but after that start standing the kids next to Mom or back-to-back with her. These comparison shots make a fascinating album of their own, kept from birth until the kids leave home.

4. Shoot it several times. When you have a good situation don't just take one picture and put away the camera for an other day. Take the scene from different angles. Try for different expressions. The more shots you take, the more chances of an outstanding picture.

5. Bring the camera down to their level. You don't take pictures of grown-ups from the top of a step ladder. Yet that's exactly the effect you get by holding a camera at waist or eye level while shooting the kids. Get down on your knees or lie full-length on the floor. You'll find the picture are much better, and the exercise will probably do you good anyway.

Finally, what camera should you use? There are literally hundreds of brands and models to choose from. Prices range from a few dollars to several hundred.

If you don't trust your own ability as a photographer then employ a professional. Indeed a famous portrait photographer says there are seven milestones of childhood that should be commemorated with a professional photograph.

According to this schedule, the first trip to the photographer should be at six months, when the child normally has learned to sit up for short periods. He has doubled his birth weight, and his eyes can focus properly.

OTHER STUDIO SHOTS

Other studio shots should be scheduled at — first birthday, when he is teething and has a full head of hair; second birthday, when he is out of diapers; fourth birthday, when he has lost his "baby fat" and his neck and legs have lengthened; seventh birthday, when he has second teeth, 12th birthday, when little girls begin to mature into young ladies; and the 16th birthday when boys sometimes start to shave and children's features stabilize into adulthood.

Whatever system you follow (whether professional or amateur) the camera is a magic box that will faithfully record the best years of your children's lives — if you use it.

General Rules Are Listed For All Good Baby-sitters

To prepare sitters — and especially teenagers — for the sometimes awesome responsibility of babysitting, many training courses have been established in Canada. Among them are the Red Cross, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Y.W.C.A., and 4-H Clubs. There are no formal examinations, yet there are some general rules, mainly based on commonsense and experience, that have become standard through the years. They provide guidelines both for the "old hand" and the newcomer to the baby-sitting ranks.

According to Edna Mae McIntosh, nutritionist for Gerber Products Company, a sitter must like and understand children. Moreover, sitters have to make it their business to learn all they can about their obligations and duties. They have to be flexible. It isn't true that all children are alike. Baby sitters' situations can be as different as chalk and cheese.

GET INSTRUCTIONS

Be sure you know what you are undertaking. Get written instructions from parents. Agree beforehand on the terms and other business aspects. Don't leave the children alone at any time. Record and report all messages.

As for young sitters, they should be provided right away with such informations as the hours, arrangements for returning home, and special privileges that have been granted. Before taking on an assignment sitters should have their own parents' approval.

Parent-employers should employ only a dependable sitter, and should check references carefully. Know whom you are hiring.

Parents can also make things easier for the sitter by instructing children to obey the sitter in their absence. If the sitter is a first-timer in the house, acquaint her with the household including pets other family members, and its general physical layout.

Prepare for emergencies by posting key telephone numbers — such as where to reach the parents, physician, police and fire departments.

Arrange for the sitter's safe return home.

SOME DON'TS

As for the don't, don't expect the sitter to clean house, do the laundry, or do other chores unless that's part of the specific arrangement. Don't overstay your absence — the sitter also likes to go home. Don't make the sitter's life miserable by allowing older children to be unruly or disobedient. Don't forget to brief the sitter "Regarding children's bedtime or nap hours, meal times, feeding instructions, and so on.

On the sitter's part, he should not think the refrigerator is a freeloader's happy hunting ground — a sandwich, yes, but not the whole ham. Don't run up a telephone bill. Don't entertain friends unless you have specific permission and don't put your feet on the chairs!

WELCOME to the BABIES

Tips For Mothers

Parents have a responsibility towards the baby sitter, too. Make conditions attractive and secure for her in the home . . . and make certain she gets home safely.

A prominent speech expert says he can tell what language is spoken in a baby's home by listening to the babble of a three-month-old infant. By the time he is 11 weeks old (and sometimes sooner) the baby has eliminated all the sounds that his language won't require.

A baby's growth rate is fastest the first year than the next few put together. He usually doubles his weight in six months and trebles it by the time he is one year old.

If both parents have dark hair and eyes, chances are 3 to 1 the baby will also be dark. When one parent is left-handed, there is a 16 percent chance the child will be a "lefty" too.

The nutritional status of the woman during pregnancy has a definite effect on the birth formation of the developing baby, experts say. Formation of hard tooth substance (calcification) begins at the embryonic age of about 28 weeks. In permanent teeth, calcification is complete around 8 or 9 years.

A New York psychotherapist claims that mothers and experienced nurses can foretell the future personality of an infant by the way it burps. Strong, determined infants who hold back burps until a loud and clear one pops out become leaders, he claims. The slow, softburpers make up the "masses".

Children may tear up a house, but they never break up a home.

First Parties Should Be Small Ones

Happy birthday to you! It's baby's first birthday and a joyous occasion to celebrate, but do remember the party is for baby!

Tempting as it may be to invite doting aunts and uncles it is much wiser to limit the invitations to two or three toddlers of the same age group. Of course they will be accompanied by mothers who will lend a hand while keeping a watchful eye on their own tots.

Timing is of the utmost importance. Choose an hour that will not interfere with established daily routines. It might be a good idea to schedule the party as soon after lunch as possible and call it a "dessert birthday party". Advise mothers to omit the usual dessert for baby at lunch time that day.

Bear in mind that the attention span of children is short and keep the festivities brief. After the party the youngsters can be home in time for their regular afternoon naps.

Use colorful paper plates, cups and decorations which will eliminate the worry of spills and breakage. It will also facilitate the clean-up chores.

A simple dessert menu that can be served with a flourish in ten minutes without elaborate preparation will be more fun for everyone.

Baby Facts

BUMP HEALERS

One mother keeps a box on a high shelf labeled "bump healers". Into it go small toys, crayons, packets of hard candy. When a toddler is learning to walk there are plenty of tumbles and older children take spills, too. After examining the bruised knee or elbow, and the solution is a trip to the box for a "bump healer".

TRIPLE TROUBLE

Asking if triplets are triple trouble, one proud Long Island mother says: "When work piles up, you often wish there were three of you, but you never wish there were only one of them."

SHORT ORDER LAUNDRY

When folding infant's laundry, make a separate grouping of clean clothes: Place a diaper shirt, nightgown, washcloth, tow el and blanket together in a drawer. Then, at bath time a complete clean wardrobe is available in short order.

Keep Record Of "Shots" Given Baby

The record of baby's immunization against serious diseases is as important a document as his birth certificate. Keep it up to date, and keep it in a safe place.

Many of the serious common diseases such as polio and smallpox can be controlled, thanks to the discoveries of modern medical science, and all babies should be immunized against them. This immunization can begin from the first months of baby's life.

In the hurly-burly of baby's early months and first years, it may not seem important to keep track of his medical history. Quite often, too, there may not seem to be any point in collecting "just another piece of paper". But you will need this information should you change doctors, or if you move to a new town or city later. When baby grows up, he'll need it when he enters school or goes off to camp. It will also be useful should you (or he) apply for a passport to travel abroad.

Your doctor usually provides you with documentation of inoculations or vaccination, or you may keep a "file" of your own. Whatever documentation you get or make, be sure to keep the papers in a safe place.

Immunization is now available for the following diseases, among others: polio (infantile paralysis) smallpox, diphtheria, whooping cough (pertussis), tetanus (lockjaw) and measles. As new medical discoveries are made, more diseases are added to the list.

At the same time, different immunization procedures may be prescribed as new developments in medicine are made. You may be certain that your doctor keeps abreast of these changes, and will adopt the best method.

Pink and Blue Are No Longer "Baby Colors"

Some "eternal verities" just don't seem to stand the test of time. Take the traditional analogy, "blue for the boy and pink for the girl," for example.

Time was when a little mistake in guessing whether the baby would turn out to be a boy or a girl meant stores had to exchange gifts after the baby arrived." All those blue outfits being swapped for pink and vice versa caused quite a few headaches.

Nowadays, however, manufacturers are helping parents-to-be and their friends and relatives play it safe by providing gay pastels for the newcomer. Favorite colors appear to be pale yellow and mint green, with good old white — the mother color of them all — third in demand.

Parents certainly help to take the guesswork out of buying for the big event.

Does it matter whether the infant sleeps on his tummy or his back? Not one baby, says an eminent pediatrician. Millions of babies have slept — and will continue to sleep — either way. They stir or change their positions to suit themselves.

Important for Baby to Get Good Habits in Sleeping

A new baby needs all the sleep nature will give him during his first months — and those sleeping hours may be just the time for mother to make up for her own sleep lost during night feedings.

It really isn't difficult for mother to find the time to rest. The fact is that babies sleep up to 20 hours a day during the first weeks. After about three months this "tapers off" to 18 - to 18 hours a day. By the time he is six months old, his sleeping time averages 14 to 16 hours. By his first birthday, you can count on his needing to sleep only half the day.

While there are individual differences, there is little reason why the major portion of baby's sleep cannot be at night, rather than during daytime. Certainly if he is fed frequently during the day he probably will begin to sleep longer at night, and his sleep periods can conform to those of his parents. If, after the first few weeks, he is fed at regular hours, many eight-week-old babies will sleep the entire period between the 6 p.m. feeding time and 6 a.m. the next day.

There are other factors in establishing good sleeping habits. If baby can sleep in a room by himself, he is much more likely to have the sound sleep he needs. A baby also very readily senses any anxieties in those around him. He usually will not go to sleep if he is aware of the presence of adults, parents or a nurse hovering around him.

NEEDS TO RELAX

It is more important for baby to get relaxed and regular sleep than for doing relatives to be admiring him at bedtime. So, it may be advisable to delay bedtime if he is a bit excited at their presence — and see that aunts and uncles don't fuss too much before he goes to sleep.

Since he spends so much of his early days and months either on his back or on his tummy, it's important that the mattress be of good quality. Don't settle for the second-best when choosing a mattress — and don't be economize on baby's comfort.

Be sure that baby is always warm and dry. Ideally, the mattress should be covered with a water proof and washable material. The use of fitted crib sheets will ensure his comfort during the normal stress and strain of a long sleep. His blankets should fit just snugly enough for him to move, freely, but not so tightly that he becomes uncomfortable.

It's also good to give him all the fresh air he can get — but don't treat him like a polar bear. Protect him from all drafts.

Above all, remember that in his sleeping habits each baby is pretty much an individualist. Just as he will grow up with a mind and a personality of his own, so he will be something of a law unto himself in sleep. He may sleep through a thunder storm, or wake at the drop of a pin, and this may well be the way he'll be the rest of his life.

Bathing Baby Is Important But Don't Copy Polynesians

Cleanliness, it is said, is next to godliness. If that is true, then the Polynesian Islanders on Rarotonga should be spotless examples of virtue. They wash their babies six times a day, while they themselves bathe at least twice!

The Polynesian people apparently are very fond of soap and water. One of the most frequent requests (or are they "fervent prayers") heard on Rarotonga is: "Could I please have another bar of soap?"

It just goes to show that washing behind the ears can become quite a fetish. And it is probably unhealthy, when carried to the Polynesian extremes.

The fact is that there are some simple but golden rules to be observed in this important daily ritual. For one thing, baby should be bathed about the same time each day — and certainly not six times! Many mothers find the best time for bathing is before a feeding — usually the 10 a.m. feeding.

The most important thing to remember is that baby should never be left alone during this time, nor should the mother allow herself to be distracted for a single moment while baby is in the tub or on the table being diapered or dressed.

So, gather all the bath and after-bath equipment, toiletries and clothing and put them in a convenient spot. Be sure to see that potentially harmful things such as diaper pins or scissors are out of his reach.

CHECK TEMPERATURE

Check the room temperature and the temperature of the water, and wash your hands. (It's also a good idea to forego the glamor of growing long fingernails during baby's infancy for the sake of safety and sanitation.) The room temperature should be about 75 or 80 degrees the bath water about body temperature (90 to 100 degrees if you are using a thermometer.) If you are testing in the time-honored way, with your elbow or wrist, the water should feel comfortably warm.

Place a diaper or towel on the bottom of the basin or sink to prevent baby from slipping.

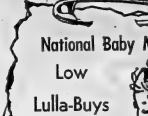
Wash him with a soft cloth and a gentle soap. Start with baby's face and head, doing the diaper area last. Never frighten the baby by splashing water on him, but rather let him begin the fun and splash away, within reason.

When baby is washed, rinse him of all soap, then pat him dry with a soft towel. Smooth and soothe him all over with baby lotion or baby powder. If the diaper area needs special attention, apply a thin covering of petroleum jelly.

After a bath like that, he won't need six applications of soap and water a day, like his Rarotonga counterparts!

Dad Can Give Mother Break Tending Baby

There could be time during Baby Week for the celebration of Give-Mother-a-Break Day.



That's the day on which Dad steps in and relieves Mother of bathing, changing, and feeding baby, and giving Mother that well-earned respite.

Many fathers who take over the day find that they are star performers in these departments and that baby care isn't entirely woman's prerogative. Moreover, Dad doesn't have to wait for an emergency in order to demonstrate some of his native skills.

If he feels he doesn't have that ready knack, there are ways he can acquire it. Many community groups, churches, child-care centers and even department stores offer courses designed for the father-to-be. For reason why fathers who are ham-handed or butter-fingered when it comes to changing diapers.

In these classes, dads and the dads-to-be practise with large dolls, so no harm's done when those diapers just . . . won't . . . (darn it) . . . come out . . . right.

The prospective father graduates from these courses with a new sense of confidence, and to speak of a diploma. He can be helpful from the very first. Even baby will sense that Dad knows what he is doing. At the same time, Mother can safely take a break from her daily round.

Sunday School Lesson

Ahab, the Wicked King

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Some modern theatre is not pleasant to watch, but it says something about life. When the curtain rises in I Kings 21, it rises on the most shameful act in the reign of Israel's most wicked king, but it says something to all who are concerned about a shameful world today.

"Now Naboth the Jezreelite had a vineyard in Jezreel, beside the palace." (I Kings 21:1 RSV) The story begins as simply as that. But in that palace was a very wicked king. The sacred record says of him that "Ahab did more to provoke the Lord, the God of Israel, to anger than all the kings of Israel who were before him." (I Kings 16: 33 RSV).

Ahab was a weak man. When frustrated, he could sulk like a spoiled child. He had no example of a wicked father. In addition, he married a thoroughly unscrupulous woman. The record says, "There was none who sold himself to do what was evil in the sight of the Lord like Ahab, whom Jezebel his wife incited." (I Kings 21:25 RSV)

ROYAL WINE DENIED

Ahab wanted Naboth's vineyard. Naboth refused to sell it. He had inherited it, and, in keeping with the traditions of his people, he felt the land was not his to sell. It belonged to his family. He simply held it in trust for those who would come after him.

Ahab sulked. When Jezebel found out the reason, she plotted murder to solve the problem. She conceived a dastardly plan that would throw the blame for Naboth's death on religiously-incited neighbors. By means of this plan, she managed to have Naboth accused of blasphemy and stoned to death. Evidently Naboth's sons were also murdered to get them out of the way. (II Kings 9:26)

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for May 1: "God Confronts Ahab," I Kings 21.

The idea of Naboth's murder was not Ahab's, but he did nothing to prevent it. Therefore, he shared in the guilt. In this sense, he belongs to that great host of people who, though they may not do anything terribly wrong, never lift a finger to try to stop those who do. G. A. Studdert-Kennedy once wrote that most people today would not crucify Jesus; they would just pass him by. Many who would never think of murder do nothing to stop gossip that murders another's reputation. Many who would never lift a hand to strike another give assent to discrimination that condemns thousands to ghetto living. They commit wrong, not by doing it, but by failing to speak out against evil attitudes and conditions.

God needs those who will speak out against wanton disregard of human rights. In Ahab's day, that voice was Elijah's. Ahab's comment shows he feared Elijah would come. "Have you found me, O my enemy?" (I Kings 21:20 RSV) This was not the first time Elijah had spoken. His fearless accusations were a constant thorn in the king's side. Without his interference, Ahab could have gone his evil way unhindered. The prophet spoke to declare God's judgment on the king's evil ways.

The church needs to be the Elijah of today. If the church remains silent, who will speak out against many of the entrenched evils of our time? Yet too often the church is strangely silent. How little the church has had to say about the denial of human rights, and the other great moral wrongs that beset mankind today.

Ahab had the vineyard, but at what a price! Ahab did not buy Naboth's vineyard with money, but his own integrity. "You have sold yourself," cried Elijah, "to do what is evil in the sight of the Lord." (I Kings 21:20 RSV) And the sacred writer agrees. "There was none who sold himself to do what was evil in the sight of the Lord like Ahab."

When a person sells himself to gain an advantage, the price is too high. "For what is a man profited," asked Jesus, "if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" (Matthew 16:26 KJV) As some modern poet expressed it, "Sill as of old, man by himself is priced; for thirty pieces, Judas sold himself, not Christ."

Ahab did have the grace to be sorry. There is no reason to doubt his sincerity in this. His repentance came too late to help Naboth, but it did help Ahab. So great is God's mercy that He will forgive the very worst offender who is truly repentant. That Ahab was saved from some of the punishment he deserved in this life is another evidence of God's amazing grace. As Isaiah expressed it, "Though your sins are like scarlet, they shall be as white as snow." (Isaiah 1:18 RSV)

RCAF Turn-Around Times Best by Far in NATO Airlift

By BOB MacKENZIE

BARDUFOSS, Norway (CP) The helicopters used by the RCAF and the Canadian Army received top marks from Norwegian and other foreign officers during NATO's mid-March exercise Winter Express in northern Norway.

"The Canadian air force was tremendously efficient in the airlift," said Lt. - Col. Peter Nissen of the Royal Norwegian Air Force, chief of operations at this airfield used for the airlift of troops from Canada and other countries.

"Their turn - around times were excellent—the best by far of any nation."

The turn - around time—time taken to unload, refuel and service the C-130 Hercules transports in the airlift—averaged 32 minutes in the initial phase of the operation which saw 1,000 soldiers and their equipment flown in from Camp Gagetown, N.B., and Ottawa.

Next best time was 62 minutes by the U.S. Air Force which also used Hercules aircraft and 70 minutes by the U.S. Marine Corps.

WASTED NO TIME

Italian and British planes took seven longer, but they were using different aircraft and exact comparisons are not possible. The Italian C-119 Flying Boxcars needed 86 minutes on the ground here Argosy Royal Flight Flying Boxcars needed 86 minutes on the ground here averaged 92 minutes.

"The Canadians worked like precision machines," Col. Nilsen observed after the supply phase of the exercise was complete.

"When the planes landed, everything was ready and the men were at work even before the propellers stopped. They didn't waste a second."

The airlift and additional supply flights were a major test of NATO readiness in the three-week exercise. The exercise revolved around the transportation of NATO's Allied Command Europe land force designed to meet any attack on Norway, with the assistance of Greece and Turkey in the south.

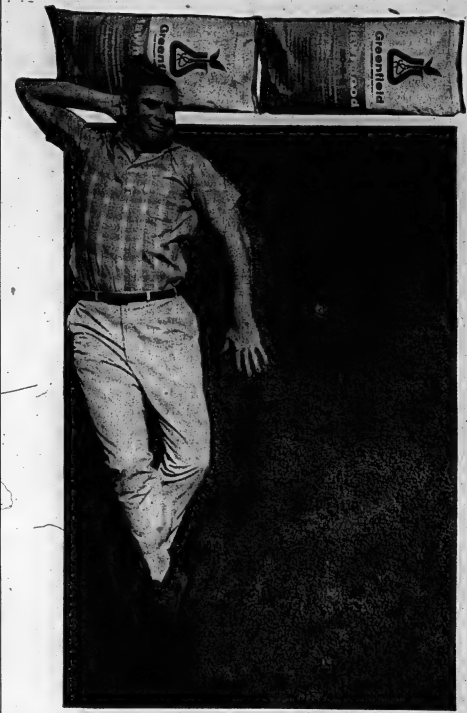
Norwegian Army's Brigade North was strengthened by the mobile brigade consisting of Canadian, Italian and British infantry battalions along with U.S. troops for special duties and air force squadrons from Britain, The Netherlands and the U.S.

WEATHER WAS ADVERSE

Second part of the exercise —Inner Express—tested the ability of the NATO brigade to survive, move and fight in the northern climate.

Return of the international contingents was the final phase of the operation.

The initial air movement was completed on schedule despite erratic weather that delayed many flights. But the final operation ran into trouble from the start.



Bad weather at this mountain base delayed the first flights, then a USAF Hercules, slammed into a mountain trying to make a midnight instrument landing. All seven crew members were killed.

The crash stopped all operations for more than 12 hours as helicopter search parties combed the mountains and nearby fiords.

When the airlift resumed, the RCAF ran into trouble with weather at Fredericton and a Yukon with 126 men aboard had to go on to Trenton, Ont. The troops later were flown back to Camp Gagetown by other planes.

Tomorrow: Arctic weather failed to ground manoeuvre helicopters.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate
"What's Your Problem"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Often an owner is asked to take back a second mortgage as part of the selling price. The reply to our correspondent gives general rules about when a decision can be based.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I agreed to sell my home for $20,000. Today, two weeks before settlement, the broker tells me that I will have to take back a second mortgage of $3,000 in order to complete the transaction.

The immediate cash need of the buyer is apparently not of the best and the bank reduced the amount of the mortgage. I know very little about real estate and I have told my broker I would give him an answer after I received your opinion. — Almost Ignorant

ANSWER: There are times when an owner is justified in taking part of the consideration in the form of a second mortgage — in this case he is not.

The test of a second mortgage is justified is one receives a price higher than fair market value. The buyer usually decreases the down payment required, and the owner is compensated for the additional risk by the higher price he receives.

It also is justified when one is trying to sell a property in either poor condition or in a poor neighborhood. By making the down payment small or nonexistent, a difficult property becomes salable.

However, it is not justified if one is selling a good house at a fair price, or because the amount of the first mortgage is decreased due to the poor credit of the buyer. Second mortgages represent high risk. Indicative of this is that in the current market they are charging 6 to 7 per cent on the dollar.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I thought I had an excellent idea for a store to sell children's books and records. It didn't work out and I am now back in my job as a librarian.

I signed a three - year lease for $150 per month. After losing money for four months, I closed the store. Almost immediately the property was re-rented for $100 per month.

Now I am being asked to pay $1,000 or the difference of $50 per month for the next 20 months, making on the lease. Why should I pay because the landlord made a poor choice with the second tenant? — Will Now Remain a Librarian

ANSWER: A lease is a binding obligation and cannot be cancelled at one's convenience or because things don't work out. Since you agreed to pay $150 per month, and the remaining 20-month period and the landlord is now collecting $50 less, he is asking you to make good the difference.

You are fortunate that the store was re-rented, otherwise you would be obligated for $150 per month. If you had had the foresight to request that your attorney insert an "escape clause" in the lease, you would not now be in trouble.

* * *

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Several weeks ago, you said a real estate broker selling a house can usually obtain a better mortgage than a homeowner making his own sale. I asked a banker in our town and he said it was not true.

He told me that, the mortgage depends on the property, its location and the financial standing of the borrower. I would be interested in your comments. — Hoping to Sell Myself

ANSWER: The banker gave you the "text-book" answer. It is correct in theory but not in practice. An individual is in the mortgage business and is engaged in his lifetime — the broker on a day-to-day basis.

The real estate brokers are the major source of mortgage business. Therefore, a broker has an established relationship and can usually command a "favor" when he presents it. In addition, because of his activities, the broker knows which banks are interested in what, a trouble he saves at the moment.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: You'll have to agree that, wood siding painted a bright red doesn't fit in with surroundings in the colonial houses. That's just what my neighbor did! I get disgusted every time I look at his house.

I offered to pay for a new paint job but he got insulted! I presented him with a petition and he tore it up. I even had our real estate assessor to raise his taxes but he wouldn't. I'm sure he thinks I'm crazy. Any suggestions to help me. The red color is making me neurotic. — Going Batty

ANSWER: By painting his house red, your neighbor has done nothing illegal, immoral or compromised the public safety or welfare. He has done wrong you as much as you say, then I suggest that you will have to institute legal action to compel your neighbor is staying put. You may pay for the privilege of kindness and humility because of harassment? It's been known to accomplish wonders — even such unusual actions as changing the color of a house.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he cannot enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt in answer to certain letters as possible through his column.

In the following story British author Frank Tuohy writes about the Chinese people's attitude toward Viet Nam.

By FRANK TUOHY

HANGCHOW, China (AP) — Here in China, people are surprisingly lukewarm about the war in Viet Nam. I assume this is the official point of view, because the official views are all the visiting foreigner gets.

Yet the Chinese certainly had foreigners in mind when they are ready for war. Take, for example, the curious galago-on outside my Nanking hotel.

Early on a Sunday morning — and Sunday is a rest day in China — I was in other unsettled gangs of blue-clad girls were dragging in truckloads of earth from outside, and others were stamping it down on to a raised mound beyond some magnolia trees. Because I was at the time interested in the tea table, with one each small table with its green and white cover, Silver candlesticks with the tapers the same shades of the lilies in the centre, finished the arrangement.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. Gay Cox, wife of the minister, Mrs. Norman Hutchison, president of the organization, Mrs. H. I. Langford, and Mrs. Mack Storey. Mrs. Wilfred Smith, Mrs. Carl Wright, Mrs. Stanley Bond, and Mrs. Earl Dier presided over the silver services, one for tea, and the other for coffee. Mrs. Carmel-ita Fraken and Mrs. Ray Huffman supervised the arrangements in the dining room. Mrs. Clarence Reid of the Deborah Unit and Mrs. H. H. Langford and Mrs. Bert Hutchison of the A unit were in charge of overall arrangements. They called on Mrs. Ray Huffman and Mrs. Earl Dier assist as hostesses and in serving and on others to assist in receiving guests.

A cooked food table was well patronized, and a candy table was presided over by two of their mothers was most popular.

Two fashion shows added to the pleasure of the guests. Mrs. Rodney Clark commented on the shows. Mrs. Ray Huffman was chairman of the Assistance Auxiliary to the Belleville and Stirling Hospital, and Mrs. Dier, convener of spring hats from Bernice's Ren-Shoppe.

Furthermore, we are in China. I have seen a picture of Ho Chi Minh, and everyone is encouraged to reflect on the question of support.

A natural Vietnamese journalist I know was told in our factory: "Viet Nam is an incentive for us to increase our production."

She asked: "Do you mean to work hard in order to send your goods to North Viet Nam?"

HELP US

"No, to help us encourage our workers to increase their productivity."

Almost the same words were used to me in a commune outside Canton.

Yet I feel that the Chinese believe that the Viet Cong is composed of South Vietnamese who are heroically liberating their country. The Chinese compare the situation to their own in 1945-46. Then they had fought a war with Japan, as the Vietnamese later ousted the French.

U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk has said that China is seeking to establish a hegemony in Asia under the guise of supporting wars of liberation. The Chinese answer, which is acceptable when you are in the country itself, is that they have much too much to do to bother with over-seas harbor such ambitions. The cautious sympathy they profess for the Vietnamese would seem to support this.

What concerns China is American intentions. Shelter may be few—the only one I saw in Peking was on the university campus—but there is plenty evidence of a militaristic mood.

In some ways the face of China already is the face of a country at war. Trains and public places are crowded with soldiers: Large groups of girls were being harangued in the Museum of the Chinese Revolution in Peking. In the courtyard of the military museum, children lined up on a freezing day to inspect the reassembled wreckage of a U-2 and two pilotless spy planes.

Tulip Tea Held By Grace U.C.W.

NAPANEE — The low temperature was a disappointment to the U.C.W. of Grace United Church, but at least there was sunshine for a Tulip Tea on Wednesday afternoon.

Spring flowers were in profusion, and tulips predominating. They were placed in strategic positions about the hall, and tulips in pastel colors centred the tea table, with one on each small table with its green and white cover. Silver candlesticks with the tapers the same shades of the tulips in the centre, finished the arrangement.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. Gay Cox, wife of the minister, Mrs. Norman Hutchison, president of the organization, Mrs. H. I. Langford, and Mrs. Mack Storey. There was no charge was gratuitous in all who aided in any way in making the tea such a success.

4-H CLUB GIRLS

Saturday is Achievement Day for the 4-H Club Girls of the county and the local unit of the club held last week to organize the 4-H Clubs for this year, but the actual organization is not completed. Boys and girls in this county are being given their choice of seven different types of clubs, such as potato, calf, swine, oats and barley, grain and corn, poultry and home economics. Organization is being carried out by Extension Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Garnet Mills is the representative for Lennox and Addington, Motto of the clubs is: "Learn to Do by Doing". Each club has its own group sponsor, sometimes a farm organization and sometimes a service club.

FACE CHARGES

BELLEVILLE-(CP) — Four Montreal men appeared Thursday on preliminary hearing charged with robbing the branch of the Bank of Montreal at nearby Frankford of $18,000. Charged are Maurice Langis, Armand Bisson, 29, Victor Yeasley, 41, and Gilles Gaudette, 27.

District Field Man Gives Report at O.F.A. Meeting

NAPANEE — "The Ontario Federation of Agriculture is taking a good look at itself and finding it has failings," Mr. Roy Cunningham of Perth told the meeting of the local Farmers' Inn Tuesday evening in Napanee.

Mr. Cunningham, the field man for the O.F.A. for this district was giving a digest of the winter conference in Toronto where the theme was: "Where Is the Ontario Federation of Agriculture Going?"

The speaker described a venture tried for the first time in January last winter. Here, farmers were given a free course in farm economics and management, mathematics, and welding. The course lasted several weeks, and each night was filled for each day by attended. Some might not have been able to afford this kind of financial assistance. Others may have been attracted at first only by the money. But within a few days the men were so interested that they were thinking of little else. Afterwards, they were all the more willing to pay for the course.

"We must now recognize the fact that redevelopment of the farm is the redevelopment of the farmer. This must be a self-help program," he concluded.

Plans for the chicken barbecue were discussed but committee reports will be given at the next meeting. The speaker will be George McLaughlin, Queen's Park, who will speak on Milk Board, and the date is to be June 21.

Mrs. Fred Bell, Mrs. Fred Bell, Mrs. Norman Hutchison, and Bruce Aikenbreck, members of the local committee, were attended the meeting, and approached the members for assistance in moving a barn which they have been given. It is in excellent condition, and would serve a number of purposes here in town. Agricultural implements which are being lost because there is no place to keep them.

Riding

There was unanimous objection to the proposed riding—said a candidate would have to buy time on radio stations in Edmonton, Red Deer, Calgary and Lethbridge to reach its voters.

Mr. Klodt said he understood the commissioners were to be non-partisan. "Will it be strange that of the four members of the commission in Alberta, three were Liberals and one a Social Credit."

Alberta, which has 17 constituencies now, would get two more under redistribution.

WOULD WIPE OUT RIDING

Mr. Cunningham said Calgary and Edmonton each be given a new riding and three ridings be established west to include the Rocky Mountain area. This would wipe out Mountain Riding.

Their objections were relatively mild compared to those from Ontario, which will have 88 seats compared to the present 85.

Richard A. Bell (PC — Carleton), whose Ottawa-based riding would be split, objected to Carleton to stretch from Ottawa to the St. Lawrence River, to Cornwall, several types of clubs, such as potato, calf, swine, oats and barley, grain and corn, poultry and home economics. Organization is being carried out by Extension Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Garnet Mills is the representative for Lennox and Addington, Motto of the clubs is: "Learn to Do by Doing". Each club has its own group sponsor, sometimes a farm organization and sometimes a service club.

Work Begins On Centennial Park Project

DESERONTO — M embusscen, co-operation and faith in the fellowmen prompt the thing. Centennial Park in Deseronto is off to a flying start. Their goal is $5,000 and the only rough ground overgrown with bushes and with trees in want of trimming, but by a year it has belonged to the town, and a group of dedicated people has been realizing only for spring to carry out the plans which they have been formulating at their meetings.

"Less than two weeks ago the Town Council turned on the green light which was the signal for action, and work was begun almost immediately. Unwanted trees have been cut down and the rest properly trimmed. All the debris has been burned. The 225 feet of 10-inch pipe which will carry off the water from the ground, and a gate in the bay, is there, and the work of placing it began Thursday. By the next day, or Monday at the latest, Courcett's Construction Co. of Napanee will have a bulldozer on the spot to take out the stumps and level the ground. Then, 200 cubic yards of it, has been ordered and will be used to make a beach along half the length of the shore. Next year as much more will be drawn. But there will be room for a year for the young folks to use it when they want to swim.

LAWN AND FLOWER BEDS

Once the land is cleared and levelled, grass will be sown and flower beds laid out.

The Town Council has been acquiring unused land, and now is making use of the results. In front of the buildings that stood there, A ravine on the property must be filled in and the tree stumps and the rubble from what was once the public hockey rink and curling will be used as fill. The factory built by the Eddy match Co. has been given to the town, by the Ideal-Venders among them until they erected their new building. A few years ago it was a dump, the ruins have been unsightly for some time. Now this eyesore will disappear.

A year from now the project will have been completed, with new rooms, a fully equipped playground for the small children, and tables, benches and barbeques for the picnickers. The town foot-man walk to it while their picnic baskets, or just to rest and admire the view, one of the most beautiful in this district. Tourists who come to the new bridge can rest before continuing their journey.

Those working on this project includes the secretary, John Layfield, of Deseronto; James McVicker, the postmaster; Bert Lloyd, now retired who has had charge of the work; Mrs. Harold Lott, mayor and businessman; James Sharpe, town councillor; Charles Stanley, police Sr. president of the Red Cross Society, and representing the Salvation Army, also.

retain its 32 ridings under the redistribution.

Objections from Quebec Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia were heard as the debate opened Wednesday. A general objection by Quebec members was that the islands and Newfoundland's seven Liberals made it the only province to lodge no objection.

Street Cleaners Find Money In Catch Basin

TORONTO (CP)—To five Toronto street cleaners the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow is in a gutter catch basin.

Charles Bolton, Robert Murray, Ronald Bill, Lorne Cowling and Hugh Oxton scooped up a total of $13,200 in sodden, muck-covered $50 bills as they made their rounds along city streets Thursday.

Police said the 264 bills are part of a shipment of 900 stolen from the mail in December. There may be as much as $31,800 still under the streets.

Gerald Fultz, district director of postal services, said the new bills were to have been mailed from a Toronto bank to a Sudbury, Ont., bank where they were to be rerouted to another bank in Northern Ontario. The shipment was taken from the van of the military museum, children lined up on a freezing day to inspect the reassembled wreckage of a U-2 and two pilotless spy planes.

BCI Concert Band in Varied Program

To an audience interested in the accomplishments of young people, the Concert Band of B.C.I.V.S. has brought an evening of positive enjoyment. Composed of fifty-some active members under the skilful direction of Mr. C. E. Templer, the band presented a program that displayed the skill and the progress of these young musicians who take their music seriously.

Through a program ranging from the catchy selection from "My Fair Lady" through the delightful "Themes from Offenbach" and ending with the demanding "Melodies from the Operas by Richard Wagner," the students showed that they enjoyed their attainments.

Organ accompaniment for "In a Monastery Garden" played by the Saxophone Trio — Donna McKnight, Kerry Hill, Wesley Weese — was by Mr. R. Robertson who had earlier provided an organ prelude.

The Trumpet Trio—Sherrill Taylor, David Cass and Robert Reid — in a rousing rendition of "Bugler's Holiday" and the Clarinet Trio of Bruce Brown, Stephen Lee and Ricky Loynes playing the novelty "The Typewriter" were talented variations of style and interpretation.

Soloist Gary Chaplin handled Haydn's "Trumpet Concerto in E flat" with exacting finesse, as did Scott Bradford in his piano solo of Chopin's Mazurka and Polonaise in A. The polished performances of these two young players did nothing, however, to eclipse the pleasantly delicate playing of Jane McFarlane in her violin solo "Allegro Brillante" by ten Have. For this number, Mrs. M. McFarlane accompanied her daughter. Nor does Mr. L. Lambert's oboe solo "Rondo" by Handel suffer by comparison nor by being mentioned last.

Mr. R. Rose whose bass horn playing is always a gesture of goodwill towards the school and the band is to receive here public recognition.

In past years the Spring Musicale has given real joy to its audiences. This year's presentation has also, and stands as a fitting finale to a year's achievements in the musical course of the school.

Egg Production Down in March From Last Year

OTTAWA (CP)—Egg production in March amounted to 37,100,000 dozen, down nearly five per cent from a year earlier, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today. Production in the first three months of this year was 107,00,000 dozen, a decrease of 5.6 per cent from the same period of 1965.

Parliamentary Notebook

OTTAWA (CP)—The minority Pearson government is expected to face new tests of confidence next week in a two-day supply debate in the Commons.

With MPs progressing faster than expected in a discussion of the proposed new electoral MPs, government House Leader McIlraith said Thursday night the supply debate likely will be held Monday and Tuesday.

This will give opposition parties their first openings to challenge the government since major controversies broke out over a CBC dispute and the handling of the Munsinger judicial inquiry.

CBC producers are threatening to strike Sunday night to protest changes affecting the program This Hour Has Seven Days and the opposition failed last week in an attempt to debate the whole issue of public broadcasting.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has also been critical of the scope and organization of the inquiry into the Gerda Munsinger affair.

There was no immediate indication as to which issue the opposition will choose to raise, however. Non - confidence motions can be introduced on almost any topic in supply debates.

P.E. County Has High Infant Morality Rate Legislature Is Told

TORONTO (CP)—Infant mortality rates are as high as 31 per thousand in one southeastern Ontario county although the provincial average is only 23 deaths per thousand babies born, Stephen Lewis (NDP — Scarborough West) said in the legislature Thursday.

Mr. Lewis, speaking on the estimates of the health department, listed several counties and cities where babies have a lower-than-average chance of surviving.

He said Prince Edward County has an infant mortality rate of 31 per thousand, Prescott and Russell 28.1, Kingston 26.6 and Oshawa 26.6.

In other business:

—Health Minister Matthew Dymond said the Ontario government cannot assist in family planning councils because a federal law prevents the dissemination of birth control information.

Dr. Dymond also revealed a report on a study of a band of Indians in the Lake Superior area showing that about one-third of the band's estimated income was spent on liquor.

—Plaza of a Toronto Progressive Conservative association to hold its annual meeting in a committee room at Queen's Park were shot down when a cabinet minister agreed with an opposition member that it is not government policy to allow political meetings in the Parliament buildings.

PROBLEM GENERAL

In reply to Mr. Lewis's suggestion that the variations in infant mortality rates may be tied to retention of doctors to serve in remote Ontario areas, Dr. Dymond said this is a problem even in the Soviet Union.

If Russia had trouble placing doctors in the hinterland, he declared it can be done in a free society such as Ontario.

The study of the Indian band was conducted by the Addiction and Drug Addiction Research Foundation.

Dr. Dymond said the foundation concluded that the major problem in Indian drinking is an economic one. It found that [illegible] run out of money, they are forced to go on the wagon.

"The modern reserve Indian simply cannot afford to sustain an addiction," the report from the foundation's director, H. David Archibald, said.

The plan of the Forest Hill Progressive Conservative association to have a coffee session with their provincial member, Edward Dunlop, followed by election of officers, in a Queen's Park committee room, was scotched by Ken Bryden (NDP —Toronto - Woodbine), who asked Public Works Minister Roy Connell whether "the committee rooms in this building (are) available for political meetings."

Mr. Connell said they are not.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, APRIL 29, 1966

WRECKER'S HAMMER is slated for these two 40-year-old display buildings at the Belleville Fair Grounds. Condemned as unsafe, the Manufacturer's and Commodore buildings will be temporarily strengthened for this year's fair and then torn down to make way for a new structure.

Two of Familiar Structures At Fairgrounds Scheduled To Be Wrecked This Fall

There hasn't been any talk of it being made a Centennial Year project, but the year 1967 could see at least one new display building at the Belleville Fair Grounds.

At least, two of the long familiar structures on the fairgrounds — the Manufacturers and the Commodore buildings — are scheduled for the wrecker's hammer sometime this fall and parks board officials say that a new structure, of some kind will have to be provided.

The reason is that the two buildings, in use since the mid 1920's have been condemned by city building and fire officials and they will be torn down immediately after this year's Belleville Fair is over.

FOUNDATIONS DETERIORATED

Alderman Donald Williams, chairman of the local parks board, said that the foundations of the old structures had deteriorated allowing the walls and roofs to sag so that the structures were no longer safe.

The two buildings will be temporarily strengthened to assure safety for this year's four-day fair, but immediately the fair is over they will be torn down to make way for a new structure.

No plans have been finalized regarding replacement buildings but Ald. Williams said it was possible that the new structure would be built to serve the purposes of the two present buildings.

MANY REFLACED

With the removal of the two old fair buildings this fall, practically all of the original structures at the fairgrounds will have disappeared.

Over a period of many years practically all of the horse barn structures have been replaced, while sale, poultry and cattle barns have also been provided. Also in comparatively recent years a new junior farmers building, and a sheep and swine building were added.

More than a decade ago the original grandstand was torn down, and the present stand was constructed.

Although the Belleville Agricultural Society has been in existence for more than 100 years, the fair has been held on the present grounds for only about 40 years.

The former fairgrounds were on the site now occupied by the American Optical. When the fair outgrew the former grounds, the present grounds on the opposite side of the street were purchased.

OWNED BY BOARD

The fairgrounds, now owned by the Belleville Parks Board which rent the show facilities to the fair board.

The parks board realized some time ago that the two old fair buildings would have to be razed, but the decision to do so temporarily re-inforces them for use during this year's fair was rushed only yesterday.

Parks Board officials, together with City Building Inspector Grant Sickle and fire inspectors J. Darvell and Robt. Fair went over the structures and agreed they could be re-inforced to serve for one more Belleville Fair.

Assessors Blamed for Large Part of Money Lost in Tax Collection to Municipalities

TORONTO (CP)—Municipalities have no one to blame but themselves for their money problems, delegates at the Community Planning Association of Canada were told Thursday.

Municipal Affairs Minister J. W. Spooner and Patrick Gillis, director of municipal assessment, blamed assessors' practices for a large part of the money lost in tax collection.

Mr. Spooner said municipalities are using assessment methods not sufficiently productive and are taking only 60 per cent of their potential from assessment.

Mr. Gillis said a number of municipalities make little or no attempt to equalize assessment. He said reassessments undertaken in 1967 are still to be done today.

Municipalities are losing 40 per cent of their tax potential to church exemptions, dealer with industrial hasbsand investment, he said.

TRADING'S POOR

"By and large assessors are poorly trained, work in cramped quarters and are given other jobs to do," he said. "They are not given the assistance accorded other professions is municipal employment."

But Mr. Spooner said at the one-day seminar, studies by the provincial and federal governments may result in a tax structure providing a more equitable allocation of revenue resources in relation to expenditure.

Norman Pearson, former Hamilton - Wentworth planning commissioner, said municipalities need a new source of taxation or relief from existing responsibilities.

"Increased provincial grants would make municipalities outright puppets of provincial administrations, he said. It is impossible for municipal government to meet the problems of urban expansion from the proceeds of the civic tax structure.

Mr. Pearson suggested income and automobile taxes be used for municipal government.

W. E. Thomson, Kitchener planning commissioner, told the seminar that one cure for slum conditions in cities could be a birth assessment on land values.

A big taxation on land would force land speculators and slum landlords to put their property to more economic use, he said.

R. H. Cooper, London, Ont., city clerk, said the burden of education costs should be taken from property taxes. Most municipal school boards should be abolished and education put in the hands of the province.

Oil Airlift To Zambia Nears End

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCAF oil airlift to Zambia will wind up at the end of this month because "Zambia has the required oil," External Affairs Minister Martin told the Commons Thursday.

Mr. Martin, answering questions in the Commons, drew the attention of the House to the presence in the gallery of Simon Kapwepwe, Zambian foreign minister currently visiting Canada.

Mr. Kapwepwe "has indicated the gratitude of his government to Canada for the contribution that it made to Zambia with this airlift," Mr. Martin added.

Oil supplies to Zambia were curtailed when Commonwealth countries imposed an economic embargo to be applied to neighboring Rhodesia against Premier Ian Smith's breakaway regime in Salisbury.

Mr. Martin also said the Canadian government is being consulted along with other Commonwealth members about current talks in Salisbury, Rhodesia, between the British government and that of Mr. Smith.

Study of Indian Band Shows Third of Icome Spent on Drink

TORONTO (CP)—A study of a band of Indians in the Lake Superior area by the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation showed that about one-third of the band's estimated income was spent on liquor, Health Minister Matthew Dymond revealed Thursday.

This was offered in support of the foundation's conclusion that the major problem regarding Indian drinking is an economic one. It found the alcoholism among Indians was seldom the cause of family break-up or of major medical consequences.

The study showed that when Indians run out of money, they are forced to go on the wagon.

"The modern reserve Indian simply cannot afford to sustain an addiction," Dr. Dymond was told in a report from the foundation's director, H. David Archibald.

The director suggested there is a real possibility that consumption of alcohol will increase as Indians improve their financial position.

"Furthermore, if the present trend toward heavy consumption of fortified wines continues among the present younger generation, we should expect to encounter increasing numbers of Indians with clinically manifested symptoms of alcohol addiction during the next 10 years."

Mr. Archibald recommended the establishment of an intensive alcohol educational program for the Indian population.

"The Indian is thought by many whites to be naturally prone to the excessive use of alcohol," he said. "However, very few are, or have been, treated for alcoholism in the Canadi clinical sense.

"Despite the general use of alcohol, Indian drinking is a predominantly social concern, and in individual one. There does not seem to be any evidence of marked consequences, such as dietary deficiencies, lowered resistance to respiratory diseases."

The study showed that drinking by Indians is the cause of considerable crime on the reserve. Indians had a markedly higher rate of arrests than other minority groups.

Alcohol was blamed mainly for deaths of 15 Indians during the last five years who were killed by trains while walking on the railway tracks in the Kenora area. The tracks were used because this was the only route home for the Indians.

"In our opinion," said Mr. Archibald, "severe intoxication coupled with the lack of reasonable methods of transportation to their homes probably is the explanation of these deaths."

RCMP Commissioner George McClelland told the Gerda Munsinger Inquiry he was asked by Prime Minister Pearson in November, 1964, whether the force had any information of irregularity or scandal concerning MPs.

He replied in the affirmative and turned over the Munsinger file to Mr. Pearson, he testified.

The National Farmers Union presented a brief calling for nationalization of the CPR for attempting a "swindle" over passenger services.

Producers offered to suspend a strike deadline against the railway in their lobbying for a subsidy. CNC would [illegible] action not to retire the cow portion of This Hour Has Seven Days.

Ontario MPs also got their views on the record.

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. EDT to continue the redistribution debate, he Senate stands adjourned until May 3.

More Troops Reach Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. force in South Viet Nam rose nearly 20,000 since 1 of 6 with the arrival of the rest of the U.S. 25th Division from Hawaii.

More than 4,000 infantrymen landed from planes at Vung Tau, 65 miles southeast of Saigon, completing a 25-per-cent increase in American forces since the start of the year.

No long-range limit on the size of the U.S. contingent has been announced by the Pentagon, but the joint command hopes to field 1,000,000 South Vietnamese. U.S. and other troops against the Viet Cong by the end of 1966.

Labor Congress Votes 2-1 To Admit Seafarers' Union

By BEN WARD

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rejecting angry words of protest, the Canadian Labor Congress voted 2 to 1 Thursday to set the stage for a return of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada to its ranks.

Delegates adopted on a show of hands a committee report empowering the CLC executive council to re-admit the SIU if it is satisfied the SIU meets the requirements of the constitution."

The SIU was tossed out at the 1960 convention, technically on raiding charges but acutally for violence against other maritime unions. At that time the CLC stipulated the seafarers could not be taken back except by a convention vote.

Debate on the issue was cut off after 18 speakers had been heard—22 in cautious praise of the SIU and six blistering attacks the union and its controversial leadership.

SIU President Leonard (Red) McLaughlin told reporters he was "very, very happy" at the outcome. He hoped arrangements for affiliation would be worked out soon.

The vote came after William Mahoney of the Steelworkers, a member of the CLC executive committee, appealed to the 1,500 delegates to save the union to the 21 - member council, whose officers are to be elected next year. He said if the SIU was admitted and did not behave, they would soon be out again.

CAUSES UPROAR

There was an uproar of protest when the vote was called, most of it from members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

"You're not going to create havoc in here," CLC President Claude Jodoin shouted. He said the decision on whether the SIU should be taken back had been requested by the convention and rejected in a show of hands.

After the adjournment CBRT delegates complained their protests had been ignored when various speakers were selected by Mr. Jodoin.

The debate led off on an anti-SIU note by Larry Sheffe of the Ottawa auto workers' office. He said the SIU had only been given a facade of respectability.

"If doubt very much if the international president of the SIU is his real president," he said "It's Hal Banks."

Banks, fled as president by the federal trusteeship which has been administering SIU, now lives in Toronto and runs for the American SIU. He fled Canada two years ago to escape a five-year jail term for conspiracy to assault a rival union leader.

LABOR SHOULD UNITE'

Murray Cotterill of the Steelworkers' Toronto office said the federal trustees have given the SIU only $250,000 since the health and labor should be united.

Jack O'Neal of Vancouver said there were delegates in the hall still bearing the scars of beatings by SIU goon squads. Mr. McLaughlin had been described in the federal inquiry report leading to the trusteeship as treeship as "clever, deceptive and deceitful."

Former labourers controlling the SIU had not changed, Mr. O'Neal said.

Mr. Jodoin and Louis Laberge, a CLC vice-president for Quebec, said the council would study all matters thoroughly.

Jack Staples of Port Colborne, Ont., said seafarers went aboard ships to influence the SIU election last year won by the McLaughlin slate. All those involved were lieutenants of Banks and equally guilty of the crimes he committed.

Mr. Staples heads the Canadian Maritime Union, set up by the CLC as a rival organization to the SIU. It has about 300 members, compared to 7,500 in the SIU and another 1,500 in a subsidiary, the Canadian Marine Officers Union.

He said it still costs $400 for a sailor to obtain full-card membership in the SIU, a situation condemned in the federal inquiry.

PREDICTS EFFECT

REGINA (CP) — Provincial Minister Maurice Sauve predicted Thursday that within five years the federal-provincial ARDA program will have had a significant effect on rural areas in Canada. Mr. Sauve, minister in charge of the Agricultural and Rural Development Act, was here to meet provincial officials concerned with implementing ARDA projects.

Father Wanted To See Birth Of His Child

POTTSTOWN, Pa. (AP)—Mrs. Bernice Schultz gave birth to her fifth child this week—with her husband sitting by her side handcuffed to her right wrist.

David C. Schultz didn't get the attending physician's permission to be there. Nor did attendants at Pottstown Memorial Hospital give him permission to enter the delivery room just after dawn last Monday.

But Schultz said he didn't see the birth of his first four children—and wasn't going to be denied by the doctors from witnessing the fifth.

The hospital disclosed the incident Wednesday, reporting that Schultz burst into the delivery room after his wife was taken there in labor. He snapped on the handcuffs —and stood.

"I was so shocked," said Mrs. Sarah Mace, nurse in charge. "What could I do? I just got him a stool to sit on and we put a gown on him."

Mrs. Schultz's labor lasted for 30 minutes, until his third son was born. Only then did he unlock the handcuffs.

What did his wife think? Schultz replied, "She's not mad at me."

Royal Inquiries Now Costing Lots of Money

TORONTO (CP)—Officials of the Canadian Tax Foundation say outlays for royal commission inquiries are one of the fastest-growing costs of the federal government.

A summary of costs in the current issue of the Canadian Tax Journal says more than $3,000,000 will be spent on royal commissions from 1962 to 1966 compared with $3,582,853 in the 1957-62 period. Outlays in the preceding five years amounted to only $681,000.

The two royal commissions have been established already this year are the Bladen inquiry into the Georges Victor Spencer system, the Gerda Munsinger affair and the Bank Act inquiry into the dealings of Mr. Justice Leo Landreville with Northern Ontario Natural Gas Co. Ltd.

Commission costs in 1966 are estimated at $3,525,700, including expenses of home hospital inquiries that started two or three years ago.

Most costly of all inquiries is that on bilingualism and biculturalism in Canada. The package is estimated at $3,700,000, including $1,200,000 expected to be spent this year.

About 165 federal royal commissions have been established since 1867, with 115 of the total in the last decade.

WALK OUT

LONDON (Reuters) — Hissing booing, nearly one-third of a London theatre audience walked out of the smash hit musical Funny Girl Thursday night because the show's American star, Barbra Streisand, failed to appear. She was at home with a mild attack of acute flu, a spokesman for the actress said.

GILLES TREMBLAY

By BOB TRIMBEE

DETROIT (CP) — Goalie (Gump) Worsley supplied the class and a new line centred by Henri Richard added the touch as Montreal Canadiens gained a new lease on life in their Stanley Cup final against Detroit Red Wings.

The Gumper, criticized by coach Toe Blake after spotty performances earlier in the series, was brilliant in the Canadiens' 4-2 victory Thursday night which allowed Montreal to cut Detroit's margin in the best-of-seven series to 3-2.

The Wings beat the rotund netminder with close-in drives to open and close the scoring, but most of the way his acrobatics dazzled and stymied the spirited Detroiters.

The series resumes here Sunday at 2 p.m. EDT with the fifth game in Montreal Tuesday. If further games are needed, will be played here next Thursday and in Montreal the following Sunday.

Gilles Tremblay, kept out of the playoffs for two consecutive years by hot goalies, scored twice in the first 3¼ minutes of the final period Thursday to provide Montreal with its winning margin.

Jean Beliveau, on a break-away, shot on Detroit Roger Crozier in the Detroit goal and more than 15 minutes before they gave the spectacular Wings' netminder his first severe test.

BLEW SOFT SHOTS?

Blake came away from Tuesday's 5-2 defeat suggesting that Worsley had blown a couple of soft shots. But any ideas the coach might have entertained of replacing him with backup netminder Charley Hodge were dispelled Thursday.

The upstart Wings, who finished fourth in the regular National Hockey League after the club was knocked from the Calder Cup playoffs.

Balon drew Montreal level late in the period when he turned Richard's pass into the right side of the Detroit goal, just beyond the outstretched arm of Crozier.

The Canadiens' first break in the game came in the final minute of the period as Beliveau checked cagey Alex Delvecchio at mid-ice and raced in alone, pulled Crozier to the side and swept around him to score.

The Canadiens continued to have trouble clearing and passing in the middle period, but again Worsley came to the rescue with great stops on two whistling drives by Delvecchio.

Slowly, Montreal began to regain its poise and show the speed, class and power that carried them to the title last year and to the league championship this season.

RETURN TO FORM

Beliveau returned to form and Richard and Ralph Backstrom also began to show Montreal quickly put the game out of Detroit's reach in the final period on Tremblay's goals.

The first came on a two-man rush with Beliveau and the second on a three-way passing play with defenceman J. C. Tremblay and winger Bob Rousseau 18 seconds after rookie Bert Marshall of Detroit was called for holding.

It was then Beliveau, Gilles Tremblay and Claude Provost began to sparkle, checking the Wings to a standstill and running out the clock.

The game was the best so far of the series and frequently tempers flared as both sides took turns handing out stiff bodychecks to the delight of 15,- 154 fans.

-Bryan Watson, the spunky Detroit utility forward, and defenceman Leo Boivin, a late-season acquisition by Detroit from Boston Bruins, handed out the stiffest checks. Watson had two run-ins with Bakes and Boivin three times caught Backstrom and twice belted Jim Roberts with crunching bodychecks.

Besides providing Richard with near wingers in an effort to shake the Pocket Rocket out of his playoff slump, Blake also alternated Provost with Ron Rousseau, Ferguson, Duff and Roberts.

'Toe' Happy Again

Strength Up The Middle

By AL McNEIL

DETROIT (CP)—Toe Blake, Montreal Canadiens coach, figures that strength up the middle was the deciding factor in the 4-2 loss they handed Detroit Red Wings here Thursday night, but Wings coach, Sid Abel, feels the pressure is still on the Montrealers.

Detroit holds a 3-1 edge in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final but Blake said his revitalized centres put his club back on the victory rails.

"Now we're on the upsurge," Blake said.

However, Abel was inclined to disagree.

"We still hold the edge and the pressure is still on them to win here Sunday," he said. "Sure we'd like to have won and wound this thing up at home then, but they've got a good hockey club and you can't run over them."

Blake, infuriated by his club's poor performance in their 5-2 loss to Detroit on Tuesday night, said he had given his sixters no special pep talk Thursday.

'DID IT THEMSELVES'

"They got up for this one and they did it by themselves," he said.

"I might have used (Charlie) Hodge in the nets if he'd played today, but he hasn't been. I stayed with Gump Worsley."

Worsley held his team-mates in check for the first two periods, until they settled down into some semblance of the club that finished first in the regular National Hockey League season.

The Montreal coach was particularly happy with the play of big Jean Beliveau, who was unable to get untracked in the previous two games. He also had words of praise for Henri Richard and Ralph Backstrom who centered his other lines.

"It was Beliveau, Richard and Backstrom . . . We had some strength up the middle for the first time in the series," he said.

"Backstrom played a good first game, but didn't get much a shot on the net in the second. He came back strong tonight.

RICHARD UP TO PAR

"And Richard. I was the first time he has skated up to par so far in the series."

Blake threw together a line of Richard, Dave Balon and Leon Rochefort. The latter became free to play for Canadiens when Quebec Aces were eliminated from Calder Cup competition by Rochester Americans of the American League.

The Montreal coach said he does not know if he will use Rochefort in future games. He used him because "a couple of guys needed shaking up" and Rochefort had been "the only guy playing well for Quebec in the playoffs."

Neither coach will skate his team today because of preparations for Sunday's NBC telecast from here in color, starting at 2:30 p.m. EDT.

The ice will be painted today and both clubs will likely skate Saturday.

Men's "B" Loop Holds Banquet

The Men's Commercial "B" five-pin bowling league wound up a successful season with its annual presentation banquet this week, enjoying a turkey dinner, at Canterbury Hall.

Dorer's Men's Wear captured the Plaza Trophy as league champions for the season, finishing one point. Members of the team are: captain Joe Allen, Earl Macdonald, Gord Arrindell, Ron Bunnett, Mark Storms, Jim Lloyd, Doll Chester and Russ Jones. Each bowler received an individual trophy.

Thrashers were awarded the runners-up trophy.

Playoff money was also handed out, in the following order: Payne's Service Station, Pape's Steak House, Richard Ellis, Kit's Aces and Thrashers; "B" section — Isabelle Electric, Foresters, Booth TV, Welding Cases and Bluebells.

John Dennis took high triple honors with 913 and George Crabbe won high single with a 366.

Trophies were presented to three men.

Special awards from Brunswick, went to Ed Bowers and George Crabbe for better than 250 singles and Ron Bunnett, John Dennis, Ed Bowers, Paul Bedard, George Bunnett, Gord Parrinder, Jim Allen, Harry Ridley and Wally Dever for better than 250 triples.

The new executive, elected for the 1960-'67 season, has Gordon Bunnett as president, Wally Dever as 1st vice-president, John Dennis as 2nd vice-president, Jack Moon as secretary and Bill Brown as treasurer.

All teams voiced intentions of returning next season.

Conditions Tough For Car Rally

VANCOUVER (CP) — Slush, ice and mud should make this year's 4,000 - mile Vancouver-Quebec City car rally the toughest in its six-year history.

Veteran competitors arriving here by car told of adverse weather and road conditions from Quebec province through into British Columbia.

"It was so bad we put the car off the road at one point," said Florence Guibeault of Cornwall.

The rally starts Saturday night.

Quinte sportsmen are expected to turn out to honor one of, if not the finest, athlete ever to carry the district name into the National sports world on Wednesday, May 11.

BOBBY HULL

The occasion will be the gala Bobby Hull Testimonial Dinner given by the Belleville Shrine Club and the Belleville Alhambra Imperial Caravan.

Cost of the dinner will be $10 per plate with the proceeds split down the middle between crippled and retarded children.

Bobby will, of course be the guest of honor, and a sparkling beathable lineup is being arranged, original and beautifully-inscribed trophy will be presented to Hull.

The dinner will be held at St. Michael's Auditorium, said to be the only place in the district where the anticipated 500 persons can be seated. A cocktail hour, from 7.00 to 8.00, is slated for the Nicholson gym and at the same time, yesteryear's finals can watch movies of the 1965 Stanley Cup playoffs.

An excellent guest speaker is being arranged for; Tom Hockings, he of the fast quip from the halls of CJBQ is master of ceremonies; there will be a dancing and fun for all at the Shrine Club following the dinner.

"Honestly speaking, very little has been done locally for this great athlete in the line of recognition during his fine performances in the NHL," said one Alhambra-Shrine committee member the other night.

"Three-times winner of the league scoring championship, all-star, Hart Trophy winner, Lady Byng Trophy winner and the only man ever to score 50 goals per season on two occasions — what else can we say!"

"He is an idol to the youth of our district and has received national recognition as a true sportsman, both on and off the ice. And he is the first person I can think of who would help Shrine crippled and retarded children", concluded the speaker.

The tickets are available from any of the Shriners, or from the Alhambra, as well as at Gerry O'Connors and Bud Gill's.

They should go fast, so don't wait too long if you plan on going.

A local hockey worker for some number of years, Harold Webster, of Napanee, will be bidding for a spot on the executive committee when the OHA holds its annual meeting in Toronto tomorrow.

Webster has been convenor in the Eastern Junior "B" and "C" championships for some time, according to OHA 1st Vice-President Jack Devine, done a fine job.

Five executive members will be elected and there are 21 nominated. Jim Crumble, of Bowmanville, is the only other worker from back of the woods running. Webster is a good man running in tough competition.

Crumble, who is well-known in the Quinte district from earlier refereeing assignments, is running for his third term on the executive.

Devine and President Matt Leyden will remain in their present offices for another year.

The election of officers will take place during the annual meeting of the executive.

A motion going before the delegates for approval calls for the position of third vice president to be established. If this passes, the third vice will be appointed from the Metropolitan area and president Layden will then appoint four other executives for the 1966-'67 season only, rather than the usual three.

A motion also calls for Bill Hanley to be made secretary-manager of the OHA and for W. E. Hewitt to be made honorary life secretary.

Something new this year will be the category meetings scheduled for Saturday morning. One will be held for the senior teams, another for intermediate "A's", "B's" and "C's", another for Junior "B" and a fourth for Junior "C" and "D".

Leafs Top Braves 4-1, Suns Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Buffalo Bisons took charge early in their International Baseball League game Thursday to fashion a 6-2 win over second-place Jacksonville Suns and Toronto Maple Leafs started a late rally to defeat the winless Richmond Braves 4-1.

The Bisons, a half game ahead of fifth-place Toronto, scored three times in the first inning and added two more runs in the second for their win.

Pitcher Don Rudolph blanked the Suns until the eighth, when the slowest pool should make the allowed both Jacksonville runs. Babe Birrer relieved Rudolph and ended the Jacksonville threat.

Mike Page slammed a two-run triple in the sixth inning for the Leafs and scored on Richmond catcher Chris Cannizzaro's error on the throw to the plate.

Pitcher Gary Waslewski followed in Toronto's seventh with home run to account for the win of the season. The loss was the sixth in a row for Richmond.

COA Pot Boils

Will Tell Dawes To 'Go Out'

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

TORONTO (CP) — A former director of the Canadian Olympic Association called Thursday for the immediate resignation of Sidney Dawes of Montreal as Canada's member on the International Olympic Committee.

Lt.-Col. Dalton of Toronto, a COA director from 1938 to 1950, said in an interview: "I feel that the best thing that could happen to the Olympic movement in Canada is that Dawes should quit right now."

"My only regret is that I didn't speak up before this. Sully hinted to myself Dawes and tell him to get out."

His comments, made in a telephone call to The Canadian Press, were made two days after Sully, seeking the winter Olympics for Canada, was turned down by the IOC for the third time. In Rome on Tuesday the 72-year-old Dawes, on the IOC since 1947, declined to say how he voted.

He told reporters: "I don't think how I voted is of interest to Canadian newspapers."

Banff had made a token bid in 1959 for the 1964 Games and lost.

Sponsors of the Alberta ski resort back to the IOC in 1964 for the 1968 Games and lost to Grenoble, France. They went back this week for the 1972 Olympics and lost to Sapporo, Japan.

FEELS LET DOWN

Dalton, bitter over the setbacks, said he "wouldn't be surprised if Dawes voted against Canada when the IOC ballots were taken for both the 1968 and 1972 Games because he is so vehemently opposed to Banff."

"Dawes supported Banff prior to 1960," he said. "Then people in British Columbia wanted Garibaldi Park as Canada's site and Dawes was made a director of the Garibaldi Olympic Development Association. This had to be a conflict of interest because both Banff and Garibaldi went to the Canadian Olympic Association for endorsement.

"In September, 1954, the COA met in Montreal to approve either one as the site for the 1960 Games. The COA endorsed Banff's bid and Dawes then told the meeting:

"'You'll be sorry that you closed out the Garibaldi bid. Mark my words.'

"Well, it's come home to roost now.

"At a COA meeting in Toronto last year when we backed Montreal's bid for the 1972 summer Games but gave priority to Banff's bid, I told the meeting that Dawes does not relay or carry our opinions or decisions to the IOC when there is controversy or enthusiasm and we're not admitted it."

Good Turnout At Minor Softball Meet

Close to 40 persons attended the Belleville Minor Softball Association meeting this week and made plans for the coming season.

Teams call for the season to open May 16.

Don Brown's resignation as a vice - president was accepted. Jack Brown is moving out of the Belleville area.

Hugh Sutherland was elected as vice president for the east ball and Perce Stallkovitch vice president for the west hill.

Team names, player rosters and schedules will be available shortly.

Shades Of Samson, Indians Win Ten

Tie Majors' Mark

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Cleveland's winning streak is getting longer—and so is Birdie Tebbetts' hair.

The dapper manager's hair crept a bit further down his neck Thursday night as the Indians tied the major league record for consecutive victories at the start of the season with their 10th straight, a 2-1 decision over California Angels.

Tebbetts says he's not superstitious But just the same he's not changing any routine, at least not while his club is winning. He knows what happened to Samson when his locks were clipped, so the Cleveland skipper is steering clear of barber shops.

He has breakfast at the same table in the same hotel with the same waitress serving him every morning.

And coach George Strickland, who lives on the other side of town, has become Tebbetts' regular c h a u f f e u r. Strickland drove the manager back to his hotel after the opening day victory and he's had the assignment ever since.

In the only other American League game played Thursday, Detroit Tigers hammered four home runs and raked Kansas City Athletics 13-5. Rain and cold weather postponed Chicago at Boston, Minnesota at Baltimore (2) and Washington at New York.

The Indians' 10th victory tied the mark set by the 1953 Brooklyn Dodgers and matched by the 1962 Pittsburgh Pirates. It also b r o k e the American League record of nine set by the 1944 St. Louis Browns.

Leon Wagner's sacrifice fly brought the winning run home in the eighth inning with some daring base running by Pedro Gonzalez setting it up.

Gonzalez had singled with one out and when Dick Howser beat out an infield hit, Gonzalez raced all the way to third, taking off as Jim Fregosi threw to first. Then Wagner's fly ball brought him home.

Rick Reichardt had tied the game in the top of the eighth with a home run—the first run off the Cleveland pitching staff in 29 innings.

Don Wert walloped a grand slam homer and Jerry Lumpe added a three-run shot as Detroit erupted for seven runs in the fifth inning against the Athletics.

Al Kaline also had a three-run homer and Jim Northrup connected with one man on for the Tigers.

Pirates Top Cubs

Marichal Wins 4th, Drysdale His First

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

So you want to be a manager. . . .

Try and figure it the way Bobby Bragan of Atlanta did in his Braves' 8-2 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers T h u r s d a y night.

Here's the way Bragan manipulated the club:

In the second inning when the Dodgers erupted for five runs, Bragan not only changed pitchers, sending in Clay Carroll for Wade Blasingame, he also took out first-string first baseman Lee Thomas and sent outfielder Marty Keough in as Thomas' substitute.

Why?

In the fifth inning, Bragan, now trailing 8-1, decided to lift first-string catcher Joe Torre, and sent outfielder Dan Carty behind the plate for the first time in his major league career.

CALLS IN O'DELL

In the sixth inning, after using Carroll, Arnold Umbach and Chi Chi Olivo in relief, Bragan called for his No. 1 relief specialist, Billy O'Dell, with the game completely out of sight.

Just think along with Bragan: "I took out Torre because he couldn't see," said Bragan.

"He's been bothered by a sinus infection. He struck out the first time and said: 'Let me give it one more try.' When he struck out again, I took him out.

"I used O'Dell because he has to pitch. He's only worked nine innings in 15 games. It was a choice between him and Phil Niekro, who throws a knuckler, so I went to O'Dell because it was Carty's first league game as a catcher."

And Keough for Thomas?

By putting Keough in the lineup at the same time as Carroll, Bragan was able to juggle his batting order, getting Keough into the pitcher's spot. That enabled Keough to lead off the third inning instead of Carroll, who batted in Thomas' spot.

Simple, isn't it?

POSTS FOURTH WIN

Meanwhile, Juan Marichal posted his fourth victory for San Francisco Giants with a four-hit, 3-0 victory over Cincinnati Reds, Pittsburgh Pirates outslugged Chicago Cubs 9-6 in 10 innings and Houston Astros defeated St. Louis Cardinals 4-2. New York Mets and Philadelphia Phillies were not scheduled.

Don Drysdale got the victory for the Dodgers—his first after two losses—and more important went nine innings for the first time this season. Drysdale allowed six hits, including a homer and double by Hank Aaron, struck out 10 and did not walk a man.

But Drysdale never was in serious trouble. Lou Johnson collected two doubles and a single, driving in three runs, Jim Lefebvre knocked in two with a homer and a single and Maury Wills stroked a pair of run-producing singles.

Marichal, posting his fourth straight complete game victory, retired the first 16 men he faced before Leo Cardenas singled with one out in the sixth. Jim Hart singled twice and scored the first two runs for the Giants off Sammy Ellis before Jim Davenport wrapped it up with a homer.

Bill Mazeroski, who earlier had hit a homer and double, got the Pirates started in a fourruns in the second inning on Jim Gentile's homer and two-run double by John Bateman. Mota's double, Roberto Clemente's grounder and Mota's steal of home on the front end of a double steal accounted for the other runs.

The Astros struck for three runs in the second inning on a run double by John Bateman. That was enough. The Cardinals drew within one run on homers by Julian Javier and Charlie Smith off Robin Roberts but Hal Woodeshick cut off the comeback.

Reaches Semi-Finals

Cowan Still In Running

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP)—Two old hands at North and South amateur golf tournament play and two others who had to earn their right to compete in a qualifying round were today's semi-finalists.

Dr. Edgar Updegraff from Tucson, Ariz., met 49-year-old Ward Wettlaufer, of Atlanta in the 18-hole match.

The other paired Gary Cowan, 37-year-old insurance man from Ontario, who won the Canadian amateur title in years ago, and 26-year-old Marion Heck, a chubby man who plays out of Fort Myers, Fla.

Updegraff and Wettlaufer, former Walker Cup players and holders of several titles, have played here many times.

Cowan never played here before and Heck has been beaten in the first round twice.

Cowan lost the first two holes to Bob Gardner of Essex Falls, N.J., before a heavy rain suspended play for nearly three hours. He then went on to beat the erratic veteran 3 and 2.

Outdoor Tips And Tricks

By BOB BLAIND

Lake Ontario, off the county of Prince Edward is now also in as bad a slime condition but due to the large body of water is not as noticeable on the surface. Commercial Lake fishermen still find the same slime in their nets. All conditions are worse there than in the bay, mainly due to the number of freighters dumping used oil into the lake. Thousands of ducks are being killed yearly by this oil.

Duck hunters, fishermen, cottage owners, resort owners and boaters are urged to help out in stopping this pollution. Septic tanks should be installed at cottages and resorts and no raw sewage dumped. Garbage and refuse from cottages and boats should be burned, not thrown in the water. Fishermen and duck hunters can help by keeping empty oil cans and trash in the boat until reaching home then putting this out for the sanitary garbage collector. There is also much to be said for our method of land recovery by the use of garbage for fill. The areas being used in Belleville and Trenton will have a certain amount of seepage for years to come, this type of reclaiming is being done all over the Great Lakes water system with no regard to pollution.

Detergents are one of the worst causes of the slime formed in our lakes and rivers, although some of this can be broken down in the sewage disposal plants a very large percentage goes out of these plants in the raw stage and lies on the bottom in a jelly-like form; hence the slime.

We are about ten years late in doing something about pollution but better late than never. Nearly every newspaper or magazine we pick up today has a story about this poisoning of the Great Lakes but no one seems to be taking the drastic steps needed to stop it. Commissions have been set up, investigations made and reported but conditions, instead of getting better, are worsening.

It is time for the sportsmen to get into the act. Duck seasons are being shortened, limits cut and now a new Duck Stamp has been added by the Federal Government while pollution is killing off yearly 100 times the total bag of all the ducks taken by hunters.

Up in arms, men, complain to the local Members of Parliament, make a lot of noise, but lets get some action.

Del Crandall Makes Indian Pennant Talk

CLEVELAND (AP) — Veteran catcher Del Crandall speaks with the enthusiasm of a rookie about Cleveland Indians' chances of winning baseball's American League pennant this year.

Crandall, 36, was signed by the Indians as a free agent last December after Pittsburgh Pirates released him.

"I feel that I can be of some help to the Indians and apparently the club officials thought so, too, or they wouldn't have signed me," said the veteran of 15 seasons in the National League.

Speaking of the Indians' nine-game winning streak at the start of the season, Crandall said:

"A few games don't make a season, but I feel Cleveland has a good chance of winning the pennant this year. It is a sound ball club, has a strong bench, and its crop of good young pitchers should be better this year with more experience behind them."

Abe's Hope Beats Derby Favorite

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Abe's Hope upset the mighty Greentark by the narrowest of margins Thursday in the $29,500 Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland.

The little colt from the Grand Prix Stable, with jockey Willie Shoemaker in the saddle, collared the pace - setting Greentark in the stretch drive and took the victory in the final stride.

It was the first loss in eight starts for Greentark, current favorite to win the Kentucky Derby. But it also was Greentark's first time at more than seven furlongs and his first time around two turns.

Abe's Hope was timed in 1:49 1-5 over a track made sloppy by rain.

Rehabilitate, eligible for the Derby but not considered a serious threat as a starter, finished 3¼ lengths behind Greentark in the three-horse field.

Celtics Win Eight Titles In Row

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Celtics captured their eighth straight National Basketball Association championship Thursday, defeating Los Angeles Lakers 95-93.

Responding to pressure and the cheers of a sellout crowd of 13,909 at the Boston Garden, the Celtics gave retiring coach Red Auerbach a title salute in striking their deciding game of the best-of-seven championship series.

The Celtics, riddled by a series of injuries and dethroned by Philadelphia after a nine-year reign as regular - season Eastern Division kings, capped a hard-fought playoff by winning their ninth NBA championship in 10 years.

Led by veteran Bill Russell, who will take over as player-coach as Auerbach moves into full-time duty as general manager, the Celtics turned in a tremendous defensive effort in stopping the Lakers' high-powered attack.

Russell turned in one of his finest performances in leading the Celtics with 25 points and grabbing 20 rebounds.

Banff May Take Legal Action

ROME (AP) — Canadian Olympic delegates said Thursday they are trying to collect damages or take legal action against some wildlife and conservation people who allegedly torpedoed Banff's bid to play host to the 1972 Winter Olympics.

Banff, a winter resort 63 miles west of Calgary, Alta., was rated a favorite, but Sapporo, Japan, was awarded the Games on the first ballot.

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, read private letters from the conservationists shortly before the vote. They feared the Games might have a detrimental effect on Banff National Park.

Hans Maciej, manager of the Banff Olympic campaign, said the letters were read when the Banff delegates could not reply.

One Canadian Olympic official said he hoped to get copies of the letters to Brundage and other people from the wildlife groups to find out if the letters show "some of the conservationists have made untrue claims" or whether the conclusions against members of the Olympic organizing committee in Banff."

One Canadian claimed that the points raised by the conservationists had been settled satisfactorily with the Canadian government when Banff was approved as the official Canadian site.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Whistling Sea, the first Western Canada-bred horse to win the Queen's Plate, won the $3,000 seventh race at Fort Erie racetrack Thursday.

Whistling Sea completed the 6½ furlong distance in 1:18 1-5 and returned $8.20, $2.80 and $2.10.

The daily double of Celtic Lyn and Prairie Gold paid $168.80. The exactor of Whistling Sea and Plain John paid $7.70.

ALTER SCHEDULE

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference announced Thursday that the club's 1966 football schedule has been revised to facilitate television coverage of games. The season opener against Ottawa Rough Riders in Ottawa will be played Wednesday, Aug. 3, instead of the previously scheduled date of Thursday, Aug. 4.

Yugoslav Attitude to Artists Is Not Model of Consistency

Yugoslav authors who criticize the regime are likely to find themselves in trouble, although there is little interference in the realm of the visual arts, Canadian Press reporter John Best confirms the situation as he found it on a visit to Yugoslavia, with specific reference to writers who overstepped the line.

By JOHN BEST

BELGRADE (CP) — Yugoslavia remains a good deal of ambiguity in the realm of freedom of creative expression.

Everything goes in the visual arts. Abstract artists and other avant-garde innovators thrive.

But the picture in literature is more mixed. A kind of groping uncertainty exists in contemporary Yugoslav literature.

In this field, as in practically all fields, Yugoslavia has been throwing off some of the fetters of over-rigid Communist dogma. In this movement is a halting and uncertain one.

The cases of Milovan Djilas and Mihajlo Mihailov are illustrative.

Djilas is a former vice-premier, hero of the Partisan resistance and close personal friend of Marshal Tito who fleeved by some to have been once No. 2 man to him himself. He is also a distinguished Communist and writer, and the bulk of his work is an disillusionment — he has spent most of the last 10 years in prison.

Djilas, now 56, first got into trouble 12 years ago with a series of articles and articles satirizing aspects of Yugoslav life. The ideas in them were the subject of Djilas's famous critique of communism, The New Class, published in the West in 1957. The author was sentenced to nine years for hostile propaganda but released in 1961.

Little more than a year later, he was back in prison under the Yugoslav Official Secrets Act for his book, Conversations with Stalin, also published abroad. This time, he received 13 years, counting previous unserved time. So far the government has given no sign that it will commute the sentence, which has five years to run.

Djilas' case, because he was so close to Tito, has a special dimension. It contains elements of a family quarrel and—in the view of Tito's supporters—betrayal.

Ask a Yugoslav official about it and chances are he will either refuse to discuss the affair or dismiss it with some such remark as: "That case is closed. Nothing can be done about it."

Mihailov, a lecturer at Yugoslavia's Zadar University, spent the summer of 1965 in Russia on a fellowship and came away sadly disillusioned. He showed it, however, by writing a book, an account written for a Belgrade literary magazine.

He was sentenced to nine months on charges of deriding a foreign state but a higher court found last April that no derision had occurred. However, it did not disturb the nine months' sentence — suspended — for distributing hand-typed copies of it and for having the second instalment of his article published in Italy.

WAY NOW CHANGING

Apparently, nobody is going to challenge the constitutionality of the law under which Mihailov still stands convicted. Yet, under the constitution, "freedom of speech and public criticism" is supposed to be guaranteed in Yugoslavia.

In spite of the Mihailov case, writers' spokesmen claim there are no longer any restrictions on authors who write things the authorities may not like.

Western experts, however, contend it is next to impossible for the average author to have a book published if the authorities dislike it on ideological or other grounds.

I asked a group of writers whether they are free to criticize or satirize the Yugoslav government and the Communist system.

The reply was that "creative" writers leave such "temporal" matters as politics and economics to the newspapers. "We deal with more lofty themes. We seek the higher truth."

(According to resident diplomats, Yugoslav newspapers don't criticize the system or its leadership either.)

Whatever the realities of the situation here, Yugoslav writers certainly believe they at least are well ahead of the Russians as far as free play of ideas is concerned. They cite the publication here of the controversial Doctor Zhivago by Russian writer Boris Pasternak.

On the other hand, none of Djilas's post - rebellion books has ever been published in Yugoslavia. This includes Land without Justice, a sub-autobiographical account of his boyhood in the hills of Montenegro—an entirely nonpolitical work.

Weiss Won't Knock Yankees

NEW YORK (AP)—The man who had a role in New York Yankees' greatest surprises of pennants over three decades—refuses to gloat over the sudden collapse of the team he first won six years ago.

"I am too familiar with the 100th-place experience myself to start taking potshots at anyone else in that position," says George Weiss.

Weiss, now 71, joined the Yankees as general manager of operations in 1932 and in 1947 moved up to general manager. A job he held until 1960 when he resigned—victim of the Yankees' youth movement.

He then moved over to the rival New York Mets, bringing Casey Stengel with him.

Weiss refuses to join those who contend that the Yankees have left themselves open to beat-up batch of oldtimers and cripples and that their dynasty is dead.

"The Yankees have had a lot of bad luck and many injuries. I think their present slump is just temporary."

The Mets' general manager refused to get emotional about the good early start of the Mets—a 4-4 record for eighth place in the National League compared with the Yankees' 3-11 which holds down the cellar of the American League.

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — At the last party of the season, sponsored by Crescent Rebekah Lodge in the I.O.O.F. Hall on Monday night, nine tables of cards were played. The high scorers were Mrs. E. Jardine of Tweed and Mr. Art Robinson of Actinolia. The prizes for low scores were won by Mrs. Charlie James of Actinolia and Mr. Manley Hoard, man of Thomasburg. Mr. Wilfred Blakely of Madoc won the door prize. A draw was a pair of pillowcases, made and donated by Mrs. W. Andrews of Cannifton, was won by Mrs. Fred Preston of Thomasburg.

Thomasburg U.C.W. catered at Belleville Livestock Sales Barn on Tuesday.

Several members of Thomasburg I.O.O.F. Lodge visited Springbrook Lodge on Tuesday evening.

Miss Elaine Carleton, who underwent surgery in Belleville General Hospital recently, has returned home.

Book on Papa Hemingway Selling Like Hot Cakes

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "He tried some terrible books—but the ones who were not sector: hib—but he didn't like Holly- meant to him. Among his con- wood." So E. Hotchner, one of his friend, Ernest Hemingway.

Hotchner was here this week to help launch his remembrance, Papa Hemingway, which is off to a fine start with generally good reviews and a burst of publicity.

He got a call from Random House; I've passed Capote," Hotchner reported happily. "I'm glad because for last week topped Truman Capote's in Cold Blood and a fourth printing will bring the total to 100,000 copies.

"Some of his good friends were Hollywood people, but they were the kind who didn't discuss their careers as Gary Cooper, Marlene Dietrich, Ingrid Bergman."

Hemingway's favorite film of his work was The Killers and he often showed it at his villa in Cuba. "Bud Loggins," Hotch- ner added, "that after first six minutes—which was the only part that was Hemingway —he inevitably dozed off."

DISAPPOINTED HIM

Most of the other Hemingway films were a bitter disappoint-

tent is not to impose- sible for the average author to have a book published if the authorities dislike it on ideological or other grounds.

I asked a group of writers whether they are free to criticize or satirize the Yugoslav government and the Communist system.

The reply was that "creative" writers leave such "temporal" matters as politics and economics to the newspapers. "We deal with more lofty themes. We seek the higher truth."

(According to resident diplomats, Yugoslav newspapers don't criticize the system or its leadership either.)

Whatever the realities of the situation here, Yugoslav writers certainly believe they at least are well ahead of the Russians as far as free play of ideas is concerned. They cite the publication here of the controversial Doctor Zhivago by Russian writer Boris Pasternak.

On the other hand, none of Djilas's post - rebellion books has ever been published in Yugoslavia. This includes Land without Justice, a sub-autobiographical account of his boyhood in the hills of Montenegro—an entirely nonpolitical work.

Dave's Hideaway

By

Dave Charles

Hi again, movers and groovers. It's only me, old Charles, with yet another go around of "Dave's Hideaway." I will be in Cobourg with our "Sounds Incorp. Show" tonight, and tomorrow night at the dance that many must have waited for with "The Big Town Boys." This group is returning to Canada after a smash engagement at the "Greenwich Village" area of New York. This dance is sponsored by B.O.T.C.H. and will only cost you one buck. Also B.O.T.C.H. will be passing out membership cards, and in return would like your name, anddress and telephone number. It all starts at eight o'clock at St. Mike's and dress is casual. See you at the "Village Hop."

I am amazed at the enthusiasm for a new group to the Quinte district such as "The Secrets." This group played at "106" last week and knocked them out. Their sound is tight. The boys have a song "Crying Over Her" which is no indication of their talent. A group to watch out for. . . . The Esquires will return to 106 on Saturday, May 7. . . . Just thought you'd like to know. . . . and Dee and the Yeomen will open up the newest teen club "The Hideaway" in Trenton, at the Trenton Community Gardens . . . This club will give those teens in Trenton the chance to see the finest Canadian bands without having to travel far. Our bussin cousins, the "Kingdens," will appear at The Grapevine Coffee House tonight.

As you can see this is where the action is and things are going strong. I am very curious what effect the warmer weather will have on all of these growing teen establishments. I realize that this is a holiday area and we all like to get away now and then but it would mean hard times for those places just starting out this past season. One thing I'd like to point out and that is these places have only one big hasty night and that's supper. I would like to keep the place going instead of falling off. You see when the season begins again it takes time to start these places up again and money too. Give this some thought. . . .

The weatherman is not co-operating with the season, and we have invited winter to do an encore . . . only one is enough I hope. I am anxiously waiting to view, along with the rest of the guys, the gals in their new summer outfits . . . This is considered as a hobby by many guys. I always wonder how fashion designers come up with something new and exciting each season. Design you fools, and let there be fashion beyond and above that of last year.

Hey, mod music makers, now is the time to start working for the final examinations, that is if you haven't already started. Remember it's your whole year's work and not just one turn . . . Also if you want to work for this summer now is the time to line up a summer job and avoid the June rush . . . If you have a summer job lined up then you are away to the races . . . P.S.: I would advise you to take at least a week's holidays before returning to school so that you are mentally ready for the new course of study.

I am looking forward to my vacation this year because I plan to travel to the U.S. and check out American radio stations, compare them with CJBQ and search out some new ideas for next season. With any luck we will have an exciting new season of teen features and new contests and fun games for the show.

Into the "Cave of Musical Wonders" for another week to find the new R.B. sensation by the "Shandels" called "Dirty Water," from the Moira . . . after Gramma Quinte falls in. Jumpin Gene Pitney "Backstage" with a hit record. Motown is still a big sound and expects for the sensational supremest with "Love Is Like An Itching" . . . Chris Montes has another big sing-along type of song entitled "The More That I See You." Again . . . Real McCoys score, with "Come On Let's Go" . . . And last but not least the Stones-Last with an oldy called "He Cried" . . . Songs such as these are all potential hits for the "008 Twin Twenty File."

Remember that things are happening this weekend so support the cause of your choice to keep things going, going, gone . . . Until next week, I bid you . . . Shangri-la.

Moira Enjoys Big Dance

Last Friday, April 22, the staff and students of Moira Secondary School enjoyed the annual Semi-formal Dance, different this year because it was a Mod Semi-formal (perhaps Batman can discover what the difference was!). Dee and the Yeomen did a fine job, providing a good variety of music and even the teachers could dance. Some of the teachers surprised everyone with their Terpsichorean agility.

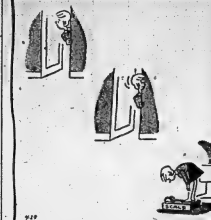
Sherry Graves, a talented and personable young lady, was chosen "Belle of the Ball". The decorations, thanks to the cooperation of the Plaza merchants, were outstanding. "A good time was had by all!"

On Wednesday, May 4, Moira will present the Sixth Annual Display Night. This year the organizing committee has worked hard to create an evening that will be excitingly different. In addition to the static displays of books and audio-visual equipment, visitors will be able to see actual lessons and participate in various activities in progress.

To add zest to the evening, the public will be introduced to "Vignettes de la Vie Francaise" and a probability tree; as well as having an opportunity to view the continuous operation of "Ein deutsche Biergarten", and will be indoctrinated into the mysteries of machine guns and military signals.

Students and staff will be working diligently and willingly to show the public what is happening in the Belleville schools today.

Don't miss Display Night, Wednesday, May 4th, from 7:3 p.m.



During the afternoon of May 4th, Moira's cadet corps will hold its annual parade and inspection at the Belleville Armouries. Good luck to the hard working marchers and students of things military.

Game of Skill

By JUDY PULTZ (M.S.S.)

The jingle of money, and the cry of "Pay Black", and the whine of the roulette wheel have for some people an endless fascination. For me, however, a football soaring between two uprights, a basketball sinking below the rim or a curling rock moving surely for a "take out" engender a much more pro found feeling of accomplishment and skill. The game of chance is not one of brain against brain, or skill against skill as it is more properly one of money against money, in which one's luck lies in the hands of fate. Although many people have devised, or so they say, "sure-fire" systems in gambling, to me, but no one will fashion a "sure-fire" win in a game of skill. One could have strain and tension on the human soul, watching the ball slowly roll away from "it", in a smoke filled room, be favorable compared to man against man with pure undiluted skill, and one destiny pitted against each other. Thus it is not by accident that sports through the ages have represented a picture of youth, virility, and strength, while gambling seems to represent dishonesty, and falsehood.

The Aesthetic

By BARRY GRILLS (M5S)

My body rested in slumber. Bone was with bone and flesh was on flesh. First, it was the mist that came, a mist so dense it threatened to choke me, to strangle me where I lay. It cleared and I felt a peace, a peace of anticipation.

Then, in the silence, the sad silence, there came a being. I cannot describe this being for he was beyond description. I can only say he was a being, only a being Later, I laughed at that word "only".

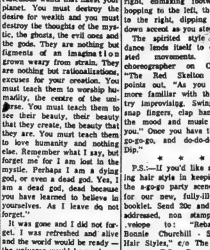
It had a mouth as everything has and it spoke. It spoke of beauty. It spoke of love. It spoke of worlds. As it spoke it became what it said. It changed form to the weird and the wonderful and the beautiful.

It said: "You must not rest in your bed. You must be a human, a great human. You must carry on a mission, a mission without material reward. You must make the Earth, for now it is not whole, now it is nothing. You must destroy the wants, the ridiculous wants that infest your planet. You must destroy the desire for wealth and you must destroy the thoughts of the mystic, the ghosts, the evil ones and the gods. They are nothing but figments of an imagination grown weary from strain. They are nothing but rationalizations, excuses for your creation. You must teach them to worship humanity, the centre of the universe. You must teach them to see their beauty, their beauty that they create, the beauty that they are. You must teach them to love humanity and nothing else. Remember what I say, but forget me for I am but in the mystic. Perhaps I am a dying god, or even a dead god. Yes, I am a dead god, dead because you have learned to believe in yourselves. As I leave do not forget."

It was gone and I did not forget. I was refreshed and alive and the world would be ready — the universe would be ready.

I cried for joy in my sleep.

Go-go-go Do-do-do The "Dip"



We've been searching for the newest dance to attract the go-go set. Now, we've discovered it! Fun-to-try, easy-to-do, it's called "The Dip" and was devised by award-winning choreographer Tom Hansen. He predicts it's the "in" thing for the party crowd. Performed to a rock 'n' roll tempo, it can be done with partners standing face-to-face, back-to-back or, as dancers Kathy Gale and Currie Pederson illustrate, side-by-side.

Hansen's [illegible] for girls' (spectator) [illegible] step on the [illegible], then on the left, [illegible] the right. Cross behind with the left foot, step back on the right. Now, reverse, repeating entire sequence to the left, and again, to the right, eliminating footwork by hopping to the left, then back to the right, dipping with a down accent as you stop.

The spirited style of the dance lends itself to exaggerated movements. Hansen, choreographer on CBS-TV's "The Red Skelton Show," points out. "As you become more familiar with the steps, try improvising. Swing arms, snap fingers, clap hands. Let the mood and music get to you." Once you have the beat, go-go, and do-do do "The Dip."

LONG-HAIR MUSICIAN? — Such sights as this wandering troubador are the rule rather than the exception in Toronto's Yorkville Avenue district. The girl (or is it boy?) walking behind our transient musician friend is wearing typical casual Village attire.

Yorkville, Stamping Ground Of the Coffee House Set

By MAURICE SWITZER

Until a few years ago, Yorkville Avenue in Toronto, was a monotonative little street, simply serving its purpose as a link between the more important thoroughfares of Avenue Road and Yonge Street. Today Yorkville is not merely a 200-yard strip of asphalt, but stands as an undisputed world sight and activity for the "in-crowd" and the inquisitive.

The reason for this dramatic change?

For the past few years Yorkville has been the breeding ground of coffee houses, those intentionally meagre and shabby-appearing institutions, which many associate with the presence of Beatniks, intellectuals, and practically every shade and form of "swinger."

A street? No. Yorkville has become "The Village."

Toronto's Village has been conscientously and painstakingly patterned after such "way out" hang-outs as New York's Greenwich Village and San Francisco's ecumenico circuit, right down to candle-lit garrets and the artificial atmosphere that are part and parcel of the coffee house image.

Yorkville's coffee houses began operations with a format peculiar, if not identical to their American antecedents. Necessary commodities: one cellar or attic floor space, preferably address as possible; several small tables and uncomfortable chairs and dim lighting, if any at all; two or three young waitresses with long, straight hair, dressed in turtle-neck sweaters and mesh stockings, and a folk singer or group at the end. Add one offbeat name, like The Mousehole, The Purple Onion, or The Bitter End and you have a bona fide coffee house.

In the beginning, there was folk music. The Blowin' In The Winds and the Tom Dooleys were as essential an ingredient as the unskilled poems and the cracking walls. Toronto coffee house veterans like the talents of Ian and Sylvia and Gord Lightfoot, while in the U.S., Bob Dylan, The Kingston Trio, and Peter, Paul and Mary, to name but a few, were folk performers who began their careers singing for little else but their supper in grottos such as The Hungry I.

FOLK SINGERS OUT

Things have changed. With an increasing demand for folk-rock, rhythm and blues, and a folk-forma of the modern beat, folk singers in Toronto's village are now the exception, rather than the rule. In all but two or three of the cafes as many travelled druggers as possible are crammed into the narrow confines of the interior, and patrons-by can hear little else but the screaming of Fender guitars emanating from within. The proprietors, many of whom are connected in some way with the folk music world, have long ago written off folk performers as poor investments, having found that much more lucrative returns are made from "mod" music.

There are, however, some features of Village life that remain unchanged. Take the espresso for instance. Espresso is supposed to be a very ethnic type of coffee on which intellectuals and beatniks thrive, and which is, therefore, sold in every self-respecting coffee house. In case you have never sampled espresso, it can best be compared to a cup of hot chocolate which has been diluted with limitless water. Similar exotically-named beverages, none of which are alcoholic, incidentally, comprise the menus of coffee houses.

"Although many of the bistros have no admission charge as such, unwary newcomers are soon brought down to earth when they find that their first cup of coffee might cost them as much as a dollar and a half, with a slight cover charge included, of course. But all in all, a good evening's entertainment can be had in most of the village night spots for no more than a few dollars.

LIVELY AT NIGHT

The coffee houses are open for business during the daylight hours, but it is only after dusk that things really start happening. The summer street begins to fill up about 8 o'clock and on the weekends, there are still plenty of signs of life at 2 or 3 in the morning. People come to see, and to be seen, to dance, to listen, to find out what real live beatnik looks like, or to find something new. Add one of the exclusive little boutiques sprinkled throughout the village.

By late evening, sidewalks and streets alike are jammed with people, and automobile passage down Yorkville virtually impossible. One can almost spot the different types of visitors to the village by overhearing a few words here and there, or by seeing looks of bewilderment and awe. The curious, that is the tourists and newcomers to the village, are reasonably well-groomed, and are the mainstay of the village's economy.

The "regulars" are usually natives in their non-conformity. It is not uncommon to see two people walking side by side without being able to distinguish whether they are two females, or two males, or one of each. A sort of bisexuality in dress and grooming appears to be the order of the day. The regulars are university students, teen-agers who enjoy the frantic freedom of the village, or pseudo-intellectuals who have convened to impress one another.

And there are policemen. About four to a corner, to be exact. The fast moving pace of village activity is not always conducive to the best behavior of its frequenters. There are numerous minor incidents, such as fights and scuffles, and there are charges of more important infractions, like the peddling of marijuana to adolescents. Partly because of the nature of the village, and partly because they feared that it was a potential breeding ground for crime, a body of Toronto citizens tried to have tight restrictions prevent further expansion of activity on Yorkville, if not remove altogether what was already there. But the bistro owners pay their rents, very high ones too and they will not be deprived of their rights as tax-paying citizens.

At three in the morning, Yorkville again an unobtrusive little street linking Avenue Road and Yonge Street together. It is forlorn and desolate, seeming even more so because of the excitement and vibrance that it exhibited a few hours ago. But even deserted, the village has an aura of vitality about it, a feeling that it will come alive again and again until those who come to Yorkville have found what they seek.

3,000 Trucks Busily Hustle Red Supplies Southward For Monsoon Season

SAIGON (AP) — Communist North Viet Nam, seeking to rush equipment and supplies south before the monsoon season sets in, has built a 200-mile road network in the Laos panhandle.

As estimated 1,500 to 3,000 trucks are operating there, it was learned today.

The network includes an estimated 35 miles camouflaged by bamboo trellises laced with branches to hide the roads from U.S. aircraft.

The main motor route from North Viet Nam is the Mu Gia Pass area along the Laos border. The secondary route is Na Pe Pass just to the north of Mu Gia.

The Mu Gia Pass, 45 miles south of the North Vietnamese city of Vinh, has been the site of repeated attacks by American planes.

U.S. officials here estimate that for the last several months "at least" 5,000 North Vietnamese have moved each month to the south. The tempo is increasing and conceivably could reach 7,000 this month, the officials say.

Six months ago it was estimated that 4,500 men were moving north to south each month.

U.S. military officials say they are reasonably certain that since Jan. 1 more than 30,000 infiltrators have entered South Viet Nam.

There now are believed to be 80,000 North Vietnamese regulars or viet cong main-force troops in South Viet Nam. Together with guerrillas, political cadre and logistics personnel, it is believed enemy forces in South Viet Nam now number about 280,000.

The number of U.S. troops in South Viet Nam now totals 255,000, there are thino 26,500 allied troops.

The present strength of South Vietnamese army units is put at 318,000, plus 186,800 in the regional forces and 125,000 in the popular forces. Those with the police, irregular civil defence forces and combat youth are reported to give South Viet Nam about 700,000 men under arms.

De Gaulle's Ambitions Dangerous

Viet Nam Air War Resumes

By LEWIS GULICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Undersecretary of State George W. Ball says the "self-centred" policies of French President de Gaulle may return Europe to a dangerous system of national rivalries that once more could lead to world war.

In a speech Friday night before the American Society of International Law, Ball accused de Gaulle of trying to make France a first-class power while keeping its European neighbors in an inferior role."

"This is a desire on the part of the French government to carve out a special place for itself which means a great reduction in the kind of co-operative effort which has been going forward in Europe and in the Atlantic world," Ball explained in a later CBS television interview.

"I think this can only weaken the West and create problems where we may have, again, old national rivalries reasserting themselves and a beginning of the kind of troubles that we have known so often and so disastrously in the past."

NATO REMOVE CAUSES

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization was created after the Second World War, he said, in an effort "to remove the underlying causes" that had created so many of the past disasters.

In his speech before the society, Ball said:

—Warned that France's pullout from the NATO integrated defence system will weaken the common shield against the Soviet Union and thus delay chances for settling such East - West problems as German reunification and disarmament.

—Portrayed European unity as the right way to true European independence, big-power status and equality with the United States.

—Said NATO is in crisis over

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Air Force jet shot down a MIG-17 over North Viet Nam today—the third enemy jet downed in the last two days.

A U.S. spokesman said an F-4C Phantom hit the MIG with a Sidewinder missile when four of the jets attacked a flight of Phantoms with escence five 100 miles northwest of Hanoi.

Two U.S. planes were shot down by enemy ground fire Friday. An F-105 Thunderchief was brought down 50 miles north of Hanoi and a navy F-4 Crusader went down 25 miles east of Haiphong in the Gulf of Tonkin, officials said.

The Soviet news agency Tass, in a dispatch from Hanoi, said seven American planes were brought down in the fighting Friday.

U.S. defence department officials have identified the MIGs as North Vietnamese flown by North Vietnamese pilots.

In Paris, United Nations Secretary-General U Thant said the situation in Viet Nam has gone "from bad to worse" and is becoming "more complex and more difficult as days go on."

He made the statement on arrival from London for talks with French President de Gaulle and other officials.

Says U.S. Chiefs of Staff Seek Intensified Air Offensive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator John C. Stennis said today it is an "open secret" that the U.S. joint chiefs of staff favor intensified U.S. air strikes against North Viet Nam.

The Mississippi Democrat, who heads the Senate preparedness watchdog subcommittee, called anew in a speech prepared for a Biloxi, Miss., meeting of broadcasters for an all-out assault on oil, power and arms plants in the Hanoi-Haiphong industrial area of North Viet Nam.

Stennis said the air war "has not achieved and, under current and restrictive ground rules, will not achieve its objective of substantially halting or curtailing the flow of men, materials and supplies from north to South Viet Nam.

"We should close the ports of North Viet Nam by whatever method our military leaders deem to be appropriate. We should destroy the petroleum facilities in the Hanoi-Haiphong complex. We should also attack power producing facilities and plants producing military equipment and supplies and other tools of war.

"Those things are necessary to protect our fighting men, to shorten the war, and to minimize the loss of valuable American lives. The majority of the high ranking military leaders with whom I have talked agree with me on this."

Rebels Turned Into Rabbits At Final Session of CLC

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rebels turned into rabbits at the windup session of the Canadian Labor Congress Friday, spurning an earlier clamor for a national campaign of civil disobedience against court injunctions.

A resolution condemning the use of injunctions by employers to limit strike picket lines and calling on CLC officers for a "strong and militant campaign" against injunction laws was adopted unanimously after a brief debate.

There was no mention of the "civil disobedience" theme resounded Tuesday when incensed delegates staged a floor revolt against the original injunction resolution. It had urged the use of "every legitimate means" to eliminate injunctions.

The convention voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to send the resolution back into committee for strengthening. There was applause when speakers said a civil disobedience policy should be adopted.

Fewer than 400 of the 1,800 delegates were in the hall Friday when the new proposal emerged. Most of the others had left to meet home-town plane, train and bus committments.

Earlier in the day the convention agreed to discard a proposal that would automatically be expelled from the congress if their members aid or assist an employer during a strike sanctioned by the CLC.

This meant, in effect, that a union whose members crossed picket lines of another union would be booted out.

Delegates voted Monday to have a resolution of support for the publicly - owned CBC engaged to include an endorsation of approval for the producers of the TV program This Hour Has Seven Days, now in a dispute with CBC management.

A vote Wednesday Friday put the convention on record as condemning any action of the CBC management which violates standard union procedure in the hiring and firing of employees.

When protests arose, CLC President Claude Jodoin agreed to have the executive council take a new look at the matter after the convention. All unfinished business goes to the council for action.

Seven Lives Taken by Texas Gale

DALLAS, Tex (AP) — Giant thunderstorms smashed across north Texas again Friday, taking seven more lives and adding to the millions of dollars in property damage.

Funnel - looking skyward today for some sign of relief saw only dark clouds.

A boy drowned in a submerged car while his mother pleaded "Please, somebody get him out!" A pilot perished when his plane clipped a guy wire of a cloud - obscured television tower. And five persons were killed on rain-swept highways.

Twelve persons have died in the Dallas - Fort Worth area during the two days of violent storms. Eight of the victims drowned.

Dallas County and adjacent counties were declared a disaster area.

DAMAGES COLLEGE

A tornado hit Fort Worth Christian College, with an enrollment of about 1,300. At least three buildings were damaged. One person was injured.

Michael Deaty, 6, was riding in a car with his mother, Mrs. Claudia Burkes, and his two sisters when the auto suddenly plunged into a creek on the edge of Dallas. Three men removed the mother and two girls but could not get the boy.

Floodwaters plimbed. In Dallas, the Red Cross said at least 250 families had suffered major loss of home or belongings and more than 600 had been evacuated.

Rhodesian Gun Battle Dims Hopes

SALISBURY (Reuters) — The first major armed clash between African nationalists and white Rhodesian security forces east a shadow today over plans for Britain and Rhodesia to resume talks to end their five-month-old break.

Police in Salisbury announced Friday they killed seven Negroes and arrested a number of others in a running gun battle 85 miles north of this capital.

They said they seized Chinese and Soviet weapons from the Negroes, who were described as members of the Zimbabwe African National Union, one of Rhodesia's two banned African nationalist parties.

Police officials said the Negroes crossed over from neighboring Zambia a week ago and gave indications of having been trained in terrorist tactics in China.

In Lusaka, Zambia's capital, university students demonstrated outside the British high commission today, stoning windows and tearing down the Union Jack. Commission staff watching the building also were stoned.

(The students were protesting the gun battle. Police who broke up the demonstration took about 100 arrests.)

STATES VIEWS

As the news of the battle was released, Prime Minister Ian Smith, whose government unilaterally declared Rhodesia's independence from Britain last Nov. 11, outlined his attitude to forthcoming secret talks with London.

It was his first official comment on Wednesday's announcement by British Prime Minister Harold Wilson of agreement by London and Salisbury to hold informal talks.

Speaking in Bulawayo, Rhodesia's second - largest city, Smith said Rhodesia does not insist on pre-conditions before going to the conference table but this does not mean it will have to give ground.

This simply means that we maintain the status quo — in other words I do not insist that Mr. Wilson acknowledge our independence, and Mr. Wilson does not insist that I give up our independence."

Cabinet Members Critical

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Frontbenchers on both sides of the Commons Friday joined a growing chorus of criticism aimed at the non-political redistribution commission.

Agriculture Minister Greene, first cabinet member to enter the debate, accused the Ontario commissioners of treating Parliament and the people with great contempt.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker secured the new electoral map for Saskatchewan for imposing wheat farmers and city dwellers together in common ridings. He suggested a constitutional amendment to protect his province's representation in the Commons, due to drop to 26 seats from 17.

Alvin Hamilton, former Conservative agriculture minister, said the Saskatchewan commission had "up-ended" all his province as a sheer academic exercise and thought regard to demographic factors.

Former justice minister Davie Fulton, (PC—Kamloops) said the British Columbia commission created monstrous ridings and should start all over again.

Creditiste Leader Caouette complained the Quebec commission "tortured and distorted" ridings all over the province and dismissed objections made at public hearings last year.

'WIPE COMMISSIONS'

He renewed his proposal to abolish the 10 redistribution commissions and their maps, allowing the Commons committee to draw up new maps as was done in previous redistributions.

Despite the bitter blasts from all parties, the Commons completed discussion of 26 formal motions to the proposed maps, leaving only one to be cleared up next Wednesday, when Manitoba MPs will have their turn.

A supply debate is scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, paving the way for opposition parties to introduce non-confidence motions on almost any subject.

Mr. Greene objected strongly to a proposal to carve up the western end of his riding, Renfrew South, and add portions to two neighboring ridings.

He accused the Ontario commissioners of ignoring the spirit of the 1964 act setting up the commissions and of ignoring protests made at hearings last year.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Saskatchewan's population has grown rapidly in recent years after declining for two decades and the constitution should be

Hees States U.S. Makes Inroads In Economy Due "Continentalism"

GANDER, Nfld. (CP)—George Hees, former federal trade minister, said here Friday night the United States is gaining inroads into the Canadian economy because of the Liberal government's policy of "continentalism."

"The government bows to the U.S. and defies the cap and gets a favorable answer in dealing with Washington," Mr. Hees told a Newfoundland Progressive Conservative convention, presided over by Premier Joseph R. Smallwood.

The convention, prompted by the retirement in January of Premier James Greene, closes leadership nominations at noon today. Friday night the only announced candidate was the acting leader, Dr. Noel Murphy.

Mr. Hees told a panel discussion that the United States "pretty well directs our economy." An example was the recent U.S. decision which "laid down a moratorium of action to 900 subsidiary companies operating in Canada."

The Conservatives believed in nationalism and "we want to see Canada developed as an entity of itself and not as a subsidiary of the U.S."

3,000 Trucks Basily Hustle Red Supplies Southward For Monsoon Season

SAIGON (AP) — Communist North Viet Nam, seeking to rush equipment and supplies south before the monsoon season sets in, has built a 200-mile road network in the Laos panhandle.

An estimated 1,500 to 2,000 trucks are operating there, it was learned today.

The network includes an estimated 35 miles camouflaged by bamboo trellises laced with branches to hide the roads from U.S. aircraft.

The main motor route from North Viet Nam is the Mu Gia Pass area along the Laos border. The secondary route is Na Pe Pass just to the north of Mu Gia.

The Mu Gia Pass, 45 miles south of the North Vietnamese city of Vinh, has been the site of repeated attacks by American planes.

U.S. officials here estimate that for the last several months "at least" 8,500 North Vietnamese have moved each month to the south. The tempo is increasing and conceivably could reach 7,000 this month, the officials say.

Six months ago it was estimated that 4,200 men were moving north to south each month.

U.S. military officials say they are reasonably certain that since Jan. 1 more than 20,000 infiltrators have entered South Viet Nam.

There now are believed to be 90,000 North Vietnamese regulars or viet cong half-force troops in South Viet Nam. Together with guerrillas, political cadre and logistics personnel, it is believed enemy forces in South Viet Nam now number about 220,000.

The number of U.S. troops in South Viet Nam now totals 255,000. there are also 28,500 allied troops.

The present strength of South Vietnamese army units is put at 318,000, plus 186,000 in the regional forces and 125,000 in the popular forces. These with the police, irregular civil defence forces and combat youth are reported to give South Viet Nam about 900,000 men under arms.

De Gaulle's Ambitions Dangerous

By LEWIS GULICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Undersecretary of State George W. Ball says the "self-centred" policies of French President de Gaulle may return Europe to a dangerous system of national rivalries that once more could lead to world war.

In a speech Friday night before the American Society of International Law, Ball accused de Gaulle of trying to make France a first-class power while keeping its European neighbors "in an inferior role."

"This is a desire on the part of the French government to carve out a special place for itself which means a great reduction in the kind of co-operative effort which has been going forward in Europe and in the Atlantic world," Ball explained in a later CBS television interview.

"I think this can only weaken the West and create problems where we may have, again, old national rivalries reasserting themselves and a beginning of the kind of troubles that we have known so often and so disastrously in the past."

NATO REMOVES CAUSES

Warned that France's pullout from the NATO integrated defence system will weaken the common shield against the Soviet Union and thus delay chances for settling such East - West problems as German reunification and disarmament.

—Portrayed European unity as the right road to true European independence, big-power status and equality with the United States.

—Said NATO is in crisis over method our military leaders deem to be appropriate. We should destroy the petroleum facilities in the Hanoi-Haiphong complex. We should also attack power producing facilities and plants producing military equipment and supplies and other tools of war.

"These things are necessary to protect our fighting men, to shorten the war, and to minimize the loss of valuable American lives. The majority of the people, high ranking military leaders with whom I have talked agree with me on this."

Vietnam Air War Resumes

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Air Force jet shot down a MiG-17 over North Viet Nam today—the third enemy jet downed in the last two days.

A U.S. spokesman said an F-4C Phantom hit the MiG with a Sidewinder missile when four of the jets attacked a flight of Phantoms with cannon fire 150 miles northwest of Hanoi.

Two U.S. planes were shot down by enemy ground fire Friday. An F-105 Thunderchief was brought down 50 miles north of Hanoi and a navy F-4 Crusader went down 25 miles east of Hatshong in the Gulf of Tonkin, officials said.

The Soviet news agency Tass, in a dispatch from Hanoi, said seven American planes were brought down in the fighting Friday.

U.S. defence department officials have identified the MiGs as North Vietnamese flown by North Vietnamese pilots.

In Paris, United Nations Secretary-General U Thant said the situation in Viet Nam has gone "from bad to worse" and is becoming "more complex and more difficult as days go on."

He made the statement on arrival from London for talks with French President de Gaulle and other officials.

Says U.S. Chiefs of Staff Seek Intensified Air Offensive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator John C. Stennis said today it is an "open secret" that the U.S. joint chiefs of staff favor intensified U.S. air strikes against North Viet Nam.

The Mississippi Democrat, who heads the Senate preparedness watchdog subcommittee, called anew for a speech prepared for a Biloxi, Miss., meeting of broadcasters for an all-out assault on oil, power and arms plants in the Hanoi-Haiphong industrial area of North Viet Nam.

Stennis said the air war "has not achieved and, under current self-restrictive ground rules, will not achieve its objective of substantially halting or curtailing the flow of men, materials and supplies from north to South Viet Nam.

"We should close the ports of North Viet Nam by whatever

Rebels Turned Into Rabbits At Final Session of CLC

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rebels turned into rabbits at the workshop session of the Canadian Labor Congress Friday, spurring an earlier clamor for a national campaign of civil disobedience against court injunctions.

A resolution condemning the use of injunctions by employers to limit strike picket line and calling on CLC officers for a "strong and militant campaign" against injunction laws was adopted unanimously after a brief debate.

There was no mention of the "civil disobedience" theme at closed Tuesday when angered delegates staged a floor revolt against the original injunction resolution. It had urged the use of "every legitimate means" to eliminate injunctions.

The convention voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to send the resolution back into committee for strengthening. There was applause when speakers said a civil disobedience policy should be adopted.

Fewer than 400 of the 1,000 delegates were in the hall Friday when the new proposal emerged. Most of the others had left to meet homebound plane, train and bus commitments.

Earlier in the day the convention agreed to discard a proposal that unions automatically be expelled from the congress if their members aid or assist an employer during a strike sanctioned by the CLC.

This meant, in effect, that a union whose members crossed picket lines of another union would be booted out.

Delegates voted Monday to have a resolution of support for the publicly - owned CBC enlarged to include an endorsation of approval for the producers of the TV program The Hour Has Seven Days, now in a dispute with CBC management.

A reworded version Friday put the convention on record as condemning any action of the CBC management which violates standard union procedures in the hiring and firing of employees.

When protests arose, CLC President Claude Jodoin agreed to have the executive council take a new look at the matter after the convention. AN unfinished business goes to the council for action.

Seven Lives Taken by Texas Gale

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Giant thunderstorms smashed across north Texas again Friday, taking seven more lives and adding to the millions of dollars in property damage.

Texans looking skyward today for some sign of relief saw only dark clouds.

A boy drowned in a submerged car while his mother pleaded "Please, somebody get him out!" A pilot perished when his plane clipped a gug wire of a cloud - obscured television tower. And five persons were killed on rain-swept highways.

Twelve persons have died in the Dallas - Fort Worth area during the two days of violent storms. Eight of the victims drowned.

Dallas County and adjacent counties were declared a disaster area.

DAMAGES COLLEGE

A tornado hit Fort Worth Christian College, with an enrollment of about 1,300. At least three buildings were damaged. One person was injured.

Michael Dealy, 6, was riding in a car with his mother, Mrs. Claudia Burkes, and his two sisters when the auto suddenly plunged into a creek on the edge of Dallas. Three men removed the mother and two girls but could not get the boy.

Floodwaters plimbed. In Dallas, the Red Cross said at least 226 families had suffered major loss of some or belongings and more than 400 had been evacuated.

Rhodesian Gun Battle Dims Hopes

SALISBURY (Reuters) — The first major armed clash between African nationalists and white Rhodesian security forces east a shadow today over plans for Britain and Rhodesia to resume talks to end their five-month-old break.

Police in Salisbury announced Friday they killed seven Negroes and arrested a number of others in a running gun battle 85 miles north of this capital.

They said they seized Chinese and Soviet weapons from the Negroes, who were described as members of the Zimbabwe African National Union, one of Rhodesia's two banned African nationalist parties.

Police officials said the Negroes crossed over from neighboring Zambia a week ago and gave indications of having been trained in terrorist tactics in China.

In Lusaka, Zambia's capital, university students demonstrated outside the British high commission today, stoning windows and tearing down the Union Jack. Commission staff watering the building also were stoned.

(The students were protesting the gun battle. Police who broke up the demonstration made about 100 arrests.)

STATES VIEWS

As the news of the battle was released, Prime Minister Ian Smith, whose government unilaterally declared Rhodesia's independence from Britain last Nov. 11, outlined his attitude to forthcoming secret talks with London.

It was his first official comment on Wednesday's announcement by British Prime Minister Wilson of an agreement by London and Salisbury to hold informal talks.

Speaking in Bulawayo, Rhodesia's second - largest city, Smith said Rhodesia does not intend on preconditions before going to the conference table but this does not mean it will have to give ground.

This simply means that we maintain the status quo — in common words I do not think that Mr. Wilson acknowledge our independence, and Mr. Wilson does not think that I give up our independence."

Cabinet Members Critical

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Frontbenchers on both sides of the Commons Friday joined a growing chorus of criticism aimed at the non-political redistribution commissions.

Agriculture Minister Greene, first cabinet member to enter the debate, accused the Ontario commissioners of treating Parliament and the people with great contempt.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker secured the new electoral map for Saskatchewan for lumping wheat farmers and city dwellers together in common ridings. He suggested a constitutional amendment to protect his province's representation in the Commons, due to drop to 38 seats from 17.

Alvin Hamilton, former Conservative agriculture minister, said the Saskatchewan commission "has let us down" in his province as a sheer academic exercise, without regard to human factors.

Former justice minister Davie Fulton (Kamloops) said the British Columbia commission created monstrous ridings and should start all over again.

Creditiste Leader Caouette condemned the Quebec commission "tortured and distorted" ridings all over the province and ignored objections made at public hearings last year.

'WIPE COMMISSIONS'

He renewed his proposal to abolish the 10 redistribution commissions and their maps, leaving a Commons committee to draw up new maps as was done in previous redistributions.

Despite the bitter blasts from all parties, the Commons completed discussion of 26 formal resolutions to the proposed maps, leaving only one to be cleaned up next Wednesday, when Manitoba MPs will have their turn.

A supply debate is scheduled Monday and Tuesday, clearing the way for opposition parties to introduce non-confidence motions on almost any subject.

Mr. Greene objected strongly to a proposal to carve up the western end of 64 riding, Renfrew South, and add portions to two neighboring ridings.

He warned the Ontario commissioners of ignoring the spirit of the 1964 act setting up the commissions and of ignoring protests made at hearings last year.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Saskatchewan's population has grown rapidly in recent years after declaring for two decades and the constitution should be

Failure to Remain At Accident Scene Is Costly to Driver

Clarence Blakely, 43, 206 Pine St., was sentenced yester d a y afternoon to two months in jail and prohibited from driving a motor vehicle in Canada for three years, on a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

He was also given two months concurrent on a charge of driving while his license was under suspension.

Magistrate Phillip Baker said, "Anyone who drives a motor vehicle in this fashion can conceivably expect to end up in court on a charge of this type sooner."

The charges arose from a hit and-run accident February 8. A car owned by Richard Conoyer, 27, 31 Station St., was struck in the right-rear fender while it was parked outside 69 W. Moira St. There was $375 damage to the car.

Conoyer's car was struck by a vehicle which left the scene. Blakely was subsequently arrested.

Defense counsel Robert Temple asked for a substantial fine rather than a jail term saying he thinks a fine would be sufficient to see justice served.

Crown Attorney Ralph Rapp Graham called for a two-month jail sentence, "but double the penalty he would otherwise have incurred after breaking the law if he would have faced up to it in the first place."

In passing sentence, Magistrate Baker said, "Two fines would think you should be at the police where you're going to realize that your drinking is a problem. It is a really serious problem. I should think you should take this problem in hand and do something about it before you take that one step too many."

Camera Club Sees Interesting Films

The Camera Club held its bimonthly meeting at the Alvanley Centre, Tues. night when a film "Color Photography after Dark" showed many techniques of taking pictures at night. The second film was an interesting tour through the two film factories in Germany.

The portrait results were postponed until next meeting. The annual banquet will be held on June 8th at Holloway Church Hall.

Beer in General, Virus Infections Possible Causes

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec health department has tentatively established two possible causes of a rare heart disease as being "beer in general" and "viral infections."

Since the end of March, a special health department committee has been investigating the deaths of 13 men who are among 64 persons known to have contracted cardiomyopathy, a rare degenerative heart disease.

The first victims, all of whom were heavy beer drinkers from the Quebec City area, died last November but the government only became aware of the incidence of the disease when a Quebec City doctor informed the health department March 19.

A health department spokesman said Friday that an inquiry into beer drinking has been ordered. "The inquiry is being conducted on all the elements to be found in any kind of beer."

This statement followed Thursday's publication of the investigating committee's weekly report in which it was said that the committee is convinced that this heart lesion was caused by an association of several factors."

The report said beer may have been one of the factors in causing the deaths but "no particular beer is to be blamed."

WASN'T ONE BRAND

"The inquiry has revealed that consumption (by the 13 victims) was not restricted to a single brand."

The reason for believing the beer was a possible factor in causing the deaths was that "members of the committee have ascertained that each of the sick persons drank large quantities of beer over a long period."

"But, at present, inquiries have shown that no particular brand of beer is to blame."

Thursday's statement also said that another probable factor in causing the cardiomyopathy was the "frequency of virus infections in the area."

The question of a virus was receiving further study.

After discovery of the deaths, Quebec City's only producing brewery, Dow, decided to recall all its stocks and destroy the beer, a total of 1,000,000 gallons.

Reduction of Bail Is Denied As Four Committed for Trial

Magistrate Phillip Baker of Kingston committed four Montreal men for trial on a charge of armed robbery at the preliminary hearing yesterday into the $16,000 robbery of the bank of Montreal, Frankford, March 30.

Committed to trial by judge and jury at the next sessions in June are Maurice Langis, 31, Armand Bisson, 29, Victor Tessier, 43, and Gilles Gendron, 27. Bail was set at $25,000 each.

The hearing was convened again yesterday afternoon in the County Courthouse following an adjournment Thursday to allow for the testimony of Bank Manager, Joseph C. MacDonald, to be heard at the hearing.

Crown Attorney John Pringle asked Mr. MacDonald to describe what he saw the day of the robbery.

"At about 2.30 p.m. I was in my office interviewing a customer, Harold Gainsforth. I was sitting at my desk in the offices and I heard a very loud noise, like shouting, coming from outside in the customer's area.

"I heard girls scream and with that my door opened and a masked man came in.

"He threatened me with a gun and ordered me in the rear of the building where the vault is. He ordered me to put my hands up, which I did.

"On the way to the back of the building, I noticed three other masked men in the bank.

"I was taken into the vault by a man, with a revolver. He instructed me to close the safe and kept the revolver pointed at my midriff.

NO IDENTIFICATION

"I told him I didn't have the combinations but he insisted I open the safe and he received it. He then pressed into my chest.

"At that time, I heard some shouting in the outer part of the building. With that, the masked man turned and ran out."

Defense counsel Robert Temple asked Mr. MacDonald if he could identify any of the accused as the man in the bank. Mr. MacDonald said he could not.

Mr. Temple argued the crown did not have sufficient evidence to commit Bisson and Tessier. Magistrate Baker replied that "the fact they were seen with the other two accused two days before in Ottawa and were in the car when it was stopped, and the fact that there were four men involved in the robbery, is evidence enough to commit the men for trial."

Mr. Temple also requested that bail be lowered from $25,000 each to $10,000 each for Tessier and Langis, and $5,000 each for Bisson and Tessier. The request was denied.

Employment News

By A. D. ATKINSON
Special Service Director

Today we would like to discuss Program 5 Training for unemployed persons, with particular emphasis on the Homemakers course, that is similar to that in Quinte Secondary School.

This program is one of ten covered by the technical and vocational training agreement between the Federal and Provincial Governments. This national training agreement by Parliament is sponsored by the Federal Government and is completely financed by a Canadian vocational training.

It is a program for training or retraining of unemployed persons to improve employment opportunities and to increase trade or occupational competence.

The B.N.A. Act of 1867 placed the responsibility of education in the hands of the provinces. Due to this, in Ontario, the Department of Education and local boards of education are designated as the agency to administer Program 5.

Each year seventy courses are offered in Ontario under this program by 34 boards of education, private trade agencies and five provincial institutions under the authority and supervision of the Technological and Trades Training Branch, Ontario Department of Education.

Courses are approved by the Co-Ordinator in this area, Mr. E. Buckley, our most successful program director, and agencies to a close at Quinte Secondary School.

The present success is only in the quality of the people who are graduating this year. The final courses will prove that the people are employed in the trades for which they are qualified.

COURSE FINDS

Last night, the homemakers course was completed and a great deal of comfort should be given to the 18 women who completed the course.

The course started on January 31st, was held five nights a week, from 6.15 p.m. to 11.15 p.m. - a total of 13 weeks of concentrated study. Eighteen started, 18 finished. The greatest was 41 years old, the oldest 65, with the majority in the fifties. According to Mrs. Buchanan of Red Cross Homemakers Service, the course is the ideal age group for homemakers.

The women are now trained to go out into area homes to take over the work of the mother when she is ill. These people are trained to relieve mothers of responsibility and allow them to rest and regain their strength. They know what should be done in a home and in efficient and orderly way of doing it.

A mother can arrange to have help for her family if she needs to go to the hospital and the homemaker will be there when she returns home. They also allow for complete recovery.

A minor illness may be prevented from becoming serious. A mother will not have to go in and out of bed to see about milk, bread, telephone, doctor, bills, stoves and meals. The children are safe and happy, and, in a lot of cases, the father won't have to lose time at work.

These 18 women have been trained in first aid, home nursing, food and nutrition, economics, accident prevention and safety.

Over a period of weeks of various homes at Hastings Manor, Trenton and Shannahan Apartments. The course - content of the training were changed from week to week, in the course of the instructor, Mrs. E. Payton.

Besides care for ill mothers, the Red Cross Homemakers Service is given. Through this training, care for the aged, bed-ridden and the sick can be given. Nursing homes should be interested in this type.

THE CHALLENGE

To quote Mrs. Payton: "The three month homemaker course has been a challenge to me and the students but also presented them with a challenge. It has without doubt given them a much greater perception of the needs of the community, improved their interpersonal relationships, has given them increased flexibility in their thinking towards family life. I trust that they will prove each one to be a mature, competent homemaker, meeting needs of the community, and families where such need exists.

These skilled women are registered with the NES in their chosen field. If there is a need for one of these homemakers call NES: 962—8831. Sickness can be an much easier and, remember faster when there are worries of family attached. A skilled homemaker can lift this burden.

Remember the National Employment Service. The last place to turn for a service, to people, in dustry and the community.

Maple syrup is still a popular seller. Some producers were asking $6.90 per gallon while others had product priced at $6. Both prices include containers.

Last of Nine Ships Bound For Scrapyard

KINGSTON (CP)—The Keyship, last of a group of nine Key ships built in the early 1920s for service on canals between Prescott and Montreal, was towed from here Friday to a Hamilton scrapyard.

The 36 - year - old, 1,700 - ton grain and coal carrier will be towed to Hamilton by tug, with scrap iron and broken up at yards near Cadiz.

The Key ship was built in England in 1930, the last of the group originally owned by the Canada Steamship Lines.

The ships carried cargo from the eastern end of Lake Ontario through the canals to the freighters too large to manoeuvre in the canals that skirted the rapids on the St. Lawrence River.

Admits Taking Picture of Girl in Nude

CHESTER, England (Reuters) Ian Brady testified at the "Moors murders" trial here Friday that he took pornographic photographs of one of the victims, people he knew and slaying.

Brady, 28, a clerk, said he photographed 10-year-old Lesley Ann Downey in the nude. Her body later was unearthed on a nearby moor by police.

Brady is accused with his friends lover, Myra Hindley, 23, of murdering Lesley Ann, John Kilbride, 10, and Edward Evans, 17, whose battered and strangled body was found at Brady's home.

Brady denied killing them. Miss Hindley, who stood in a glass-protected enclosure opposite the jury box, admitted she has denied the murders.

BROUGHT TO HOME

Brady, early afternoon as he testified Friday for the first time in the trial, said Miss Hindley's brother-in-law, David Smith, 17, brought Lesley Ann to his home.

He said Smith, the prosecution's key witness, "explained she had agreed to pose for 10 shillings (£1.50)."

The judge asked: "Am I to understand she was willing to pose?"

"No, I am not saying that," Brady answered.

Brady said Miss Hindley was present "in case something went wrong."

He said Lesley Ann—he put a handkerchief in her mouth to keep her quiet—was all right when she eventually left with Smith.

POOR EVANS HOME

Brady said he had picked up Evans in a homosexual club and taken him home.

He said Evans started fighting when told to hand over his cash and valuables in the living room.

Smith hit the youth with a stick, Brady said.

"I was telling Evans to shut up. He would not shut up and kept shouting. I turned to the fireplace for something to hit Evans with."

He said he hit Evans with the blunt side of an axe, blood spurted "and after that I did not know anything. I just kept hitting him until he shut up."

The trial resumes Monday.

News in Brief

TRENTON — On Monday, around 200 canvassers in Bayswa, Brighton, Frankford, Glen Miller and rural areas surrounding these communities will start a two weeks' campaign for Red Shield Salvation Army funds.

In Trenton, Bayside and Middleton Park another 200 canvassers will stage a Blitz Night, Monday, May 16.

Trenton Streams will hold an auction sale of household effects sometime in June to raise money for the building purposes.

The regular and volunteer firemen have asked Trenton and area residents to donate furniture and other household items, (no clothing) and these will be picked up if the householder phones the Trenton fire hall.

The members of the Trenton Community Assistance Association have started collecting clothing depot on Quinte Street and are busy preparing for a rummage sale scheduled for Purdy house on Front Street, one block north of the new post office. Opening day will be on depot is May 20. The depot will be open Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 9 to 4:30 p.m. Used clothing, furniture and household items, such as bedding etc. will be accepted at the depot. In the case of burned out families or those on welfare, the clothing and other items are given at no charge.

Sadly missed, daughter Evelyn and son-in-law, Norman.

FROST — In loving memory of our dear mother, Jessie Irene Frost, passed away six years ago today, May 1, 1960.
Like falling leaves the years slip by,
But loving memories never die.
Those we love with us memory still,
And treasure them in our heart.
Lovingly remembered
Ruby, Evelyn and Norman.

CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late John Jones wish to express their sincere thanks to relatives, friends, neighbours, doctors, nurses, spiritual advisers and members of sympathy and the many kindnesses shown during the illness and at the time of the death of our father. Special thanks to the nurses on 2nd West and 1st South of the Belleville General Hospital, Dr. Ross and Dr. Murphy, Douglas and Totten and Mr. Ross Wannamaker, Rev. Wm. Smith and Mr. Mooney; also to the Rowe Funeral Home.

We would like to express our sincere thanks to relatives, friends, neighbours, for cards, flowers, cards of sympathy and kindness shown during the illness and during the loss of my husband. Also thanks to Dr. Ross and Dr. Murphy, Dr. Bonnell and the nurses of 2nd West who cared for him during his illness. Sincere thanks also to Rev. M. P. Walsh.
Mrs. Jessie Rushlow and family.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to relatives, friends, neighbours and fellow workers for cards, flowers and gifts received during my stay in hospital and since my return home. Special thanks to Dr. Ross and Dr. Murphy, Douglas and Totten and the nurses of 2nd West and 1st South of the Belleville General Hospital, also to Rev. Wm. Smith.
Mrs. Ruby Evelyn Jones.

We wish to thank relatives and friends for their floral tributes, cards and gifts received during our bereavement; and for the kindness and gratitude the care and kindness shown to our father, the late Edward Foster, by the staff of Belleville General Hospital, 2nd West, 1st South, while they lived. His wife was a patient there. To the Rev. Wm. Smith, Rev. Walsh and Rowe Funeral Home for their efficient service and to Mr. Mooney for the use of the funeral coach and the organist and soloist.
The family of Mr. Thomas Irwin.

ASKS INCREASE

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (AP) The Ontario Association for the Mentally retarded has called on the provincial government to increase by 30 per cent its capital grants for building and expanding facilities for children's schools. The association's annual meeting approved a resolution Friday asking that the capital grants for construction purposes be increased from 50 to 80 per cent of building costs.

Plans for Centennial Year Outlined by Mayor at Dinner

By RETA LAWRENCE

Over 80 sorority sisters enjoyed a lady roast,beef dinner at the Belleville Shrine Club on Thursday evening. The occasion was the 35th anniversary of the Founder's Day of Beta Sigma Phi.

The theme for the evening – Crown Every Moment, prompted ingenious place cards in the shape of miniature crowns. The head table was beautifully done with a centre of yellow roses and white chrysanthemums flanked by black candles carrying the symbolic colors of Beta Sigma Phi.

Mrs. Jean Manley conducted the opening ritual and Miss Margaret Wheeler read the Beta Sigma Phi blessing. Mrs. Anne Acton led reciting of the Founder's Day Pledge and Mrs. Ruth Swanberg read the annual message from Mr. Walter W. Rose, founder of Beta Sigma Phi. Mrs. Joan Manley introduced the head table.

ADDRESS BY MAYOR

Mayor J. R. Ellis, guest speaker, spoke on Centennial celebrations. He said Belleville had some trepidation about his assignment and quoted Freud, "The great question that has never been answered, and which I have not yet been able to answer, despite my years of research into the feminine soul is: "What does a woman want?"

"Perhaps it will suffice," he said, "to say that Canada is unique in having the opportunity of celebrating a 100th birthday. What other nation has had such an opportunity in modern times?"

"Large as we are geographically, we are small in depth in ways. We think a small and, worse still, we think small. The crying need is for all Canadians to develop a common but proud identity. We are doing more than a birthday party; we need something to add some spirit de corps, some unity, some raison d'etre. There has not been, since the McFarland hockey fever swept Belleville, such a spirit of dancing in the streets. For all its flaws caused by that unhappy occasion, it was, after all, the last time that Canada won the world hockey championship."

One of the highlights of Centennial celebrations will be the return to Belleville of the intermediate hockey team in combat with the Whitby Dunlops.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE MONTH

"During 1867 we intend to have a continuing party with highlights every month. We hope to have something for every age and every type of individual. In January we'll go back to all secondary schools from Belleville and neighboring communities to participate in one giant snow sculpture contest. February will be "Brotherhood Week". There will be a dinner in the Armouries for men of all faiths to bear, beautifully done with a theme "Citizen of the Year" dinner will be held. February is also the month of the Mid-Ice Hockey Week. March will see the opening of the Centennial Secondary School and a presentation by the Canadian Players of an original Canadian play in the same month.

April will bring us the Rotary Science Fair and a Youth Conference, as well as a period fashion show under the direction of Mrs. Howell. In May we will have a gigantic elementary school field day culminating in the huge Freewell Relays, and in May the Hastings Museum will open with its Centennial exhibit. A new recreation will be given to the cheese industry in Hastings and Prince Edward area with much interest and the opening of an auditorium at Deseronto Memorial Secondary. In June also Corby Park will be opened with its 1400 rose varieties and beautiful trees and paths.

CENTENNIAL CARAVAN

In July the Centennial caravan will come to Belleville and be set up on Zwick's Island and at the same time we will have the official opening of the Quinte Bridge.

If possible, a young couple from Salt Lake City, Bill and Sandra Zwick, will be in our town. They are probably the last remaining descendents of the original Zwick family from the Belleville district. Throughout July and August regatta, golf tournaments and other festivities are planned. The Belleville Fair in August will give us another opportunity to share our festivities with our country neighbors. September will bring a large Labor Day celebration sponsored and conducted by the labor people of the city.

During the year the theatre will have a large part in the celebrations with Don Messer, a folk singing variety show, "Spring Thaw" and the Ninette de Valois Ballet.

AUTUMN EVENTS

In October we will have "Quinze Vet", a unique display of the Nonsimastic Philatelic Association at the city's Centennial Flavor. A Curling Club Bonspiel with a Centennial flair will be November's contribution and, of course the Santa Claus Parade and carol singing in the city square.

Mayor Ellis concluded, "We should, come out of 1967 with a deep sense of pride in our Canadians, ready, willing and able to face the next 100 years. Perhaps, after a year of telling all who will listen about the wonders of Canada, we will believe it ourselves."

Mayor Ellis was introduced by Mrs. Mary O'Flynn and Mrs. Sandra Hagerman. Each expressed appreciation of all present for his cheerful and optimistic talk.

Mr. Wallace Williamson, a well known tenor, husband of Belleville's Tammy Reid, pleased his audience with several numbers.

George Hees, former Conservative trade minister, told the Massinger inquiry he wished he had never met the lady.

In testimony given the inquiry earlier and made public Friday, Mr. Hees maintained he committed no impropriety in his association with Mrs. Massinger.

MPs complained the commissions did not give enough consideration to geographical considerations and had made the whole exercise an academic one.

Prime Minister Pearson scheduled a meeting with provincial representatives for Saturday in an attempt to head off a threatened strike by CBC radio technicians. Today

2,600 Tornados Recalled by General Motors

DETROIT (AP)—General Motors Corp. said today it recalled 2,600 Oldsmobile Tornados because some wheel nuts were not tightened by an improper wrench to the point where the lug nuts could snap off. It said it had no reports of wheels coming off.

The firm also confirmed it called in about 23,000 1966 Cadillacs two years ago because of a defective hand latch that could cause the hood to fly open.

GM confirmed reports of the defects as the four major U.S. auto manufacturers put finishing touches on lists of defects in their cars since 1960. The lists are being prepared for Senator Abraham Ribicoff whose U.S. Senate subcommittee is investigating the auto industry's safety practices.

Cause of Fire In Hull Will Be Probed

HULL, Que. (CP)—A provincial investigator has been flown in to look for the cause of a fire that left eight children dead here Thursday night.

Seven of the 11 children of Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Larcher, and the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Emond, died when fire swept through the Larcher's two - storey frame home.

Four other Larcher children, including Diane, 12, the eldest, who was baby - sitting, and Marie-Sylvie, at 5 years, the youngest, escaped or were rescued.

Fire Chief-Roger Poitras said it will be Monday before the cause of the blaze is known.

The mothers were at a bingo when the tragedy occurred.

The seven dead Larcher children, who ranged in age from one to 10, will be buried Monday at Point Comfort beside a sister who was killed accidentally in 1962 in a Hull sandpit.

The two-year-old Emond girl will be buried at Gracefield, another small western Quebec community.

CLC Members Sent Home To Ponder Outcome of Its Two Major Decisions

By BEN WARD

WINNIPEG (CP) — The parliament of labor prorogued Friday, sending 1,800 members home to ponder the outcome of its two major decisions.

The Canadian Labor Congress convention, attended by delegates representing 1,200,000 union members across the country, posed these questions:

Will the CLC executive council agree to withdraw the 1960 expulsion of the controversial Seafarers' International Union of Canada?

What effect will an ease in anti-raiding rules have on interunion warfare?

The proposal empowering the executive to decide the SIU issue touched off the smallest debate of the convention week.

When the 1960 convention booted the SIU out it said the union could not return except by a future convention vote.

This view was reaffirmed by the 1964 convention when top CLC officials met and had made the whole exercise an academic one.

Trans This Hour Has Seven Days.

Mr. Pearson met with CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet.

MONDAY, May 2

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to start a supply debate. The Senate is adjourned until May 3.

Some leaders said they feared the new procedure would increase raiding, already one of the CLC's thorniest problems. Others took the view that it would force smaller unions to improve their service for fear of being gobbled up, thus reducing raid opportunities.

A big issue that didn't hit the convention floor was the demand by the Quebec Federation of Labor for "associate state" status with wide autonomy in Quebec affairs.

Informants said CLC President Claude Jodoin promised that this idea would be examined by the special inquiry into CLC structure set up by the convention. his arguments were sufficient to buy a two-year truce on the bicultural issue.

QFL President Louis Laberge said after the convention ended that he was confident the inquiry commission would give full justice to the Quebec situation.

Member Accused of Giving Wrong Mortality Figures

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stephen Lewis, NDP member of the legislature for Scarborough West, was accused Friday of using erroneous and misleading figures in a legislature statement on Saskatchewan fatalities in Ontario.

At Owen Sound, the Grey County public health unit issued a statement saying that the figures quoted by Mr. Lewis for that area were erroneous.

Mr. Lewis had given what he said were Ontario mortality rates in several parts of Ontario during a speech on health department estimates.

His figures were also criticized by the Medical health officer in Ontario County.

The Grey County health unit said Mr. Lewis had used the figure of 32 infant deaths per thousand births for that area, compared with a provincial average of 23 a thousand.

It said Mr. Lewis had considered only deaths registered by the county, without including Owen Sound where a hospital is located. Inclusion of the city would bring the county birth mortality rate in line with the provincial average, it said.

William Cooke, Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital administrator, said he was "completely puzzled" by reports Mr. Lewis's infant mortality rate is one of the highest in the province.

Mr. Lewis had given the Prince Edward rate at 21 infant deaths per thousand births.

Births at the county hospital in Picton average slightly over 300 a year. In 1965, said Mr. Cooke, there were 279 births and five deaths. On a per-thousand basis this would indicate a mortality rate of 15.

COL. PHAY WILLIS BRANCH

The April meeting of the Col. Phay Willis Branch (ex-service-women) was held in the Legion Hall on Monday evening, with the president Comrade Janet MacDonald in charge.

Plans for the Centennial Dance were discussed. The event to be held in the middle of May will be a "theme dinner" party. Proceeds will be used for the Branch's share of the Legion's Centennial fund The Royal Canadian Legion is setting aside a fund of $1 million dollars not only to perpetuate the memory of the servicewomen and women who were killed or died while on active service but to carry on worth-while projects such as nurseries, youth work and sports, after all Second World War and Korean veterans have died.

The branch will enter to a reception to be held in the Sergeants' Mess on May 2.

Legion week will be held from June 5 to 11 and the branch is making plans to take part.

Due to the 26th of May holiday falling on a meeting night the meeting will be held at Comrade Billie Kirby's home on Wednesday night, May 25.

Distance Flyer Missing

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Authorities said early today nothing has been heard of distance flyer Frank Hern since he left Fairbanks Alaska, Thursday to fly to Miami.

Hern, who has 10,000 hours as a pilot, took off in a single-engined flight plane carrying about 180 gallons of gasoline.

He hoped to set a new nonstop record for small planes. His 100-horsepower Cessna-150 carried water, high - protein food concentrates, survival gear and was fully equipped for instrument flying.

Hern, 39, of Seldovia, Alaska, planned to fly over Canada to the Dakotas and then down the Mississippi Valley. He hoped to land at Miami about 40 hours after leaving Fairbanks and establish a record set by a Czechoslovakian in 1956 for 2,021 miles in the 1,100 to 1,750 pound class.

CONSULT AGENCIES

Alaska search and rescue headquarters at Elmendorf Air Force Base said it sometimes uses the 3,950-mile route are being consulted in the hope of locating Hern.

His flight was sanctioned by the U.S. National Aeronautics Association which also sanctions operates under the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, the organization which ratifies and verifies aviation record claims.

Hern, who has raced hydroplanes, speed boats and stock cars, holds a commercial pilot's license with multi-engine land, sea, instructor and instrument instructor ratings. He also is a certified aviation engineer and instructor. He is on leave from Cook Inlet Aviation Co.

Hern lives with his wife City of Seldovia. The plane carried a replica of the Alaska flag on its left wing and a likeness of an Alaska king crab.

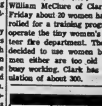
Display Night Is Planned At Moira S.S.

Active displays in all departments will be featured at this year's sixth annual display night at Moira Secondary School, scheduled for Wednesday evening, May 4th.

The display night program will get underway at seven o'clock and will run through until nine, following which visitors are invited to enjoy a cup of coffee and cookies in the cafeteria.



There will be demonstrations of school studies in many of the departments, static displays in others, with special action features to include boys' and girls' gymnastics, a debate on "The Nature of Confederation and the Treatment of French Canada Since Confederation" in the history department, and regular performances of small groups in the music department.

FEMALE FIREMAN

CLAIRE, Pa. (AP) — Mayor William McClure of Clark said Friday about 20 women have enrolled in a training program to operate the tiny women's volunteer fire department. The town council has approved women as men either are too old or too busy working. Clark has a population of about 300.

Resume Attempts to Settle Strike by Teachers in Quebec

QUEBEC (CP)—Negotiations resumed Friday night between the government and the union representing 2,300 striking technical teachers in an effort to end a walkout that has idled 30,000 students since April 12.

No statement was released on the outcome of the talks but Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie said earlier that the government is still refusing to meet back-to-work conditions set by the union.

The teachers are members of Le Syndicat des Professeurs de l'Etat du Quebec (the Union of Quebec Government Teachers), which is affiliated with the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions.

The government and the union have signed a labor contract but the membership refuses to return to work unless two substantive issues are agreed to.

—That the government pay the teachers for all but seven of the days they have been on strike.

—That the government drop legal proceedings against union leaders who are before the courts after continuing the strike despite an interim injunction which declared the strike illegal and was issued the day after the strike began.

Mr. Justice Injunction which was to have expired Friday, was extended until 5 p.m. May 27 by Mr. Justice Toussaint McArdinold of Quebec Superior Court.

CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE

PROCLAMATION

"MENTAL HEALTH WEEK"

MAY 1ST - 7TH, 1966.

Mental-illness is Canada's number one health problem! Approximately half of all the hospital beds in Canada are occupied by the mentally ill.

The promotion of better mental health is therefore of prime importance to a community and its citizens.

The Canadian Mental Health Association is a national, voluntary citizen's organization working to combat mental illness and advance mental health.

As Mayor of the City of Belleville, I urge you to support the Canadian Mental Health Program throughout the year, but particularly so from May 1st to 7th, which I proclaim to be Mental Health Week.

J. R. ELLIS,
MAYOR.

Madoc Cheese Operation

Further consolidation of dairy industry operations in the Madoc area bodes well for the prosperity of that region.

The Eldorado Cheese and Butter Co-operative is consolidating with the Madoc and Oak Leaf factories, and a new addition to the Eldorado facilities will provide a year round milk outlet for dairy farmers in the Madoc area. The significance of the Eldorado initiative may be gauged from the fact that 95 per cent of the farmers depend on milk production for the greater part of their income.

Construction of the Eldorado addition has actually been underway since January. Now comes word that the Ontario and Federal governments are contributing $55,000 toward the $123,000 cost. An announcement to this effect has been made by Clark Rollins, MLA for Hastings East, and by Ontario Agriculture Minister William Stewart.

The Eldorado plant alone produced 923,000 pounds of cheese last year. With the new addition, milk from a total of eight former factories will be processed.

"Coupled with the recent announcement that the United States is increasing its global import quota on cheddar cheese, this acceleration of overall dairy production in the Madoc area is good news indeed. More and more Madoc is laying claim to being one of the leading centres of the dairy industry in Canada.

Unity and the Press

Arnold Edinborough, editor of Saturday Night, believes that Expo '67 will do much to promote Canadian unity, and that even with what he termed "the new spurt of Quebec self-assertion" we are closer to being a unified nation than anytime in the last three years.

Mr. Edinborough feels however that Canada's Press can contribute more toward making unity a reality. "The difficulty is, we have a local, not a national press," he told a Peterborough audience recently. "In England, which is a small country, it is possible to have a national press, but not in Canada."

"When I was in Vancouver, I couldn't care less for newspapers saturated with stories about the Gardiner Expressway as the Toronto newspapers were then. Two-thirds of the news in Toronto newspapers is about Toronto and the same holds for most large city newspapers."

How should this trend be corrected. Mr. Edinborough believes it can be done through the establishment of more national magazines like the Spectator and New Statesman in England, and The New Republic and The Reporter in the United States. He feels also that The Canadian Press news agency should have more columnists writing on national problems and more correspondents abroad.

National unity may well be closer to realization if such steps are taken. But the thought occurs, are Canadians really as divided as Mr. Edinborough and others would have us believe? Is an Ontario man's say Maritimers and British Columbians or Ontarians, or even Quebeckers? Mostly, we all speak the same language (and soon more Canadians will be speaking at least two) and think pretty much alike. Ruling out someone from Red Deer, Alberta, or Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, does not mean he or she has just arrived from Venus in a flying saucer.

Would it not be true to say of most so-called national divisions are 90 per cent myth and that we are all more Canadian than we know. Another thing, does Expo '67 not give the lie to the assertion that Canadians do not know where they are going?

Religion and War

War is hell, someone has said. Or put another way: It may well not don't have to be nice, you only have to be right. The latter statement, we believe, was made by Sir Winston Churchill.

It comes to mind along with one attributed recently to U.S. Senator J. W. Fulbright and a revealing rejoinder by Liberal Party Robert McNamara.

"Every country," said the senator, has believed God was on its side when it waged war." He was then quoted: "I don't think that we have brought God into our present military efforts (in Viet Nam).

"It isn't easy," he continued, "to imagine the Almighty supporting the frying of people by napalm bombs, or even being on either side in the Viet Nam war. We expect the Almighty wants that conflict ended and is frustrated by the obstinacy of all parties to it."

To which we may all observe: Amen!

Up and Up

Note on the cost of living: The price of regular gas along the Trans Canada Highway in Northern Ontario some five years ago was 51 cents per gallon. We do not know what the price of regular gas (let alone high test) in that area is today, but it's up somewhere in the stratosphere. Incidentally, the cost of high test in Belleville is now 51 cents.

Ottawa Offbeat

Is the CBC Undermining National Fibre and Unity?

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The CBC and what it chooses to call its "Public Affairs" programming!

Thumb through Hansard, the official record of Parliament, for what must be accepted as a balanced assessment of it.

IS THE CBC take a D-Day? Balanced, because in the House of Commons the CBC has both its supporters and critics — particularly of the way it present these so-called "Public Affairs" programmes.

Very broadly, the New Democrats support the CBC on the basis that right or wrong, it's a publicly-owned enterprise so must be defended no matter what the charge of impropriety or offence against the generally accepted decencies.

Usually critical, and very often violently so, are the Liberals, Conservatives, Creditistes and Social Credit.

Again, scan the pages of Hansard.

See what the men and women you elect to speak for you in Parliament have had to say about the CBC conception of "Public Affairs."

It's all catalogued in the Hansard Index.

In the index for the 1966-'67 Session, there are five solid pages of references to the CBC containing perhaps as many as 500 individual observations by the MPs, most of them unflattering.

DISMAY AND ANGER

Sample entry: "Oddballs, Extremists, Communists, Separatists, Anti-Americans, Communists, Terrorists — Interviews and Commentaries."

This reference to "Oddballs" covers a multitude of strange, fat-out types including narcotic addicts and dope pushers, perverts and prostitutes, criminals and convicts, and other misfits as well, as one CBC commentator delicately put it, "non-conformists."

Over the years, the cries of protest recorded in Hansard have had about as much effect as the expressions of anger and dismay of an aroused Public. Which, and you might as well face it, is nil.

Trouble is, the defenders of CBC are organized. They form a highly vocal and well-disciplined army of partisans. They can be mobilized into what their organizers like to term "nationwide protest" at the drop of a bleat by any of their pet CBC personalities, "stars" or "authorities."

They were marshalled overnight in the defence of "Seven Days", largely by telegrams that their telegrams poured in like a great gigantic chain-letter on the subject.

The critics of CBC and "Seven Days" utterly unorganized, and on their own. So the voice of dissent remained muffled by default.

So what happens?

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson, non-CBC-fanatic Liberal Ralph Cowan, but day in and week out a man of quiet moderation, perhaps has summed it up best:

"Some CBC producers, apparently beyond the reach of any controlling authority — certainly beyond the State Secretary who is supposed to be responsible to Parliament for the publicly-owned broadcasting system — continue thrusting on an increasingly annoyed public flagrant portrayals, anti-moral propaganda and divisive presentations.

BEYOND THE LIMITS

"Such programs in an alarming way are under-cutting establishon authority, weakening respect for moral standards, and increasing the threat of a divided nation.

"Questionable feature programs, the appearance of revolutionary leaders of the Separatists, Communist agitators and American Fascists are typical examples of CBC efforts to expand the limits of what is reasonable, responsible and decent-ly acceptable.

"The CBC continues ignoring complaints, apparently convinced it is invulnerable to public pressure from the public it is supposed to serve."

Mr. Thompson spoke more than a year ago of what he said was the apparent indifference or heiselessness of any authority having the kind of control required "to cut out the deadly, gross growth of lewdness which has found such a seemingly secure place in our national broadcasting system."

The CBC, he has pointed out as the creature of loerlia and inaction rolled by, "holds no mandate nor license to undermine the nation's moral fibre and chip away at national unity."

One of the difficulties in doing something constructive about the CBC always has been — and likely Mr. Thompson, on reflection, would agree — that Parliament has used the broadcasting system as a political football.

One of the political parties — usually the Government, good-ed beyond its limits of patience — proposes to straighten out, or even as much as criticizes the CBC and the others raise the cry of 'political' interference."

Example: Conservative Leader Diefenbaker, for the last couple of years one of the sharpest critics of the good taste and even good sense of "Seven Days," reversed his field in this last CBC crisis, and protested the uncertain firing of controversial co-hosts Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre. He even demanded an "emergency debate" on it!

Dogs Again—and What About Kids?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.
Regarding the new city laws and fines for loose dogs I personally think this has gone too far. The majority of dog owners take pride in them and give them reasonable care and exercise. Crucified there are some who couldn't care less and perhaps deserve what they get.

However, the new fines seem out of line. Belleville animal control officer better get together and see that they have their rights protected and the reformatory have a little restraint in their policy making. I, personally, will see that my representative is told I am aware of my objections.

If would also like to see some control law with the hordes of children running loose on the city streets. Dogs legal to age from one year to 16 years. Have you had your car scraped and dented, your lawn and shrubs ruined; property destroyed and stolen; gardens played in and plants destroyed?

Some licensing policy on loose children and perhaps a system of fines would certainly take pay-rolls to the aware of this problem, too. Schools will soon be out for the summer vacation ahead, the annual migration of kids will start in the city.

Also, people should investigate the local dog pound conditions. Are they caught by its pens or, though far from satisfactory, condition free nothing by the local A.S.P.C.A. Are fines that are given for its upkeep and food supplies for the inmates, the person in charge should give an accounting of it. I should like to know how much money is taken in each year in licenses and fines and where it is spent. Perhaps, it should be put in your paper each year.

Canada's Diversity

Fredericus Gleaser

As a study of school textbooks across the nation will abundantly prove, there is no such thing as Canadian History. Only the plural form of the word is valid. We have histories but no agreed, single history. Our multi-racial history, English version really in many cases an Americanized version of the British story, the French l'Histoire Canadienne, version Francais, in interpretation as well as in language.

And, as Miss Kahn-Tineta Horn has been at pains to point out, mind-ming Maritime audiences, there is an Indian viewpoint on our national chronicle which is strikingly different from either of the other two.

The difficulty in interpreting the story of our Canadian past is not so much in telling as it may seem at first thought. A school history of Canada, prepared by competent Canadians, able and acceptable to the education department of all 10 provinces would probably be a hopelessly dull production in either language.

What is needed is not uniformity in our history books but general Canadian awareness that a reasonable degree of mutual understanding of the viewpoints of others is necessary for the most general sequences of events so differently.

Through our very diversity of tradition Canadians can come to a maturer understanding of history than can people of nations who are nurtured on a single universal version of their country's past in which the statesmen were always right, the commanders always victorious.

To Your Good Health

Pill-Users Should Tell Doctors About Effects

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What effect do oral pills have on the body? My doctor has prescribed them for about two years, off and on. Lately I have had headaches. I feel nervous at times and dry hands shake. I am [illegible] Miss K. J. R.

As I've said many times before, "diet pills" have certain risks and side effects and should never be taken except under a doctor's supervision.

I add a second rule: Remember that it is up to you to notify your doctor if the pills bother you.

The mere fact that he has prescribed pills does not automatically mean that he will know if or when they begin to bother you. No two patients are exactly alike, and they won't respond identically.

Hence reducing pills still have to be used with reasonable caution.

"Nerves" and the various manifestations of nervousness are the most frequent problem. The result may be jitters, restlessness, difficulty in sleeping, or other such can-t sequences. I doubt that headaches would be a direct result, but they can very easily be a secondary one, since jitters mean tension, and tension headaches are very common.

Therefore I urge that all folks using diet pills keep their doctors informed. If you encounter excessive nervousness or another odd symptoms, notify him. That is the purpose in using these medications under your doctor's supervision. He has to know how you react to them.

Dear Dr. Molner: My elderly brother was told by his doctor to avoid salt in order to eliminate fluid from his 115 ankles. Water has disappeared except some in his ankles. Now a friend says that not eating salt can cause the ankles to swell again. Is this true? — Mrs. C.L.

First of all, your brother has seen some good results from avoiding salt, even though it has not removed all water from the tissues. That ought to be proof enough, and he should not be misled by a know-it-all who is trying to give him some bad advice. I wonder if these busybodies ever stop to think how much harm they can do.

Salt is a combination of sodium and chlorine. Sodium tends to cling strongly to water. Hence salt makes more water accumulate in the body. A person with a vigorous heart, good circulation and healthy kidneys can throw off the excess; a person with illnesses cannot. That is why your brother needs a low-salt diet. The ankles frequently remain swollen when other tissues are not.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it not true that after menstruation ceases permanently, no more eggs are sent from the ovaries and pregnancy cannot occur? If this is so, then why do we occasionally hear of women in their 50's, 60's and even 70's bearing children? — M. R.

Your first statement is correct.

The answer to your second is that you may "bear about" women of advanced age having babies — but did you ever see one? Some women continue to ovulate into the early 50's and hence can become pregnant, although this is rare. Medical literature does not report a case of mother beyond the 60's, let alone the 70's. The greatest confirmed age is about 53.

In other words, gossip sometimes "reports" things that haven't happened.

Note to Mrs. L. J.: A hot appartment alone is not likely to bother that little bronchitis patient, but excessive dryness, due to the heat, certainly can.

The United States bought the French holdings west of the Mississippi 163 years ago today—in 1803—for $11,250,000 cash and $3,750,000 of public debt. The purchase of Louisiana, as the district was called, grew almost casually out of trade and neutrality talks with the Napoleonic government, and the geographical limits of the territory were only vaguely defined. But in the sale the United States doubled its area at one stroke and the increased feeling of importance was as valuable to the American as immediate wealth of Louisiana.

Aussie "Pest" Is Reprieved

North Bay Nugget

There are probably no two members of the animal kingdom which differ more than the wolf and the wombat.

The wombat is a marsupial (a member of the animal group which carries the young in an external pouch) with the build of a baby bear, and inhabits Australia

Like the wolf, he has a price on his head, and like the wolf, he has been the subject of much controversy. Recently in the North Bay district a prolonged argument raged over whether the $25 bounty on wolf pelts was high enough, and whether wolves should be slaughtered in greater numbers in order to maintain and increase the deer population.

Animal lovers in Australia are happy just now, because the wombat is going to get a reprieve The price on the wombat's head (or pelt) has been about $1.20 in Canadian funds. The bounty is going to be lifted for three years.

The friendly-looking wombat, a vegetarian, has the consistution of a tank and can wreck farmers' fences. He sometimes weighs as much as 100 pounds and likes to trundle along in a straight line. If an expensive fence gets in his way, he just bulldozes it down or burrows underneath it.

That is why farmers have insisted on a bounty on him. Even the defensive wombat is a menace.

Since the bounty system was introduced in 1925, more than 250,000 wombats have been killed, many of them cruelly trapped.

Animal lovers have protested that the actual damage done by wombats bears no relation to this slaughter. They have insisted that farmers themselves could get rid of the wombats who do stray from their mountain homes and cause trouble.

Now the government has eliminated the bounty. But the animal stays on the list of "vermin animals" which means he can still be killed indiscriminately.

We merely mention all this to show that despite government crimes and serious situations involving humans, a lowly animal can often set off a hue and cry which temporarily puts everything else on the sidelines.

Library "Campers"

Peterborough Examiner

One British town has introduced a bylaw which places a $15 fine on people who go to sleep in the public library's reading room and browsers who rest on the floor. However, accidental calaspapers and shortsighted readers who have to lie on the floor to read book titles on the bottom shelves will be excused. Scrupulously fair, those British.

CLEANING FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 30th, 1946

Full loads will be allowed on all provincial highways in this district after May 1, it was announced yesterday by W. F. Noonan, divisional engineer of the Department of Highways. Highways have been patched and are now in reasonably good condition, although much work is still to be done, Mr. Noonan said.

The world is not going to see any quick action towards a durable world peace arising from the Paris Conference, nor any far-reaching humanitarian settlement for Europe soon, predicted Wilson Woodside, former foreign correspondent for CBC news commentator before the Rotary Club on Monday.

From our files of April 30th, 1916: Contract to Rebuild Bridge Street Church Awarded: At a meeting of the building committee of Bridge Street Methodist Church the tenders for the building of the church to replace the fine building which was destroyed by fire, were opened and the contract was awarded to Mr. Leslie Grills of the city, whose tender of $22,000 was the lowest of the 18 submitted. Mr. Grills' contract is for the whole work, including the heating plant, gas fixtures, organ and bell. The stipulations bind him to have the lecture room ready for use by Oct. 1st, and to have the church completed by Jan. 1st, 1917. Work was commenced this morning with prayer and praise.

Captain Percy Green went to Toronto this morning.

Big Brother Is Watching

Saint John Telegraph-Journal

Now and again someone complains that man is losing his identity. Man is becoming simply a number in the vast and automated society of today. And the thesis was proved in Kansas the other day.

A man from Croton Falls, N.Y., who was in a hurry, intentionally famous manufacturer of centipedes, was visiting an old friend. A distinguished member of Topeka's Washburn University. The visitor blithely blew about his company, and how it is automating the populace.

To tell her your address a letter to me to Prof. No. 522 (his code number at Washburn), Zip Code 66621, and it would be delivered," said the prof. His friend thought otherwise.

But when he got home to New York he tried it. And it worked. The card, with no other address, was delivered two days after it was mailed.

Terrifying, isn't it?

Going Places

All Is "Free" at $90 Per Day In Fabled Jamaican Hotel

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

PORT ANTONIO, Jamaica — In case you're interested, there is a hotel here where you can devour Doen Purignon and caviar for every meal, obtain free room and board for your house guest, or even be flown to another hotel and checked in at your host's expense — all at no extra charge.

In fact, there's no extra charge for anything — liquor, laundry, tips, boat charters, overseas calls, chauffeured Cadillac, nothing, at Frenchman's Cove. "I am the only hotel manager in the world who can encourage guests to splurge with a clear conscience," says Jean-Pierre Aubry, who stocks the wine, cellar — also no extra charge — from his family's estate in Switzerland.

It's the basic charge that gets you. It used to be two people, two weeks, $2,000. But that catch line no longer applies. At $90 a person a day in the winter season, that's more like . . . let's see . . . two people, two weeks, $2,520. The rate sheet managed mously knocks it down to an even $2,000 on 15 minutes in the shower for us.

There are those who assert that even at one-third their rate in posh Ocho Rios and Montego Bay resorts, by the time you get done with the extras it can cost as much. But the argument is academic. Frenchman's Cove is unique, probably the most expensive hotel in the world. It's also a dream, though the accounting is all but unnecessary.

ALL REQUESTS FULFILLED

Aubry disdains the implication that people might come here to beat the house. No one has ever made an unfulfillable request. What he strives for, and succeeds at markedly, is the atmosphere of a house party at a rich friend's estate. Which, in a sense, it is. Frenchman's Cove is, a Canadian food magnate, never has made money from it.

Spread over 22 acres of manicured tropical grounds on the lush northeast coast of Jamaica, Frenchman's Cove has room for 72 guests in 18 luxurious, isolated cottage suites scattered over the grounds. A river of fresh water flows among them down to a sandy cove of incredible beauty where a gentle surf works its way between the enclosing arms of two steep bluffs hung with vines and giant ferns.

Here guests usually loll away the $2.75 an-hour day, interrupted only briefly by one of Aubry's staff of four prize-winning Europeans chefs asking them what they would like for the next meal. There are no menus at Frenchman's Cove; 30 to 40 different requests may be fulfilled at each meal.

Guests who wish may live in utter but luxurious seclusion; Aubry admits that some he does not see for weeks. Each cottage comes with a butler and maid over all the guest's disposal. There are more than two employes for every guest, a ratio unheard of since the Titchfield Hotel burned down.

That was in 1920, maybe before Aubry was born. The Titchfield was Jamaica's first resort, a huge 300-room palace that used to take boatloads of tourists off the United Fruit Co. ships for weekend blasts 30 years before Pan American's jets started flying them here in three and one-half hours.

Well, not exactly here, but to Montego Bay or Kingston many miles away which is why hardly anyone but Frenchman's Cove's clientele and Errol Flynn knows this tropical paradise that is the very image of Jamaica — its mountains, its sandy beaches, groves of palms, waterfalls, jungle rivers and all.

FLYNN SAILED IN

Flynn sailed in here one day on his yacht and took the place His Cocktail. He even bought and operated for a number of years the still standing annex of the Titchfield, now the Jamaica Reef Hotel. But other wise not much has happened to tourism here.

(Port Antonio's inaccessibility — two hours east of Ocho Rios by road and twice that from Montego Bay, — combined with the wild scenic beauty of the area, inevitably attracted a group of discreet developers.

Not far behind came an equally discreet group of investors in 1,200-acre San San Estate. Many of their names begin with Lord, Baron and Prince and end in such as Woolworth and Thyssen. They were the kind of people who maybe had other estates where they invited their friends, . . . but not here, not here.

This was the place they kept to themselves, and San San is probably the least publicized rich man's hideout in the Western Hemisphere.

One-acre lots sell for $2,000 to $6,000 depending on the view, but that, of course is peanuts. The cheap houses in San San cost $35,000 and they range up from there to the quarter-of-a-million mark.

This, of course, is not peanuts at all. The carefully tended lawns and trimmed hedges dripping with bougainvillaea attest to that. The sleek modern lee cream house with its slatted lattice work, red tiled roofs, and picture windows on the side away from the road, often are invisible to the casual snooper.

San San now has its own mini-golf course, the most fabulous in the jungle, hole by hole, over a fifteen year period. Only an architect with X-ray eyes could have designed it. The golf course is a real jungle course as well as property owners, of which there are now 52 with homes.

VIRGIN BEACHES

San San Estate, including an undeveloped 900 acres sprawl all over the hill-and-valley ridges and series of beautiful virgin beaches east of Port Antonio. Soaring views and virgin beaches — one of them nearly three miles long — are so common that the absence of resort hotels represents one of the great unsolved mysteries of the twentieth centuries.

Port Antonio town itself is a sleepy West Indian backwater, quiet and neat with its wrought iron and covered stone balconies, far prettier than Montego Bay or Ocho Rios. It sits picturesquely on a point of land extending between the east and west arms of the harbor, one of the finest in the Caribbean.

In the heyday of the banana trade it was ser-vished with three piers, the last and highest of which they would like for the next meal. There are no menus at Frenchman's Cove; 30 to 40 different requests may be fulfilled at each meal.

Guests who wish may live in utter but luxurious seclusion; Aubry admits that some he does not see for weeks. Each cottage comes with a butler and maid over all the guest's disposal. There are more than two employes for every guest, a ratio unheard of since the Titchfield Hotel burned down.

The Blue Hole, now politely known as the Blue Lagoon, is the area's other major attraction. A deep, shaded sapphire inlet surrounded by a hatched bar out of Tahiti by Gauguin, it is — like all of Port Antonio except Frenchman's Cove — and San San — as remote from the familiar tourist's Jamaica as . . . well, as Frenchman's Cove and San San.

MR. AND MRS. DENNIS JAMES REID

Reid – Walsh

Maureen Ann Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Walsh of Belleville and Dennis James Reid, son of Mrs. Gerald Reid of R.R. 3, Belleville and the late Mr. Reid, were united in marriage by Rev. W. V. Hamilton in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville at 11 a.m. on Saturday, April 16, 1966. Miss Dorothy Grant played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length satin peau de soie sheath gown with Alencon lace trim on the front panel of the skirt and a Watteau train gathered by a bow at the back. The bodice featured a scalloped neckline trimmed with Alencon lace and long lily-point sleeves. A lily-of-the-valley headdress held her veil of tulle illusion and she carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses, sphatoulis and ivy.

Mrs. Joe Rivers of Tweed was matron of honor, dressed in a long gown of turquoise with a bodice of white chiffon appliqued with turquoise roses. The Empire waist and long sleeves were trimmed with velvet and chiffon panels were attached at the back. Her headdress was a matching wedding ring with self bow and a short tulle veil.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Ray Courneyea of Belleville, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Bruce Alexander of Belleville, sister of the bridegroom. They were dressed as sandpipers similar to that of the matron of honor, but in buttercup yellow.

Mr. Gerald Reid, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Maurice Walsh, brother of the bride, and Mr. Ted Rosky, both of Belleville.

At the reception, held at Club Canara, the bride's mother-received the guests, dressed in a suit of camel hair, with brown accessories and a corsage of bronze baby 'mums. The bridegroom's mother assisted, wearing a two-piece dress of royal blue brocade with navy accessories and a corsage of white baby 'mums.

For her wedding trip to the Adirondack Mountains, the bride chose a three-piece ensemble of brown tweed with beige accessories and a corsage of yellow Sweetheart roses.

On their return, the couple will live at R. R. 5, Belleville.

and Mrs. Lloyd Dorland.

An appropriately decorated cake, made by Mrs. Earl Brooks, was served.

About 35,000 pictures have been sent from all parts of the world for Expo 67's photographic exhibition.

Couple Feted At Shower

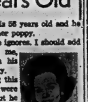
WOOLER — Over 100 people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rogers on Saturday night to honor their granddaughter, Carolyn Rogers, before her coming marriage to Lieut. Bruce Bowles of Toronto and Kingston.

Mr. Bowles is a graduate of Royal Military College and is now stationed at Petawawa. The bride was graduated as an X-Ray technician from Kingston General Hospital and is now working in a Pembroke hospital. Following their marriage on May 21, the couple will live in Pembroke.

Homer Leavitt was chairman for the evening. Readings were given by Mrs. A. Caskey, Mrs. G. Wiley, Mrs. W. Adam and Mrs. F. Smith. Mrs. Harold Perry sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. Ross Hubble, and Miss Karen McComb played several accordion selections.

Mrs. Earl Brook read an address to the future bride and bridegroom and Miss Aileen Hough of Peterborough and Mrs. Dean Kemp helped them open their gifts. A bride's book, signed by all present, was presented by Mrs. R. Reid

Ann Landers



Sees Mom Every Night And He's 56 Years Old

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is 56 years old and he still calls his mother mommy and his father poppy.

We have a teen-age daughter whom he ignores. I should add that he doesn't pay much attention to me, either. His whole life is wrapped up in his parents. He must see them every single day.

After 20 years I find myself resenting this mommy and poppy business. When we were married I thought he would outgrow it, but he seems to be getting more childish as time goes by.

Am I foolish to let this bother me? I will follow your advice. — MIGRANE MARTHA.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MIGRANE: Yes, you are foolish to let this bother you. It's a useless waste of energy. You are going to hear "mommy" and "poppy" as long as his parents live, so get used to it already.

How sad that your husband has no interest in his daughter! If she is in her teens and he ignores her, that won't change, either, — until mommy and poppy are gone. Then he'll probably look to her for affection, but it will be too late.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several weeks ago a friend of ours invited my husband and me and four other couples to a wild duck dinner. In these parts a wild duck dinner is something very special. It isn't like, "Come over with the kids and we'll cook hot dogs on the grill."

Three days after the friend invited us she telephoned to say that she and her husband had been invited to a very elegant party by some socially prominent people, so she was cancelling her dinner. She was sure we would understand.

I was shocked. My mother would not have permitted me to pull a stunt like that when I was eight years old. The other women who had been invited were also offended. Some of the men didn't think it was so bad. What is your opinion? — MOLLIE.

* * *

DEAR MOLLIE: It seems clear your friend receives so few invitations that she simply couldn't bear to pass one up. At the rate she's going she's going to receive even fewer.

She treated you and the others in a shoddy manner and I hope you will tell her so to her face instead of boiling privately.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please inform the celo player's wife that her husband is going through the male menopause and that she is having an easier time of it than I had.

When my husband reached the foolish fifties he got himself a two-legged cello and they made beautiful music together. I sat home night after night taking care of his sick mother.

Too bad some wives don't realize that men go through a period when they are not quite themselves. I hope the wife who wrote will give her husband a lot of love and understanding. I did, and it paid off. My husband appreciates me more than ever for standing by and patiently waiting for him to get through his identity crisis all by himself. — R.C.

DEAR R.C.: Sound advice to women whose husbands are fiddling around in the evening of their lives. Thanks for writing.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN F. HALL

Hall – Reid

Marilyn Beily Reid, daughter of Mrs. Milton Reid of R. R. 4, Stirling, and John Frederick Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hall of Plainfield were united in marriage at a recent candlelight service in Thomasburg United Church, Thomasburg. Rev. H. Y. Kennedy of Tweed performed the ceremony, assisted by Mr. A. F. Smith of Thomasburg. Mrs. Bruce Stapley of Melloway was organist and Mrs. Don Rose of Belleville was soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Carl E. Reid of Grafton River, Quebec. She wore a floor length gown of white silk organza over taffeta with long, dressed sleeves and a boat neckline trimmed with lace appliques. Matching appliques circled the hemline. Her three-tier veil fell from a wedding band lace piece and she carried a bouquet of pink roses mingled with ivy.

Miss June White of Harwood was maid of honor, dressed in a full-length aquamarine gown of silk organza over taffeta with elbow length sleeves, A-line skirt and Empire waistline. A train falling from the waistline was trimmed with lace appliques matching the appliques on the rounded neckline. She wore a matching flowered headpiece and veil and carried a bouquet of white 'mums tipped with pink

Mr. Bruce Hall of Belleville, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Grant Reid of Stirling, brother of the bride and Mr. Rob Hall of Oshawa, cousin of the bridegroom.

Mr. Harry Coulter was master of ceremonies at the reception held in the church parlor. The bride's mother received, wearing a navy crepe dress with white and navy accessories and a corsage of white gardenia with pink rose buds. The bridegroom's mother assisted, wearing a navy crepe dress with white accessories and a white gardenia and pink rose bud corsage.

For her wedding trip to Washington and other southern points the bride chose a flamingo pink three piece suit with white accessories and a garden-ia corsage.

On their return, the couple will live in Plainfield.

BOSTON (AP)—A Radcliffe girl who advertised for a husband so she could escape dormitory life said Friday she has had 220 offers, "but I'm still single."

And she confessed to being "a bit shocked" at the number of serious proposals prompted by her advertisement that ran in the Harvard Crimson two weeks ago:

"One-year marriage? Seems to be the only way for a Cliffie to get out of the dorm. I'll share expenses, am a good cook. Other details? We can work it out. Contact Crimson Box 300."

"It was kind of a Bozo," said the 20-year-old student. It was also to protest Radcliffe rules that will require her to live in a dorm next year instead of in the "peace and quiet of an off-campus apartment."

Harvard men were quick to apply for interviews. The military is now being heard from. She said she has received about 60 letters from men stationed in Viet Nam.

"They all point out that I could live off campus and receive an allotment and that they would be collecting more pay and could live off base," she said. "But I don't think I want to get married by proxy."

DORINT WANT NUTS

She said she has a line eyes, auburn hair and is five-feet tall. She has refused to identify herself because I don't want a whole bunch of nuts calling me."

Radcliffe also had made a bid. She said "the college has found me a lovely room."

She said she has talked to six of the men who answered her advertisement, "but I don't like to use the word 'interviewed.'"

Since the first few replies "the number increased so I couldn't begin to keep up."

She still is considering several of the offers. "A married graduate student and his wife have offered to adopt me and I'm meeting them next week," she said.

She said she would answer all of the letters.

"And I'm not going to put any more ads in the paper for a long time," she added.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Before her recent marriage, Mrs. John F. Hall, the former Marilyn Betty Reid of Stirling was given a surprise shower at the home of Mrs. W. Harlow, Stirling, with Miss June White as hostess. She was honored with a surprise dinner party at Tops Motor Hotel, given by the girls of Ontario Hydro, Belleville. The Belleville Hydro Social Club and co-workers in the accounting and maintenance department both made presentations.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bullard, Foxboro Rd. have returned home after visiting with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Bullard in Toronto. The latter Bullard's are leaving on Saturday for a three weeks' vacation in England and various countries in continental Europe.

Secretary Turns to Stripteaser

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto housewife Mrs. Lynn Howard recently became bored with her job as a secretary for a construction company.

So she did what any 25-year-old shapely strawberry blonde would probably do. She became a stripteaser.

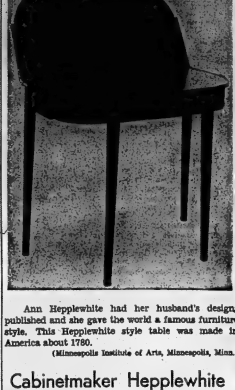
Thursday night she partially fulfilled her ambition as a burlesque dancer when a theatre audience voted her into the final of an amateur striptease contest to be decided in two weeks.

She says she entered the contest for the sake of her two children, 4-year-old Richard and 2½-year-old Lynn.

"If I win the contest I reckon I'll earn around $200 a week instead of the paltry $70 I now get as a full-time secretary," Mrs. Howard, whose vital statistics are 36-26-36, said she became inspired by the theme music of a television detective show and began practicing at home before a mirror.

She said her husband, Fredrick, is "broadminded and gave me several helpful hints."

She said she has no guilt complex about stripping at all.



"And I'm sure no one that comes to the theatre pretty healthy specimens. Just the odd one or two will be bored, that's all. Sex is life and it would be . . . dull life without it."

She said she is getting $168.50 for the week's engagement, which "covers me for around 50 for each of the 28 performances a week I've given."

Cabinetmaker Hepplewhite Owes Fame to His Wife

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Behind many a famous man is a woman. George Hepplewhite was a man who owed his fame to his wife. He was a cabinetmaker and designer of furniture who worked in London, England. He died in 1786.

His wife continued his business after his death and in 1788 had his design book published. The Hepplewhite style became popular immediately. There are many pieces that were actually made by Georgg Hepplewhite, but thousands have been designed in his style. The straight lines and lightness are compatible with today's modern styles.

Q. Please settle our silly argument. Is there anyone pictured on the bridge in the design on a piece of the real willow pattern china?

A. The Chinese versions of the willow pattern that appear on Canton ware show no one on the bridge. The early English versions of the blue willow pattern picture two or three people on the bridge.

Q. Is "Canadian thistle" a common pressed glass pattern? A. Many types of pressed glass called thistle have been made since the 1870's. The "Canadian Thistle" pattern is a late ware made from about 1910 to 1930. The Canadian made pieces have a thistle and one terminal bod. Some of the recently-imported wares have two buds. Canadian antiques are gaining in importance as the collectors begin to learn more about the products of their country.

A. There was a family of violin makers who worked in Cremona, Italy, during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Your violin is the work of the first of the family, often called "Pere" (father) Ruggieri. He made violins from about 1666 to 1720.

LETTER:

At last I have an opportunity to thank you for the many fine recipes you have given over the years. They have been a great help to me in feeding my family of nine. I especially enjoy the challenge of trying to feed a family well on a low budget, and would like to thank you for your help. I have enclosed a recipe for Senate Bean Soup which you requested after a family reunion — "Hamburger Heaven" — Dainty B.

HAMBURGER HEAVEN
(courtesy Dainty B.)

1 lb. hamburger, 1 stalk celery sliced, 1 large onion, 1 large tin tomatoes, pinch baking soda, 1 teaspoon sugar, salt and pepper, large handful of narrow egg noodles (1 to 1½ cups), green pepper strips (optional), ½ lb. mushrooms or 1 tin mushrooms with liquid (optional), oregano (optional), garlic powder (optional).

SATURDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Beat Stow with Dumplings; Scalloped Potatoes; Buttered Carrots (see Thursday); Combination Salad with Homemade Tyrrell Dressing; Walnut Tarts (see Friday); Coffee.

* * *

Cook onion and celery and green pepper if used in a little water till tender. Meanwhile brown hamburger and cook thoroughly. Fry mushrooms in butter and add. Drain liquid from tin of mushrooms including the liquid. Add tomatoes, sugar, salt and pepper and other seasonings. Bring to a boil and add noodles and simmer until noodles are tender. Add more water if sauce is too thick. Sauce should be quite runny. Can be cheated another day, or frozen. To save freezer containers, I make a large empty juice can with a plastic bag (baggie), fill can leaving head space and close bag with wire tape. The mixture can be easily removed by running warm water over plastic bag and thawed over direct low heat in a Dutch oven, stirring occasionally and breaking with a fork as it thaws. Quick, easy and cheap — Dainty B.

ANSWER:

I want to thank you Dainty and all of our readers who sent in the recipe for Senate Bean Soup. It was given here on Tuesday, April 19.

I did not test your recipe for Hamburger Heaven, my current cooking for I remember this recipe from years ago and it surely sounds delicious to our readers, especially those who have large, hungry families like yours to feed.

FREE METHODIST LADIES' NIGHT

FRANKFORD — The Light and Life Men's Fellowship of the Free Methodist Church held the district annual ladies' night and banquet of Friday evening.

Mr. Gary Walsh, son of Rev. and Mrs. Walsh of Frankford was the guest speaker for the evening. Mr. Walsh is a junior college student from Lorne Park College, Port Credit. He has spent a year in Hong Kong under the church organization "Volunteers in Service Abroad."

Entertainment included group singing and selections by a male quartet.

The dinner was prepared and served by the women of Centenary United Church, Belleville.

"Praise ye the Lord. I will praise the Lord with my whole heart, in the assembly of the upright, and in the congregations." — Psalm CXI. v-1.

"In 1873 and 1874 a large number of Loyalists moved up the St. Lawrence and settled in the then unbroken wilderness of Upper Canada," points out Miss Lesley Fralick, 113 Moira Street, West, in her article dealing with Religion in Pioneer Days in Adolphustown District which appeared in "The Loyalist Gazette."

"The lack of a clergy was marked. When Bishop Mountain visited the district in 1794, he found only one Lutheran chapel and two Presbyterian churches between Montreal and Kingston. At Kingston he found "a small but decent church" and about the Bay of Quinte, there were three or four log huts which were used by the Church of England missionary in the neighborhood.

"The lack of a regularly ordained clergy was partly remedied by a number of itinerant Methodist preachers or "exhorters" who gained a strong hold on the rapidly increasing population and for a long time they were familiar figures upon the country roads.

"In 1788 a Mr. Lyons, an exhorter in the newly organized Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, set up as a teacher in the Bay of Quinte district. Shortly he was gathering groups about him in various places and in this fashion laid the first establishment of Methodism must be attributed.

"Two years later, William Losee, the first regular itinerant Methodist preacher, a Loyalist, visited the area as an agent of the Methodist Episcopal Church United New York Conference. In 1791 he was appointed to the "Kingston District".

"Among the places Losee visited the home of John Carscallen the tavern of Conrad Vandusen and the home of Ezekiel Hoff on Hay Bay. He set to work to form class meetings which formed the foundation of Wesleyan Methodism.

"The first regular class meeting to be established in Canada, on February 20, 1791, was at Conrad Vandusen's. Hoff on the Bird Concession and Adolphustown; the second at Ernestown and the third at Samuel Detlor's, three miles from Napanee.

"The following year, the class meeting at Paul Huff's had increased that they determined to erect a meeting house. A contract was drawn up for a building 36 feet by 30 feet, two stories high, with a gallery, to be built by subscription on the farm of Paul Huff's land.

"Twenty-two subscribers signed the document promising 100 pounds.

This building, known as "The Hay Bay Church" still standing on the original spot and used for a yearly service in late August is a point of interest to those visiting the Adolphustown district.

Apart from our topic today, the following is an interesting letter written by Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell from St. Anthony, Newfoundland, the site of his famous mission. He needs no response from many Canadians, among whom were a group of Belleville women, the letter is addressed to Miss Fralick's late mother, concerning aid for a mission project and dated December 3, 1919, reads:

Dear Mrs. Fralick: Thank you very much for your kind letter of November 19th, which reached me today. I enclose a receipt for the latter for the papers. It has been very kind of you to have taken the interest I refer to raise in the work, and I am delighted to know the water wheel has been a success.

The expense of sending it, and installing I have immediately offered to Australia, and my formen from St. Anthony, Mr. Edgar McNeil will write you what he estimates the cost of installation at.

The plan should be to lay water pipes about 300-600 yards in length down the hill to the village, the pipes to be on the ground to enable the underbrush on low and covering to protect them from frost.

Our own men are clever enough to lay these and erect the machinery.

I thought if you asked the manufacturer in Belleville as soon as you give him the order for the machinery where and what kind of pipes it would need he might be able to tell you the cost of the pipes — and perhaps could calculate the total sum needed approximated.

Unfortunately I am not enough of an engineer to know what size pipe is needed for the water, and of course, on the size depends the cost of it. The fall is about 60-80 feet and I believe about 5-600 yards. The house would cost about $400 I should say.

Sincerely and most pitifully yours, (signed) Wilfred Grenfell

Won't Forget Teen-agers

TORONTO (CP)—Hallas fingers will shy away from geometrics in fall and winter collections this year and will concentrate on classical lines, says Prof. Nicola Pinto, president of the Alta Moda Italiana—Italy's top fashion association.

Prof. Pinto said in an interview Thursday that fall and winter collections will be held in Florence from July 15 to 18 and in Rome from July 19 to 22.

Hallas designers, he said, will concentrate more on women over 30 in the next collections but teen-agers won't be forgotten.

He predicted that short, short skirts will last "a year, maybe" and added that he "would rather look at a decolletage than knees."

WOMEN OF THE MOOSE

The Women of the Moose held its regular meeting on Thursday night in Moose hall with Senior Regent Nellie Scrymgeour presiding.

Plans for the meeting opened the brothers of the Loyal Order of Moose and the Women of the Moose entertained the White Cane Club at the annual potluck supper convened by Grand Regent Flora Kelsey and her committee.

Grace was said by Olive Vanderman, after after supper the Governor-elect, Joseph Roth, was escorted to the Senior Regent's chair and the Belleville Chapter for the supper, James Brennan, the new bingo chairman, thanked the chairlady.

Mrs. Violet Walls, on behalf of the White Cane Club, accepted a donation from the W.O.T.M. Governor Joe Roth also promised the future presentation of a donation.

Co-workers eligible for the Academy of Friendship degree are Mrs. Ida Brennan, V. Walls, Mary 1 to receive it.

Ask Women To Buy More CanadaGoods

TORONTO (CP)—More than 600 women who attended a conference sponsored by the women's advisory committee, Ontario department of economics and development, were urged Thursday to buy Canadian.

Stanley J. Randall, economics and development minister, said 770,000 women belong to OFWI, representing 32 per cent of the labor force.

Designer Sid Bernadsky urged the women to get in touch with manufacturers to let them know what design improvements they would like to see in household appliances. He said that too often manufacturers don't know what the consumer wants.

"Food is one best buy," R. E. Goodin of the Ontario Food Council said. "The average wage earner here in Ontario spends about one day in five working for his food requirements. In Asia, it's more like three days out of five."

However, Mr. Goodin urged housewives to get more active to their shopping lists, "carefully checking prices and buying more in bulk."

Children True Treasure

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

A father is blessed most when his children are a benediction to him and through him. The glory of the children is the pride of parents.

Once, in ancient Rome, a matron came to Cornelia to display her jewels and to demonstrate her own personal luxuries. When she asked this great lady Cornelia to show hers, the mother called in her two sons, who were later to become the famous Roman Tribunes, the Gracchi. "These," she said, "Are the only jewels in which I find personal delight; they are my true treasures!"

Not long ago, following his death, the spiritual legacy he bequeathed was generously revealed, when General Douglas MacArthur's will was read. This testamentary document, like a true general whose flinty mien often seemed a sign of a proud warrior, also had its softer, sweeter side. In his will he wrote of his son, in tribute to that blessing which he sought from the Lord, here is his singing syllabics:

"Build me a son O Lord, who will be strong enough to know when he is weak, and brave enough to face himself when he is afraid. One who will be proud and unbending in honest defeat, and humble and gentle in victory.

"Build me a son whose wishes will not take the place of deeds; a son who will know Thee — and that to know himself is the foundation stone of knowledge.

"Lead him, I pray, not in the path of ease and comfort, but under the stress and spur of difficulties and challenge.

Here let him learn to stand up in the storm; here let him learn compassion for those who fall. Build me a son whose heart will be clear; whose goal will be high, a son who will master himself before he seeks to master other men; one who will learn to laugh, but never forget the past.

"And after all these things are his, add, I pray, enough of a sense of humor, so that he may always be serious, yet never lose himself too seriously. Give him humility, so that he may always remember the simplicity of true greatness, the open mind of true wisdom, and the meekness of true strength.

"Then I, his father, will dare to whisper, "I have not lived in vain."

Some parents live in vain because their legacies consist of perishable goods. Some never die; their children remember.

A Lift for Living

Self-denial Is a Principle That Runs Through All Life

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

Toward the end of his first life, General Robert E. Lee attended a christening. The infant was the child of a close friend. After the ceremony, the mother turned to General Lee and asked him for some word to guide the boy through life.

Lee did not think long upon the matter. In a moment he summed up the creed that had led him through years of suffering and trial to a place of eminence in the American story: "Teach him to deny himself."

Nothing about the good life is more widely misunderstood than the practice of self-denial. It has often been pictured as an avoidance of all pleasure, a withdrawal from the real world of people, action, and adventure, for the sake of gaining God's favor. Far from it! Self-sacrifice is not simply man's attempt to purchase God's blessing. The idea that God finds enjoyment in man's discomfort is pagan, and a remnant of primitive, non-Christian religions. It is related to an equally pagan conception — that God is displeased by man's happiness.

But rather then the price of God's favor, self-denial is a principle that runs through all of life, like the red strand woven through the ropes of the British Navy to show that they belong to the Crown.

DEEPLY COMMITTED

Everyone is deeply committed to self-denial. We either reject the best to have the good, or we deny ourselves all in order to take the bad. We give up the mediocre for the sake of the best, or we reject the best and accept the mediocre. One way or the other, the best people and the worst deny themselves.

When Jesus said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself," it was not a new and different command. Rather, the purpose of self-denial was different.

"Deny yourself" is the command of the arts, too. A young pianist may enjoy eating at a home plate, but he knows how often fingers are broken in that position, so he denies himself either baseball or a career as a pianist. The singer guards the health of her throat and will not indulge in any activity that demands the careless use of her voice.

One critic of the arts has said, "Art begins where freedom leaves off." The artist is not free to be all things, to dissipate his time, energy, vision and ideals. If he is to give his time and attention to perfecting his skill, he must deny himself many things that are attractive to him.

We often desire two mutually exclusive things: evil pleasures and a clear conscience; excessive indulgence and radiant health; a happy marriage and playing fast and loose with one's passions outside of marriage. Anyone confronted by two knows one vital meaning of self-denial. He can choose the good and deny himself the evil, or he will accept the evil as alternative and deny himself the good. One way or the other, self-denial is unavoidable.

DO HAVE CHOICE

While we cannot avoid self-denial, still we do have a choice. The tiny of the world is in this area of decision. What is our ultimate purpose? What will we deny ourselves to bring that purpose to fulfillment?

When Charles and Anne Lindbergh flew to China in 1931, their airplane space was severely limited. Packing for the trip was an ordeal of critical decisions. Weeks before the trip, the Lindberghs gathered equipment and stacked it in piles. They they arranged and rearranged the piles, sorting out the most crucial essentials to take along. At last, when they had drawn a clean, clear line between what was most worthy of the journey and what could be left behind, they loaded the plane and were off.

Any life that is going anywhere faces similar decisions. Everyone needs to ask, "Of all the things I see and want, what will enhance and enrich the journey, and what will weigh me down and perhaps prevent me from ever reaching my destination?" Great living consists of knowing where we are going, of choosing the highest goal, packing for the trip, separating the wheat from the chaff, and then launching the flight.

The "self - denial" in but the sombre-sounding name we give to the preparations we make for life's high adventures.

Lighting the Way

COLE'S LAST INTERVIEW

We can decide to what purpose we will deny ourselves. Our own individual fate and the fate of King Cole, famous singer, television and recording artist, passed away in February, 1965. For years, he had entertained millions of people with his unique style of vocalizing. Cole was also well known for his humanitarian activities. On his death bed, during his last interview with the Press, he left all of us something to think about.

In addition to other things, Cold said, "When you have been hospitalized as long as I have been, you definitely establish a new set of values. So-called "big things" become small things, and you find that the so-called "small things" are really the most important things."

We are too materialist ic, blinded by our selfishness, we look upon life making a great deal of some things which, after all, are not very important. We make a major on the minor, and a minor on, the major. For many people, suffering has a way of changing this. In human experience, it seems that there can be no gain without pain. God often permits us to experience trouble of one kind or another, in order that we might gain a new set of values.

Bird House Winners Named At Rod and Gun Club Meet

NAPANEE — The children were filled with enthusiasm when the competition for bird houses, sponsored by the Rod and Gun Club, was first opened. Over a hundred sent in entry forms, but somewhere along the way their enthusiasm faded. Only 11 bird houses were brought to the meeting this week to be judged.

All were of good calibre, however, and so each entrant was given an award, varying with the class in which he had entered.

The boys and girls under 11 were more persistent. Laurie Keith and Brian Ferguson were winners in class 1; Peter Hayes and David Malone in class 2, and Sil Schoonman and Peter Hayes in class 3. Entrants were permitted to enter in as many classes as they wished.

Herb Hayes, the past president was in charge of the project. Judges were Earl Baker, Howard Storey, and Art Plumley.

Robert Wilson gave a report on the hunters' safety training course held the previous week. Twelve boys and girls had undertaken the course, and all had passed it except one boy. Mr. Wilson organized the course and had the assistance of other members for the demonstrations.

Traffic Safety was brought home to the audience, also, when they viewed a film "The Story of David Hall", who was crippled for life because of a traffic accident. It was shown them by Constable James Elliott, safety officer for the local detachment of the O.P.P. He also commended the club for its stance in safety in handling firearms.

Around Town

SAFETY INSPECTION

NAPANEE — The safety check lanes installed on the Market Square Tuesday morning were dismantled at noon Friday. During that time 931 cars had been checked, most of them made before 1960, and over half were found to have defects, some of them serious. Police Chief Harry Bean reports.

Check on the older cars was compulsory, the Chief says, but a few people who brought their newer cars in voluntarily were glad they did so, as minor defects were found. All defects must be repaired and the car brought back for inspection by an indicated date. If the owner fails to return with the repaired car by that date he will be charged.

An O.P.P. constable and two members of the town police force were on hand at all times to assist the men from the department of transport who were in charge of the lanes.

S. A. BAND CONCERT

Interest in town over the weekend is focused on the Salvation Army band which arrived by bus from Scarborough Saturday morning. Leader of the 37-piece band is William Lorimer, M.D. His master of a Salvation Army band is paid for his services. However, the local corps is responsible for transportation charges, over $250, and the members hope that many citizens will attend the concert in the Prince Charles School Saturday evening to help defray that expense. Band members are being billeted by citizens.

In addition to the concert, the band will play at the L. and A. Memorial Hospital, rain or shine, Sunday morning at the open air meeting that evening at 8.15; and during the community church service in Trinity United Church at 7.00 p.m.

Cpl. R. Santer Back From Duty In Cyprus

NAPANEE — Corporal and Mrs. Robert Santer and two year-old Todd left Friday morning for their home in Gagetown when they left near by seven months ago. Corporal Santer has just returned from Cyprus, after six months with the Royal Canadian Dragoons.

During "Bob's" absence, his wife and son have been with his mother, Mrs. R. E. Santer.

Corporal Santer left Cyprus April 14 on a Yukon turboprop which carried 98 men and a crew of 10. When he arrived at Trenton Airport at seven o'clock that night, his wife and son were there to greet him. His leave expires May 10, but he has a feeling he will visit friends along the way.

There were no incidents in the area which Corporal Santer was patrolling in police. But he felt that only the presence of the troops was keeping the peace. "Each day it was his duty to be part of a convoy to take Greek citizens through Turkish territory from their locale to Kyrenea and escort them back home in the evening. They were given no business, and some to spend the day at their cottages. They travelled the 15 miles four times a day.

For the most part, Greeks and Turks got along well by themselves, he said, although in poor districts where they were mingled too anyway they mingle freely. The rice live well and the poor are desperately poor. In remote areas they live just as their ancestors lived thousands of years ago. Only the young girls go to be caught up in the atmosphere of ancient history," he said.

The food was good. Their Canadian rations were supplemented by local vegetables and fruit. The beef came from Australia.

Days were pleasantly warm, but nights were quite cool even than the usual, because of the dampness. When he left, the daytime temperature was 60 degrees.

Marmora

MARMORA — Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wells and son Mark returned last week from Tampa, Florida where they spent the winter. They were still there at the time of the hurricane but received only a heavy wind and all connections and telephone were out.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McManus, David, Deborah and John spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. L. Green and Ralph.

Miss Dora Lawrence, Reg. N., of Allan visited her mother on the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Brian Brownson and son Kelly of Lively spent several days with their parents here.

Mrs. Eugene Brady visited her daughter and family in Toronto on the weekend.

Mrs. Bill Abrams of Ottawa spent several days visiting relatives in Marmora.

Mrs. Betty Wellman of Toronto visited Mr. and Mrs. Homer Bowers.

Mr. Thomas Hogle at one time manager of Marmora Creamery and butter Co., is critically ill in Kingston General Hospital following a heart attack.

De Gaulle's

de Gaulle's announced intent to pull French forces out of NATO's integrated multi-lary structure by July 1 and oust NATO units from French soil within a year.

Ball said this and other de Gaulle moves are aimed at separating France from the other Atlantic countries and giving her "a special position of primacy in Western Europe."

Paris is aiming for a first-class power position from which the deal "to its own advantage" with the U.S.S.R. and the United States, he said.

But because of France's middle-ranking size of 50,000,000 population and limited resources, Ball said, "no matter how adroit (its) diplomacy may be, it cannot call a first-class power status. . . ."

He used in such speeches, Ball did not mention the French president by name.

But earlier, top editors and broadcasters heard U.S. officials specifically refer to de Gaulle in similar addresses delivered at a state department foreign policy conference.

The views were that the Soviet Union may try to beat the rift in the Communist world by trying to make a comeback with China after the death of aging Mao Tse-tung.

Request Tweed To Number Its Houses

TWEED — A successful dinner meeting sponsored by the Tweed Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis Club and the Kinsmen Club was held at the Hotel Tweedsmuir on Thursday evening. Representing the village council was Reeve Guy Hughes and Councillor Steward Leonard. Bob Wood and Rev. D. W. Sinclair.

It was decided to request the council to pass a by-law to authorize the numbering of houses in the village. It was also decided to form a committee to revise the map of the village.

Mr. Bob Carleton, Trenton district manager of Bell Telephone, was guest speaker. He was introduced by Mr. Keith Cotton and thanked by Mr. Clarence Wooder. Mr. Carleton pointed out the advantages of numbering the houses and offered assistance in connection with this project. He has helped with the numbering of houses in Madoc and Marmora and other small municipalities.

The members felt that although this meeting was a success it was only a stepping stone. The real success of the meeting will depend on what happens in the future and a letter will be formed by members of the three clubs to proceed with the study of this project.

SPEAKING DATE SET

Do Not Blame Shocks if Car Bounces

By EUGENE B. MILHOE

Don't put the blame on shocks and springs when your car seems to bounce along or vibrate as if all roads were corrugated. The trouble might be a lot-simpler — and cheaper.

Too much tire pressure, for example, can transform that soft, smooth ride into a jarring fort — nor good car control and runaway economy — when wheel balance and alignment are long overdue for correction.

Of course, underinflation is not always a cut-and-dried affair. Some complaints are pretty difficult to pinpoint. For example, what could seem to be a case of shudders due to a wheel or brake condition might be finally traced to the drive line, where worn universal joints or a bent shaft are involved. Rear axle trouble is another possibility to keep in mind.

From H. W: "Whenever I add oil to my '56 model, it takes a good five minutes before a quart can be pumped in."

The crankcase ventilating system is clogged. Check for restricted oil intake and/or outlet pipe openings.

R. G. writes: "My car is a well-kept '55 with a automatic transmission. Lately, it's been stalling — whenever I pull my foot off the gas to make a sudden stop."

Your car is equipped with a device to slow down throttle closing. Sometimes the anti-stall unit isn't working.

L. T. asks: "If crankcase oil level is low, but more than enough to lubricate engine parts, would heavy-grade lifters become noisy?"

When oil is low, the pump may take in air and deliver it to the lifters, causing valves to seat noisily.

Too much tire pressure, for example, can transform that soft, smooth ride into a jarring ordeal — as if you were rolling along on four wheels of solid rubber. Excessive tires, and one or more with different type threads can bring on the shakes and will steering and tire looseness and wear.

And, you just can't expect perfection in the way of driving comfort — nor good car control and runaway economy — when wheel balance and alignment are long overdue for correction.

From S. B.: "Why knock the red dash lights that signal when engine temperature has reached a high level than taking your eyes off the road every minute to check a temperature gauge reading."

But by the time the dash signal light, the warning is too late . . . engine temperature has already hit the danger zone.

Hees Says He Was Indiscreet But Committed No Impropriety

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—George Hees, former Conservative trade minister, has conceded in sworn testimony that he was indiscreet in meeting Gerda Munsinger but has declared he committed no impropriety.

The transcript of Mr. Hees' testimony before the Munsinger inquiry was made public Friday at the request of his lawyer.

Mr. Hees said he met Mrs. Munsinger four times—a first meeting of five or 10 minutes at a party, two lunches in Ottawa and a dinner in Montreal.

He said Mrs. Munsinger had called him twice to ask him to take her to lunch. On the Montreal occasion, he had telephoned her.

DENIES CLAIM

Mr. Hees said he had never helped Mrs. Munsinger to get a job in the Canadian embassy in Bonn as has been alleged.

E. A. Goodman, Mr. Hees's lawyer asked:

"In your association with this woman, Mr. Hees, was there any incident of indecency or impropriety or any other type of incident whatsoever that you know would put you in public contempt or make you vulnerable to blackmail attempts?"

Mr. Hees: "No, there was not."

J. L. O'Brien, commission counsel, asked whether Mr. Hees agreed that "a certain amount of indiscretion was involved by a person in public life accepting some of Mrs. Munsinger's statements to him at face value.

Mr. Hees: "Well, looking back on it now, I think that I would agree with you. I think, looking back now, that it was a mistake on my part."

AGREE INDISCREET

Mr. O'Brien also asked: "Would you agree, Mr. Hees, that it would be, talking of discretion, a piece of indiscretion for a minister to carry on a illicit sexual relationship with a prostitute?"

Mr. Hees: "Very good."

Mr. O'Brien: "And would you agree that it would be even more indiscreet if this prostitute had a record of espionage?"

Mr. Hees: "Yes, I would agree very much so."

Mr. O'Brien: "Would you agree that in these circumstances it is opportune for blackmail is very apparent?"

Mr. Hees: "If the person concerned was carrying on an illicit affair with somebody I certainly agree."

Earlier, Mr. O'Brien asked: "When did you first learn that she was a prostitute?"

Mr. Hees: "From the report Mr. Goodman showed me in his office a few days ago."

Mr. Hees also said he knew Gerda and her ex-husband Munsinger's alleged background as a Communist spy.

CALLED RICKY

Mr. Hees said he first met Mrs. Munsinger under the name Ricky at a Conservative dinner in Montreal in the fall of 1958. They had talked for five or 10 minutes.

The had called him later in Ottawa on two occasions and they had gone to lunch.

Later still, he was staying overnight in Montreal and called her to have dinner at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel.

Mr. O'Brien: "Where had you secured her telephone number in Montreal?"

Mr. Hees: "She gave me her telephone number when I had lunch with her the first time in Ottawa and said if I was ever in Montreal to give her a call."

Mr. O'Brien: "Not being one of those fortunate people who attract invitations of this kind, do you find it rather unusual that a person whom you had met casually in Montreal would call you up in Ottawa and invite you to lunch?"

Mr. Hees: "Well, she did not invite me to lunch."

Mr. O'Brien: "She invited you to take her to lunch."

Mr. Hees: "She suggested perhaps we might have lunch. I think perhaps Europeans are more outgoing in that respect than we North Americans."

HE'S QUERIED

Mr. Hees was asked whether he was aware of cabinet directives on security which apply to persons having classified information.

He replied that he does not know whether he read specific paragraphs in that regard.

"In my tenure of office as a privy councilor, I believe that I always carried out my duty in that regard to the best of my ability."

He also said he agrees that any continuing doubt of loyalty or reliability where national security is involved must be resolved in favor of the state.

Mr. Justice Wishart Spence, heading the inquiry, suggested at one point that it must have been plain to Mr. Hees that Mrs. Munsinger desired a closer acquaintanceship. Mr. Hees might have tried to find out more about her.

Mr. Hees said he had no reason to believe she was not a respectable person.

Mr. Hees testified that when he took Mrs. Munsinger to dinner in Montreal and called for her to have dinner at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel.

Mr. O'Brien: "Where had you met her telephone number in Montreal?"

Mr. Hees: "She gave me her telephone number when I had lunch with her the first time in Ottawa and said if I was ever in Montreal to give her a call."

Mr. O'Brien: "Not being one of those fortunate people who attract invitations of this kind, do you find it rather unusual that a person whom you had met casually in Montreal would call you up in Ottawa and invite you to lunch?"

changed to protect the province's federal representation.

He also objected to a proposal to split Regina and Saskatoon in two ridings each, all of them including large farm areas. Urban and rural areas had different problems and needed separate representation.

IT'S 'ILLOGICAL'

The new constituencies had no basis in historical fact. His own riding of Prince Albert had been enlarged in an illogical way.

Mr. Fulton said the proposed B.C. riding of Coast-Chilcotin would combine the Queen Charlotte Islands with the interior coastal communities Bella Bella, separated by 300 miles.

The proposed Okanagan-Kootenay riding was a huge horseshoe circling several small constituencies.

Mr. Stanfield (L—Vancouver Burrard), whose riding would disappear, complained that the B.C. map seemed to have been designed by a computer. New Democratic and Social Credit MPs also criticized the B.C. commission.

After the four - day debate ends Wednesday, the Commons record will be sent to the 10 commissioners for reconsideration. The commissions are free to accept or reject the MPs' suggestions.

After a 30-day interval, the commissions will file their final reports, which will become law at the next federal election.

Current representation in the Commons is based on the 1951 census and the population of ridings ranges from 13,000 in Iles de la Madeleine, Que., to 300,000 in Toronto's York-Scarborough.

Fire Destroys Coal Ship in Nfld. Harbor

BONAVISTA, Nfld. (CP)—The Vagabond Prince, a 300-ton coal ship out of Halifax, was destroyed by fire in this eastern Newfoundland port early today.

Reports said an explosion occurred aboard the vessel while the eight-man crew was asleep, but only the cook was injured. He was taken to hospital with minor hand burns.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Our beloved Yankees are getting lots of print these days but not exactly the kind they appreciate.

Last place!

Two victories out of 13 games!

Come on, somebody, wake me up out of this nightmare.

It must be a scheme to get all those Yankee-haters on our side. Everybody loves the Mets and the Bruins, so obviously if the Yankees wind up near the bottom for a year or two, instead of in their usual lofty loppoit perch, they will become "the people's choice".

Seriously, the Yankees are not that bad a club and we are confident they will yet be up there battling for one of the top three spots come September. Of course we said that last year too, so don't rush to your nearest bookie.

Someone else worried about the matter answers to the name of Mrs. Babe Ruth.

"I live and die with the Yankees," widow of the greatest baseball slugger of them all told a reporter the other day.

"They were the Babe's team. They are also mine", she said.

"I am also keenly interested in Willie May's home run campaign. He's the only present player with even a chance of reaching the Babe's lifetime total of 714, but I think it's very remote.

"He would have to hit 40 home runs a year for the next five years", she added.

Mays has a total of 511, matching the all-time National League record of Mel Ott.

Ruth, the great Yankee slugger and outfielder, died of throat cancer in 1948 at the age of 53.

Mrs. Ruth, described as a bouncy little woman, is very active in the Babe Ruth leagues for players between the ages of 13 and 18.

"We have about 200,000 players in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Australia," she says. "These youngsters would have been dear to the Babe's heart."

* * *

Still with baseball, guess it's time we crawled out on a limb and came up with the name of finish for the American and National baseball leagues.

After all, it doesn't cost us a thing and it gives the "sports-uneducated" news editors on our staff a chance to howl if we should have one or two of the clubs in the wrong spots. It could hapen you know. Even our bogs, George H. Carver picked the wrong team once. (No charge, chief).

So-o-o, in the American, it will be Baltimore, Detroit, New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Minnesota, California, Boston, Washington and Kansas City.

In the National, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Atlanta, St. Louis, Chicago, Houston and New York.

O.K., Doc, I'll go quietly.

From across the Bay waters comes word that the Amelisburg Centennial Sports Committee is attempting to organize a minor softball association.

They are holding four meetings, with all children up to the age of 14, and all parents requested to attend.

The Consecon district and Carry Place meets this afternoon, at 2.30 in Consecon Legion Hall; Albury and Redmerdale, Tuesday, May 3, 7.00, in Redmerville Church Hall; Rossmore, on Saturday, May 7, 2.00, in Rossmore United Church; and Amelisburg, also May 7, in Amelisburg Town Hall, at 2.30.

Sport for youngsters is a fine thing, you parents, so get out and lend a hand.

Meanwhile, here in town, the Belleville Minor Baseball Association's coaches' and players' training school is in full progress today and Sunday afternoon.

It is being held at the Park Dale Community Centre, with interspaad games winding up the affair tomorrow afternoon.

A number of the city and district's baseball men are donating their time to help the kids. The instructors and the kids would be happy to see you interested enough to be there.

Sarnia Wins Jr. 'B' Title

SARNIA (CP) — Sarnia Legionaires overcame an early two-goal deficit to defeat Toronto Westdale 6-3 and win the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior B championship Friday night.

Sarnia won the best-of-seven series 4-2, winning three games on home ice.

Captain Pete Mara and Tom Ostrander each scored twice for Sarnia and Les Hoskin and Don Gordon scored single goals. Steve King and Tom Foxcroft scored for Toronto.

Coaches Agree On Beliveau's Value

By AL McNEIL

DETROIT (CP) — This year marks the 10th anniversary of Jean Beliveau's first appearance on a Stanley Cup team. Montreal Canadiens are hopeful he'll celebrate the occasion by losing on another.

* * *

JEAN BELIVEAU

Since 1955-56, the tall, smooth-skating Canadien centre and captain has led his club to six Stanley Cups. Last year he won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the best performer in the playoffs.

However, this season's playoffs have been a different story for Beliveau and he's aware of it.

Detroit Red Wings, who lead the best - of - seven series 3-1, were poison to him until Thursday night's game, when Beliveau got a goal and an assist in Montreal's 4-2 victory.

In notching his first points of the playoffs against the club that Canadiens' star also moved into a third - place tie with former line-mate Bernie Geoffrion in the all-time Stanley Cup scoring statistics.

Both has 115 points. Geoffrion, now retired, forged 56 goals and had 59 assists in 127 games while Beliveau has 39 goals and 62 assists in 106 games.

HOWE LEADS

Gordie Howe, the Wings' great right winger, is the playoff scoring leader with 118 points, including 65 goals. Maurice Richard, another former Canadien, is in second spot with 126 points, including a record 82 goals.

Beliveau, who scored eight goals and eight assists in 13 playoff games last season, now has three goals and five assists in seven games this year.

Coach Toe Blake says Beliveau played a large part in Montreal's victory Thursday and Detroit coach Sid Abel agrees.

"The Beliveau goal was the one that hurt us," Abel said.

"When he scored that goal just before the end of the first period you could see the lacas open all along the bench."

Beliveau said Canadiens differed in Thursday night's game in that they regained their finish around the net. But Abel said Montreal hasn't found a weakness in goalie Roger Crozier.

"If Crozier has any weaknesses, we'd have found out about it and all the other clubs would have been shooting at it by now," Abel said. "What's more, if he had one that bad he wouldn't be playing in the league right now."

Neither club worked Friday as Blake, talking a page from Abel's book on relaxation between games, left his team off to the races.

The day off for both teams came as a result of preparations at Detroit's Stadium for Sunday's fourth game. It will be televised in the United States in color on the NBC network as well as the regular black-and-white telecast by the CBC in Canada.

Blake said Friday he plans no big changes while forecasts that right-winger Claude Larose will sit out his second game. In his place, the Montreal coach will dress Leon Rochefort from Quebec Aces of the American League, who joined forces with Henri Richard and Dave Balon to form an effective combination in Thursday's win.

The Red Wings will likely dress Murray Hall in place of left-winger Ab MacDonald who is nursing a sore shoulder.

Oust Shawinigan
Generals Play For Memorial Cup

SHAWINIGAN, Que. (CP) — Oshawa Generals downed Shawinigan Bruins 4-2 Friday night for a 3-1 win of the best-of-five Eastern Canada Memorial Cup final.

The Generals will meet the winners of the Estevan Bruins-Edmonton Oil Kings series for the cup, symbol of junior hockey supremacy in Canada.

The Generals scored three goals in the third period to clinch the victory.

Bobby Orr, Danny O'Shea, Bill Heindl and Chris Hayes were the Oshawa marksmen. Normand Pepin scored both Shawinigan goals.

Pepin put the Bruins ahead 1-0 at 6:11 of the second period when he scored unassisted. However, Orr tied the count with 43 seconds remaining in the period while teammate Nick Beverley was serving a minor penalty.

Heindl made it 3-1 for Oshawa at 6:42 and Hayes clinched the Generals' victory with his goal at 12:35.

Pepin closed out the scoring with his second goal with less than two minutes remaining, while Orr was serving a minor penalty.

NHL Re: New Clubs
Bosses Disagree On Stocking

DETROIT (CP) — National Hockey League clubs found themselves far apart Friday on any what formula they will use to stock six clubs entering the league for the 1967-68 season.

League president Clarence Campbell, who had a day-long session with club owners, general managers and personnel directors, said:

He said no details of the plan will be released until the new clubs have been advised of any decisions made.

A further meeting is scheduled for Montreal Tuesday, May 3, when representatives of the six new clubs will attend. The final decision on the formula will be made by the current clubs only—Detroit, Montreal, Boston, New York, Chicago and Toronto.

PAID $2,000,000

The new clubs paid $2,000,000 for the franchises. This sum included rights to players drafted under the formula now being conceived.

"What we're trying to do now is fill in numbers," Campbell said, referring to the number of players each of the current clubs will be forced to relinquish.

"We still don't know whether the number of players to be protected by each club will be five or 15, as all we have established ourselves far apart Friday on are the mechanics of the thing.

"We hope to come up with a formula that will satisfy all, but we'll be surprised if we've reached an agreed conclusion by the June annual meetings."

Montreal general manager Sam Pollock, commissioned by the league to study and report on the problem, said it is reasonable that a solution be reached before the June meeting in Montreal as the league doesn't want to be faced with the problem in addition to its regular draft chores.

Campbell was not hopeful that a solution can be reached by that time.

Hull Dinner Date Changed

"The best laid plans of mice and men . . ."

A day after final plans for the Bobby Hull Testimonial Dinner were announced, it has become necessary to change the date.

Ed Lee, a member of the dinner committee, said last night that the affair will now be held one day later, on Thursday, May 12, not Wednesday, May 11.

"All other arrangements remain the same as far as times, place, etc., concerned and we have checked it out with Bobby. He is most agreeable to May 12," said Lee.

He said there had been a mixup in dates at St. Michael's Auditorium, where the dinner is being held. "The Auditorium is being used that night, apparently previously committed, and there is nothing we can do about it," Lee added.

The dinner is being put on by the Belleville Alhambra Isiga Caravan and the Belleville Shrine Club, at $10 per plate, with the money going to crippled and retarded children.

Lee apologized for any inconvenience caused by the date mixup and expressed hope that all interesting would enjoy the night to do so.

Tickets are available from Shrine and Alhambra members and from downtown merchants Bud Gill and Gerry O'Connor. The trophy which will be presented to Hull is on display at O'Connor's Jewel Box.

Oil Kings Grab 2-0 Victory

EDMONTON (CP) — Winners and losers accepted congratulations without a blush here Friday after Edmonton Oil Kings held off Estevan Bruins for a 2-0 victory in the fifth game of the best-of-seven Western Canada junior hockey final.

"It was the game we had to win," said Edmonton coach Ray Kinsasewich. "It would have been tough to go into Estevan trailing in the series."

The victory gave Kings a 3-2 lead. The series resumes Sunday in Estevan. If a seventh game is necessary, it will be played Tuesday night.

The survivor meets Oshawa Generals in the Memorial Cup final.

Al Hamilton drilled a powerplay goal past Caley early in the first period. Hamilton also set up Galen Head for Kings' other goal, late in the third period.

Hamilton's two points gave him nine in the last three games.

Frank Robinson has replaced Georges Strickland as the No. 1 driver in the American League.

Strickland drove manager Birdie Tebbetts to and from the ballpark during Cleveland's 10-game unbeaten streak that ended Friday night when Chicago White Sox defeated the Indians 4-1.

Robinson, meanwhile, steered Baltimore to its eighth straight victory, driving in the runs with a triple and a home run in the Orioles' 6-1 victory over Detroit Tigers.

Using Strickland, an Indian coach, as a chauffeur was part of the routine Tebbetts refused to change as long as the Indians were winning. He also passed up barber shops and ate breakfast at the same table in the same hotel with the same waitress serving him.

Strickland earned the transportation job after driving Tebbetts back to his hotel following the Indians' opening-game victory. And every time they drove to the hotel they made an illegal turn.

ROBINSON IS LEGAL

There's nothing illegal about Robinson, even though the other AL teams would like to think so.

His two hits against the Tigers raised his average to .474, and he maintained his streak of having scored in every game by increasing that total to 15. He also has five homers and 20 runs batted-in.

Robinson, a starter acquisition from Cincinnati, helped the Orioles pull even with the Indians at 10 victories in 11 games, the best records in the makers.

The only other scheduled AL game—Minnesota at Washington—was rained out.

Gary Peters and Bob Locker scattered eight hits in Chicago's victory over Cleveland. Peters hit a home run before leaving for a pinch hitter in the seventh inning. The pinch hitter, Danny Cater, drove in a run with a sacrifice fly.

Robinson's two - run triple drove Detroit starter Bill Monbouquette from the mound and brought Terry Fox on. Boog Powell then climaxed the seven-run outburst with a two-run homer. Wally Bunker gave up 10 hits, but the Tigers scored only on Don Wert's homer in the fifth.

"Mr. Bowling" McKenzie Tourney Leader

Jim McKenzie, two-time winner of the annual "Mr. Bowling" five-pin tournament here, is making a serious bid for his third championship.

McKenzie topped a field of 34 in the two-day tournament's first shift last night with a sparkling ten-game score of 2681.

Play in the tourney, the 15th annual resumed today at noon with approximately 60 bowlers scheduled to compete this afternoon. Play will be completed around five o'clock today.

McKenzie first won the championship in 1955 and repeated in 1962.

His score of 2681 last night was 79 better than the second place man, Art Lockwood, of Kingston. Lockwood, tourney winner in 1964, rolled 2602.

Bill Whitton, Deseronto, held third place with 2471, followed by Don Smith, Kingston, 2456, Jack McEachern, Kingston, 2423, and Ron Elliott, Belleville, with 2401.

High singles last night went to Leo St. Louis, of Belleville, with 356, Les Tyrick, with 347, Smith and Harvey Oakley, of Brampton, with 343.

Tie At Top

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ray Sadecki has always been a slow starter. The only trouble last year was his slow start lasted all season.

But the St. Louis Cardinals' left-hander has junked his April jinx with two strong performances, the latest a five-hit, 5-1 victory over San Francisco Giants Friday night.

A 9-game winner when the Cardinals won the National League pennant two years ago, Sadecki made one of the biggest nosedives in baseball history in 1965. His record was 6-15.

"I can't explain why I've been a slow starter in the past," he says. "It's just one of those things."

It was no different even during his 20-victory season, when he also started out of his first triumph until May 11.

ALLOWED ONE RUN

Sadecki, 25, allowed only one earned run against Pittsburgh in his first start, then came back and matched that against the Giants while recording his first complete game.

He also throttled Willie Mays, who has been looking for a record-breaking 512th homer since Sunday. Mays returned to the Giants' line-up after sitting out one game with the flu but went hitless in three trips.

Mays also'd-lost his NL homer lead to Hank Aaron, whose seventh homer gave Atlanta Braves a 4-3 victory over Houston Astros. In other games, Los Angeles Dodgers edged Cincinnati Reds 3-2, New York Mets downed Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2 in 11 innings and Philadelphia Phillies whipped Chicago Cubs 5-1.

The Cardinals belted Bob Shaw and Ron Herbel for six consecutive singles and four runs in the third inning. The damage was done by Lou Brock, Alex Johnson, Curt Flood, Tim McCarver, Charley Smith and Gaylord Perry.

Johnson also hit a ninth-inning homer.

The Astros pulled into a tie with the Braves in the ninth inning when pinch hitter Ron Brand singled following walks to John Bateman and Joe Morgan. Aaron lanced it around again with one swing in the bottom of the ninth, hitting a two-out shot over the left field fence.

SPOILED A SHUTOUT

Dodger pitcher Claude Osteen had his Reds shut out on two hits and led 2-0 on Lou Johnson's homer when Cincinnati scored twice in the ninth on a walk and singles by Vada Pinson and Tony Perez. The Dodgers then won it in their ball on a double by Nate Oliver, walks to Jim Gilliam and Wes Parker and Ron Fairly's two-out single.

The Mets broke a 1-1 tie with four runs in the 11th as Chuck Hiller and Roy McMillan each collected key singles. Hiller's broke a 1-1 tie and McMillan's drove in two runs. The other run crossed on a wild pitch by Al McBean. The Pirates, short out for six innings by Bob Gardner, had tied the score on a single by Jim Pagliaroni and Bob Bailey's double.

Jim Bunning allowed nine hits but went the distance for the Phillies, running his scoreless inning streak to 20 before Adolfo Phillips supplied the Cubs' run with a homer in the seventh.

Beavers Take Lead Home

GUELPH (CP) — Sherbrooke Beavers seem to be following the same script in the Eastern Pro Finals they used to oust Morrisburg Combines in the semi-finals two weeks ago.

The Beavers return to home ice Sunday with a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven final series after edging Guelph Regals 4-3 here Friday night. At one stage they trailed in the series 2-1 and in the semi-finals they were down 3-2 before returning home to eliminate Morrisburg 4-3.

Buoyed by Serge Aubrey's key saves in goal and Bill Dutton's two-goal performance, the Beavers staved off a Guelph attack in the dying minutes of the third period.

Rejean Rieber scored what proved to be the winner unassisted early in the third period just after Aubrey made a close-in stop on Butch Martin of Guelph. Jean Maletie scored the other Sherbrooke goal while Ernest Shaw, Clyde Loutsk and Keith Worrall shared the Guelph

Shaw [illegible] the lead Maletie [illegible] on shot at 4:4 second of the second period before Sherbrooke went to 3-1 when pre's second goal on a passout from Cartier.

Lachut cut the lead to 3-2 by sliding a pass from Shaw past Hurley. Guelph played the final 32 seconds of the second period two men short but Sherbrooke failed to take advantage of the situation.

Butch Martin, the Guelph playing coach, demanded a penalty shot from referee Percy Shore after he was pulled down from behind by George Roy on a clear-cut breakaway. Roy escaped with a tripping minor and no shot was awarded.

Sherbrooke levelled 42 shots at Hurley while Aubrey faced 27 in the Beaver nets. Guelph dominated the third period with a 12-8 shots-on-goal margin.

Shore, who needed a police escort to escape two irate Guelph fans while leaving the ice, handed out 13 minor penalties, eight of them to Guelph.

A seventh game, if necessary, will be played in Sherbrooke Monday. The winner of the series meets the winner of the Selkirk Fishermen - Drumheller Miners western final.

"The Great Race" Gags all the Way

Shakespeare once suggested "laugh yourself into stitches" and "The Great Race" sows up howt after howt as the Warner Bros.' comedy hit, in Technicolor and Panivision, scores its mad, merry way across the Belle Theatre screen with Tony Curtis, as the noble hero whose costume botches his purity of soul and heart, and Jack Lemmon, the dark - draped villain with a heart and mind as black as his deeds. "The Great Race" pits the stars into a hilarious auto race around the world, from New York to Paris by way of Bering Strak, for fame, fortune . . . and the winning of the sophistication of suffragette reporter Natalie Wood.

Under the direction of Blake Edwards, the gags run a zany course, from custard pie throwing sequences that would bring cheers from Mack Sennett, to hilarious travelogue of Boss Snively, in the desert and unstable ice floes. Through this madcap course, Curtis and Lemmon keep a steady, and sometimes unsteady course aided and abetted in their lunatic shenanigans by Keenan Wynn and Peter Falk. Keeping the pace on a hectically scorning level is the musical score penned by Academy award winner Henry Mancini.

"The Great Race" will be shown Saturday continuously from 1.00 p.m. to midnight. Taking in the show on Sunday from 1.30 p.m. at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Swingin' Down the Lanes

WITH JIM McKENZIE

If you are reading this Saturday afternoon, there is still time to see the final games in the "Mr. Bowling" Tournament at the Bowl-O-Drome. Today's competitors are expected to complete their ten games around 5:30 this afternoon. If you can't make it to the lanes, there will be a final report, direct from the Bowl-O-Drome, over CJBQ, following the 6:00 p.m. news.

One week from today, CJBQ will be the scene of Glass Classic that will be holding the bowling world's attention. Twenty-four top bowlers from the Belleville district area will be playing in the match play, all day and Saturday afternoon, to decide the six semi-finalists. The surviving six will compete for the Grand Cup, starting at 7:00 p.m. The first Belleville and D.I strict Bowling Play Singles of the year should be declared by 9:00 p.m.

We mustn't forget that there are many bowlers, both male and female, who are ardent fans of bowling but not yet skilled enough to compete in the company on the top echelon. On Saturday, May 14th, the men with averages if 210 and less have the opportunity of competing in a tournament, which could be called an intermediate classification. The same day, the ladies have their Maytime Tournament and this will be open to all lady bowlers no matter what their seasonal average was. So there is actually a tournament for just about anyone wanting a taste of tense competition.

Now is the time for all bowlers to look back and reflect on the season that is past. Are you satisfied with your progress? If not, this would be a good time to work on your shortcomings and don't be afraid to ask for help. It's a well known fact that the hope of straightening out their game. After only a few weeks of experimenting, many have decided that spot bowling could help solve their problems. The basis idea, is that a right handed bowler shoot place his right foot on . . . or in line with . . . the centre dot and on approach, then roll the ball directly over the centre dot, located about 15 feet down the lane from the foul line. If this procedure consistently is not the case, then it either to the right or left of that centre dot. The ball should roll be thrown directly across the centre dart on the lane. If the ball is delivered w1th the right foot side to the left, an adjustment in the angle should be made to the left about one inch strike pocket . . . theoretically, that is.

Now the right foot to the right of that centre dot should send the ball into the left pocket. Moving it to the left should send the ball into the right pocket. It is as simple as that.

How, if you follow the above instructions perfectly, there will be no need to continue with these instructions. No need to advise how the corner pins can be easily picked off via the spot bowling system. Because. If you follow the above information to the "T", you'll end up with 12 consecutive strikes -with game (would you believe six?) However, if it doesn't quite work out that way, we may continue with the instruction next week.

Peyton Place to Be Made Younger, More Colorful

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Whither Peyton Place? Next season will find it younger, more colorful and reduced in quantity by one third.

This is the report from one of the youthful members of the king-size cast of the unending ABC-TV soap opera. His name is Chuck Connors and he plays Norman Harrington.

"The accent seems to be on youth for the coming season," he remarked. "They tell us that 35 to 40 per cent of our audience is composed of teen-agers, so I guess that the teen-age hand rules the TV set.

"The new members that are being added to the cast—Susan Oliver, Lana Wood, Gary Hamer and Stephen Oliver—are all young and the older actors who have left the cast aren't being replaced.

"The young viewers seem to be interested in the problems of people their own age. Of course, they're still interested in the stars who have been in Peyton Place from the beginning—as mother and father images. . . . We're going to color, starting in September," he reported, "and that should help us.

"Next season we go back to the twice-a-week schedule, and that should help us, too. I think it was a mistake to go on a third night, especially on Friday, when people have dates, football games and all kinds of things to do."

Copper and Uranium Stocks Feature Trading on Markets

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Base metals, spurred by copper and uranium stocks, featured trading on Canada's stock markets this week.

Noranda Mines Ltd. sparked the copper advance Wednesday when it announced an increase in its overseas price of copper to 81¼ cents a pound (U.S.).

However, the company didn't increase its domestic price. Hudson Bay Mining followed the change.

Some analysts expect the price of domestic copper will soon rise. They say because of the higher world prices, domestic producers will be in a better bargaining position to raise the price which is 45 cents a pound.

At Toronto, Noranda reached a peak of 56 before closing with a gain of 1¼ to 53¾. Among other copper producers, Hudson Bay gained 1¼ to 85 while Falconbridge ¼ to 99¾.

Uranium continued to sparkle as many investors expect shortages in the metal in the 1970s. Rio Algom moved up 2¼ to 24½ and Denison ⅛ to 48⅝.

Trading was moderate as volume totalled 21,221,354 shares compared with 22,026,886 last week.

Industrials were down for the second consecutive week. Most of the decline came Thursday when investors took their cue from New York where the market suffered one of its heaviest losses of the year.

The decline at New York was attributed to news of an anti-trust suit against General Motors, charging that it tried to ban the sale of Chevrolets through discount houses in the Los Angeles area.

Steels fell hardest as the steel index dropped 1.19 to 128.35. Dofasco was off 1⅛ to 25¼, Algoma 1¼ to 63¾ and Sicleo ¼ to 24½.

Banks lost ground with Royal off 1⅞ to 74½, Toronto-Dominion and Nova Scotia 1 each to 62 and 69½, Montreal ¼ to 60½ and Imperial-Commerce ⅜ to 63¾.

On the plus side, Canadian British Aluminum A gained 3¼ to 28, Anthes A 1⅛ to 20½, Levy 1¼ to 19, and Moore Corp. and Montreal Locomotive 1¼ each to 85¼ and 16¾.

Western oils retreated. The decline reflects a slowdown in drilling activity resulting from the spring thaw in many areas.

Pacific Petroleum slid ¼ to 23¼, Central Del Rio ¼ to 11½, Home Oil A ⅛ to 18¼ and Canadian Superior ¼ to 22. Scurry Rainbow bucked the trend, gaining 3¼ to 33½.

Russian Fishing Boats Cause W. Coast Concern

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Are Russian fishing boats operating a few miles off the Pacific shoreline fair competitors or pirates destroying American fish supplies?

The answer seems to be they are some of both.

They are breaking no law in fishing beyond the three-mile territorial limit. But their method of fishing indicates they will stay until they have depleted the supply, then move elsewhere.

How long it will take the estimated 30 to 67 Russian vessels operating from British Columbia to northern California to accomplish this no one knows.

Robert Schoning, director of the Oregon fish commission, says: "We simply don't know what's out there. To be precise, we can't tell if a catch of a million pounds is going to jeopardize our source or not even make a dent in it."

The Russians are harvesting ocean perch—one of more than 20 varieties of rockfish found off the coast. Fishermen sometimes call it rosefish.

COMPARE HAULS

Oregon - based trawlers took 13,500,000 pounds of ocean perch in 1965. By comparison, Russian boats may be taking from 600,000 to 1,500,000 pounds a day.

Individuals campaigning to conserve the fish supply include Gov. Mark O. Hatfield, who has called for "agressive action of the federal government . . . to secure compliance with adequate conservation practices."

Hatfield supported a resolution at the western governors' conference last week in Las Vegas to extend the territorial limit from three to 12 miles.

Under Secretary Stewart Udall told the conference United States interests are best served by "restrictive, rather than expansive" off-shore limits.

The Russian embassy in Washington said: "The Russian fleet does it, the French do it, the Germans do it. We don't find anything special or extraordinary about it."

Kelud Volcano In East Java Still Violent

JAKARTA (Reuter) — Kelud volcano in East Java is still in violent eruption, reports reaching here said today.

So far lava and dense ash clouds have killed more than 50 persons, with at least 100 still unaccounted for.

Highways have been cut and bridges swept away in tides of molten rock, and mass evacuation is in full swing, reported the official Antara news agency.

Unpaid Taxi Operator Resents 'Free-Riders'

DEAR DORIS: Thank you for those words of advice to "free riders!"

I have a car and I belong to a club which meets once a week and sometimes has other outings. At one time I found myself being used as a regular unpaid taxi for three of the other members, none of whom apparently had the word "thank you" in their vocabularies.

If any of them had ever offered to pay for gas I would have passed out from the shock.

Yet another gentleman belonging to this club did offer to pay me but fare if I would serve as a door-to-door taxi service. I would have had to go a long way out of my way but he was a little puzzled when I said "No."

DORIS CLARE

My advice to imposed-on car owners is to buy your gas when you have these free-loaders in the car and tell them straight out they are expected to chip in! — TAXI TACTICS.

DEAR TAXI: Agreed — but use a little tact. It's barely possible an unwelcome hitch-hiker feels embarrassed about offering you money.

And, to any free-riders reading this, I'd suggest you overcome your bashfulness and insist on filling up the tank once in a while.

* * * * *

DEAR DORIS: I'm interested in becoming an airline stewardess. What qualities must I have? — STUDENT.

* * * * *

DEAR STUDENT: A consuming interest in people, for one thing. Good cheer, poise, joy in giving service, physical stamina, for a few others. I have yet to meet a successful stewardess who isn't in love with her job.

Send me a stamped envelope with your right name on it (ten cents, and I'll send you a leaflet about "A Career Clouds."

Helicopters Proved Efficiency

By BOB MacKENZIE

BARDUFOSS, Norway (CP) It was a cold, blustery night in northern Norway with temperatures below zero and wild snow squalls whipping through the mountains.

But the 1st Transport Helicopter Platoon of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps proved that Arctic weather can be conquered.

Three CH - 113 Voyageur helicopters carried 300 soldiers and their equipment across the mountains in NATO's mid-March Exercise Winter Express, flying 18 sorties ranging from 18 to 25 miles.

"We did it in 3½ hours," said a tired but obviously happy Maj. Harry Reid, commanding officer of the platoon.

"Frankly, I wasn't too sure how it would work out. The only time we tried a similar move before was in Labrador last winter when we moved a single company (about 100 men) during an exercise.

"But that was in daylight."

Capt. Ray Manning of Carrying Place, Ont., and his 18-man maintenance section gave the helicopter platoon an amazing 91-per-cent serviceability rating.

"There are about two hours a day of compulsory maintenance on each chopper but we had them ready to go when they were needed," Capt. Manning said.

Great Ontario Adventure Vacations

Champlain Country

Ontario's Champlain Country is high, wide and handsome, from the historic Ottawa River to island-dotted Georgian Bay. The forests are Olympian, the rock outcrops gargantuan, the river valleys gouged out by ancient glaciers.

On a Champlain Country Adventure you'll understand the heroic inspiration that led Samuel de Champlain westward to Lake Huron more than three centuries ago. As well, you'll discover historical interests, natural splendours and an infinite variety of holiday pleasures.

In the nation's capital there's pomp and panoply, art treasures, museums and cosmopolitan crowds. You can camp and canoe through Algonquin Park's 3,000 square miles of unspoiled wilderness.

At Sudbury's nickel mines you'll see smelter chimneys towering more than 600 feet high. In the crystal clear waters of the Kawartha Lakes, and in the popular Haliburton Highlands, there are thousands of fun places and sun places, with swimming, boating and fishing galore—and accommodation of every kind.

There'll be plenty to satisfy everyone when you take your family on a Champlain Country Adventure Vacation. Make a start on your planning now, by mailing this coupon today.
